Those who attend are saved from evil places of amusement, vicious literature is superseded, healthy recreation is promoted, educational improvement is secured, and, above all, they are brought under a kindly Christian influence; for while the work is quite unsectarian, we seek to carry on all the agencies upon Christian principles, and to promote, not only the physical and mental, but also the moral and spiritual welfare of the lads.

Since the opening of the Institute, nearly a thousand lads have been benefited, but the work has long been seriously hindered for want of accommodation, and

LARGER PREMISES ARE AN URGENT NECESSITY.

In these circumstances the Committee felt constrained to enlarge their borders. After two years' anxious and prayerful search, they have at length secured a large and eligible plot of freehold land, with frontage in the main road. It adjoins the East London railway-station, Whitechapel, and is very near the existing Institute. Here they desire to erect a large and commodious Working Lads' Institute for East London. This it is proposed to put up in two sections. Section 1 will provide suitable refreshment and reading-rooms; five class-rooms; some comfortable dormitories, specially intended for lads from the country; housekeeper's apartments, &c. Section 2, lecture-hall to seat 500; a swimming-bath, 50 by 20 ft.; gymnasium, &c. Such an institute will accommodate about 1000 members. Who can estimate the good which, with God's blessing, it may be to the lads of London for all time?

The estimated cost (including £1,950 for the freehold land) is £8,450, towards which the officers and committee and some friends have promised £2,500. The designs are all ready, but a further sum of £2,000 must be raised before the building can be commenced.

We have now reached a solemn crisis in the work; having done all that we can ourselves financially, we wish to lay the case before the Lord's people. Are there not some of his stewards who will come up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty? To reach and bless the thousands of working lads for whom we plead, who will help to establish this much-needed Working Lads' Institute for East London? Contributions will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Mr. F. A. Bevan, 54, Lombard-street, or myself.

DECENNIAL CONFERENCE IN INDIA.

WOMAN'S WORK IN THE MISSION FIELD.

THERE was a large attendance of ladies, and the honours of the discussion were entirely conceded to them.

Miss HEWLETT, C.M.S., Umritsur, in opening the subject, said: The kind of work that we women are engaged in is at once the most interesting, the most promising, and the most difficult in the Indian Mission field—the most interesting because it takes us into the Zenanas, and in other ways shows us spectacles of human life which are not accessible to other workers; the most promising because it takes us to the side of the sick, the sorrowful, and the disconsolate, and gives us opportunities to touch the heart when it is most susceptible; the most difficult because it has to be accomplished by women unaided, who are weak in themselves, and who have till lately enjoyed few facilities to prepare them for the work. Further, it will be remembered that ours is a double work: we attempt to save the soul as well as relieve the body. So much am I impressed with the responsibilities of my share of the work, that I am often obliged to tell the Saviour of my patients rather than tell my patients of the Saviour. There is a hospital at Umritsur with an average of 125 persons a year who are treated and nursed. The dispensary work has been in operation for nearly three years, and in that time about 9000 cases have been attended to. Mrs. Grimké's text-cards are used as tickets of admission, and in this way thousands of these precious messages are scattered over the city.

Many cases of genuine gratitude are met with. Women of the better classes are needed, who will offer themselves for the work, as they do in England; but they are not yet prepared to do that. All women so employed ought to be decided Christians, and should also know English. The field is so great that thousands of workers of every degree might be employed. There is a sore and pressing need of help, but we shall do all we can until the help comes.

It is difficult in the Zenana work to be faithful to the higher part of our commission on account of the watchfulness of the men. My visits at a house were suddenly stopped the day after I had spoken of Jesus to the sick lady, by a message that she had gone to Lahore. In conclusion, she hoped that the Mission-field might be saved from all lady doctors who were not Christians.

Miss THOBURN, M.E. Church, Lucknow, said that woman's work in India, which began with ragged-schools and orphanages, now includes Zenana teaching, Medical missions, boarding, normal, Sunday, and high schools, homes for the homeless, and every department of Christian work found in any land. Their work is not confined to the Zenanas. The working women are the largest class of women in India. To every one of these women there comes human sorrow, with its awakenings and questionings; they have thoughts of life and death, of sin and responsibility, of destiny and God. A good impression can be made by the workers going out in procession, and separating into the lanes and alleys, speaking to all the women they meet; singing and talking to groups that will gather to hear. Soon the news is carried into the houses, and invitations to enter come from one after another, until a whole neighbourhood is visited.

The native Christians are as anxious as any class of people in the world to have their daughters well educated; but they still have lessons to learn about the evils of child-marriage. We almost daily refuse invitations to enter new houses, because our numbers are insufficient. We are obliged still to employ Hindoo or Mohammedan teachers in our schools, because there are not Christians willing or able to take their places. Unfortunately there is a caste of position and income creeping into the native churches, and taking the place of the old distinctions of birth and blood. Daughters of well-to-do people will not help in Mission work unless they get a salary that will make the work respectable. We need missionary English schools in which the vernacular is well taught, to raise up a generation of Anglo-Indian women who will live as our mothers lived in Europe and America, when they taught the missionary spirit to us.

Mrs. Etherington, B.M.S., Benares, described an evil to be steadily resisted by Missionary Societies, the practice of sending agents to that country who have not the cause of Christ's Kingdom at heart, but are induced by some romantic sentiment, or even a less worthy motive, to offer themselves as missionaries. Some mistakes in the sending out of unsuitable agents are unavoidable, but they should be reduced to a minimum. There is some ground for the imputation that female Missions are simply "Bachelors' Aid Societies," although marriages of the kind referred to sometimes take place under circumstances that cannot be objected to. These remarks apply without much modification to agents who are appointed in India.

THE CHIEF HINDRANCE TO OUR WORK

arises from the customs of the country; the worst of these, beyond all comparison, is the marriage of children. That blight and curse the Government could have put down as easily as it did infanticide, suttee, the exposure of the sick to die, the charakpooja of Bengal, and the crushing of men under the wheels of Juggonath. Suttee destroyed its thousands, but this destroys its ten thousands. The other practices affected men; the victims of this are women and children.

Those of us who have inquired into the social condition of the women of India and who have had ample opportunities for learning how the health, happiness, and general well-being of the people are affected by this custom, must know that of all the evils that ignorance, vice, and tyranny have combined to lay upon the weak and helpless, this is, without exception, the worst. It is, in all but the name, slavery in one of its most degrading forms—of woman to man. I say deliberately that I am aware of nothing in the condition of woman in any age or nation that is worse than it. The plea that religion is so mixed up with it that to seek its removal by legislation would be unjust and impolitic is hardly worth serious consideration. The people themselves do not thus think or speak of it. Tens of thousands of the better classes would be grateful for a law that would tend to destroy the evil. A native writer in a recent article declares that the only determined objection to legislation with regard to this matter would come from the Brahmans, who now reap large harvests from the marriage customs of the people.

There are twenty-one millions of widows in India, and half of them were never wives! Some of these widows have said to me, "Your Government stopped our burning ourselves with the bodies of our husbands, and we are now left without a remedy." Is it any wonder that many of them take their lives in despair; and that a still larger number seek refuge from a life of suffering in a life of sin? We are blessed with and seeks to do justice to man. Will he close his ear to our appeal on behalf of women? To save the millions of India's daughters from the cruelties of child-marriage, and from what child-widowhood means here, will add more lustre to his rule than any system of local self-government or mass education can shed upon it. How can men govern themselves who have not yet given freedom to women? I appeal to this great Conference to resolve to do something to attempt the removal of one of the greatest wrongs that woman has suffered at the hands of man. "Quit you like men." I plead on behalf of twenty millions of helpless widows, and of millions of suffering wives and children, and in his name who said, "Woman, why weepest thou?"

Miss Leslie, Independent Mission, Calcutta, said the work of the Mission with which she is connected was divisible into four kinds: the visitation of native women in hospitals; work among the fallen; the reclamation of Bengallee women addicted to drink; and work among domestic servants, who are so apt to be neglected even by Christian masters and mistresses. Miss Leslie's paper was full of unique, interesting, and encouraging particulars of her work.

Miss Greenfield, American Presbyterian Mission, said: We are told that higher education is to slay Hindooism through its brain, but it has not done so yet. My sisters, you and I, in all our woman's weakness and conscious insufficiency, are here in India to strike the death-blow not at the monster's head but at his heart, and by God's help we shall drain out his life-blood yet! I believe the heart of Hindooism is not in the mystic teaching of the Vedas or Shasters, not in the finer spun philosophy of its modern exponents; not even in the bigoted devotion of its religious leaders; but enshrined in the homes, in the family life and hereditary customs of the people—fed, preserved, and perpetuated by the wives and mothers of India. Therefore, I say, that the Zenana teacher, with her constant personal influence on the family life of her pupils, the lady medical with her double ministry of healing for body and soul, the teacher of girls in Christian and heathen schools, training the future women of India, these all are directing their blows with no uncertain aim at the very hearts of the gigantic forms of ignorance, superstition, and heathenism which have long held despotic sway over this vast empire. Let us in our Master's name lay our hand on the hand that rocks the cradle and tune the lips that sing the lullabies. Let us win the mothers of India for Christ, and the day will not be long deferred when India's sons also shall be brought to the Redeemer's feet.

During the first week in December we held a Ladies' Conference in Lahore, and invited all the lady missionaries of the Punjab. Fifty-two responded, and we sat for five days for five hours a day, besides special Committees, in earnest practical discussion of the many branches of our work in the Punjab alone. The subjects for discussion comprised the following: Day and Boarding Schools—European, Eurasian, Native Christian, Normal, and Heathen; Sunday-schools and Orphanages; Zenana work; the selection, training, and salaries of female agents; vernacular literature, general and educational; Medical Missions and training of assistants; Village work. These and kindred subjects, all of them strictly within our sphere, were discussed, and I ask which of them we can consider this morning in all that remains of the 2½ hours so generously (!) bestowed for their consideration. I trust before another decade has passed you will organise a Ladies' Conference for India, where we can compare our experience and warm each other's hearts.

Let our brethren settle the education question as they think best; but I ask if we as Zenana missionaries here are to educate first and evangelise afterwards. Does not our Master call us

TO EVANGESISE FIRST AND EDUCATE AFTERWARDS?

In other words, shall we spend our time and strength in pruning and training and watering the wild vines in hope that eventually they may get grafted with grace, or shall we seek first to get our pupils engrafted on the True Vine and train them afterwards?

Are not many missionaries fettered in the kind of instruction they gave in Zenanas and schools by receiving Government grants? When this question was before the Lahore Conference, a large majority of those who receive Government aid stated that they were so hampered, and they felt it to be an evil, though in their opinion a necessary evil. Friends, is it really necessary you should wear these silver chains? I know the societies cry out about poverty and lack of funds, and the missionary's heart often sinks as he or she looks round on promising openings for advance if only money were plentiful. But we do not hold our Commission from the Committees that hold the Mission purse-strings, but from Him who holds the purse-strings of the universe. And just as the homely proverb tells us God never sends a mouth but He sends bread to fill it, so I believe He will never send an opportunity for work that needs money but He will also send the money to carry it on, and if He does not, then let us wait on Him till he does. But let not our weak faith lead us into a false position, an unholy alliance. I would rather not touch Government pice; they are not sanctified. I think the free-will offerings of God's people are the proper means for carrying on God's work.

I would ask all of you, my Christian sisters, to look back to the day when you resolved to leave all for Christ and come to India. What was it that moved your inmost soul to pity and prompted you to self-devotion? Was it not the inarticulate cry of the millions of women steeped in blackest depths of sin, ignorance, and misery, and passing through time out into eternity without a single ray of hope from the Sun of Righteousness? The Millions are in darkness still. In spite of all the progress of Zenana and school work the masses in our cities, and still more the masses in our villages, are untouched.

By all the solemnity of your first consecration vows, I implore you, whatever be your special branch of labour in school or zenana, or hospital or dispensary, to give some portion at least of your time to pure evangelistic work. Learn the vernacular of the poor and then go out into the streets and lanes of the city and compel them to come in. Go out to the poor outcasts and tell them of a burden-bearer for them. Go out into the villages, and as the women flock around tell them in song and speech of the love of Jesus. Go out into the melas and festivals and lay hold of the women there and tell them of the water of life and the blood of Christ that can cleanse their polluted hearts. Preach the Gospel to the poor, and thus follow in his blessed footsteps, who spent the three years of his public ministry in seeking poor lost sinners in the towns and villages of Galilee. It will keep alive in your own heart that thirst for souls which is so apt to become deadened by long weary waiting for fruit from among our zenana pupils. It will give you an opportunity of showing them that you regard the salvation of souls as of first importance and every soul is in your eyes, as in God's, equally precious. Oh! for more time, more strength. The harvest truly is plenteous but the labourers are very, very few.

Mrs. Ferguson, Calcutta, said: The missionaries require faith, self-denial, and other graces in their work; but do they always remember the self-denial of those at home, by whose gifts they are enabled to come?

The Hon. Miss Sugden said that while studying the vernacular, she took the opportunity of preaching in English to sailors. One of the worst hindrances in this work is pride. We could be kinder and more sympathetic towards those under us. We must live holier, more fully consecrated lives; then our efforts will be crowned with greater success.

Miss Joseph, B.M.S., Benares, called attention to the necessity of having widows' schools in connection with Zenana work. If Christians do not provide homes for such women, their fate will be miserable indeed.

Mrs. G. Kerry, B.M.S., Calcutta, said that in connection with their Mission was a widows' school that promised excellent results.

Mrs. Tucker, of the Salvation Army, said: I have been watching this zenana work a long time; when my husband was in the Civil Service and we went about through the villages, I often gathered the women by the hundred and spoke to them of Christ. In the Punjab I have seen my aunt, Miss Tucker ("A. L. O. E."), gather together women and children for religious instruction, and my heart has been in the work. The other day a native gentleman said to me, "These missionary ladies are doing such a grand work." And I want to say to these sisters here to-day: You are doing a grand work. The men are planting the strong guns, the rifled cannon, and directing these against the citadel; you are undermining the walls. The word preached in the zenana is not powerless. Many a time in the Punjab have I seen small boys crowd in among the women and girls, and sit at the feet of the zenana missionary, looking up into her face as if she were an angel. Men sometimes object to women preaching. Let me remind you of the words of the Master, "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven the same is my brother, and sister and mother."

ANOTHER RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER, "Joyful News," is announced to appear shortly. It will be published at one halfpenny, weekly, by S. W. Partridge & Co., of Paternoster-row. The Rev. Thomas Champness, a well-known Wesleyan minister of Bolton, is the editor of this new journalistic enterprise.

PRAYING FOR FUNDS.

EXPERIENCE OF GOD'S FAITHFULNESS.

DEAR FRIEND,—Kindly allow me a few words upon the above subject from one of your correspondents.

It is quite true that there are deficits in Christian work which man makes, but I think there are others clearly sent by God, and lessons which He would teach us through them.

By God's mercy, in sending a speedy answer to the many prayers which went up for the purchase of our "home," the £10,000 needed having been sent us six weeks before the last payment was due, we were enabled to inscribe over its door, "Asked of God, August 11, 1874; given of God, May 9, 1875."

Subsequently, in very marked ways, special help was sent at the last moment. More than once an anonymous hundred pounds has been received within the hour of a heavy payment becoming due, and we felt God was watching over us for good.

At the close of 1879 came the heavy fall of snow which besieged Paris for weeks. Apart from the great rise in the price of fuel and food—serious matters for large households—the sudden and severe frost brought most disastrous results to our Orphanage—a country house—the gift of the late M. Galignani. The drainage gave way—there had been neither water nor gas for weeks—necessitating the immediate removal of our household. For days we searched for a house to accommodate our thirty-seven children. The Jesuits had just been expelled from their schools, but they were to be re-let by the year. The only suitable house was one which belonged to a rich milliner. We sought her, but she asked £200 a month, as the three months for which we needed it would just spoil the let for the season.

We had ended our year all but penniless, and heavy payments were already arranged to be met during the coming one—moreover, meetings had to be deferred in England, which meant deferred help—with a most unlooked for expenditure, increasing day by day. We left Madame telling her that we could not go beyond £80 for the three months, that we did not need the house for ourselves, but for little English children, who but for our efforts would be sur la panée. She bowed, and replied, "Impossible!" So we resumed our fruitless search. Eight days passed and nothing had been found. One morning, after our workers' daily prayer-meeting—laying our difficulties anew before God—it was resolved to call again upon Madame la Modiste. Immediately upon arriving, her neice appeared with evident anxiety—"If you are the English lady who wanted my aunt's house at Auteuil for some poor English children, you may have it for what you offered. Soon after you left the other day, my aunt had a fit, her life was despaired of, and it has been upon her conscience that she refused to give her house at your price for a work of mercy." No time was lost in securing it, and a fortnight was willingly added to the three months at our price, £80, instead of £200 a month. Madame recovered, and her first drive was to Auteuil to see our children. Upon examination of our Orphanage, an expenditure of £1200 was found to be necessary. There was nothing to be done but to give the order for the works to be immediately commenced, with the consciousness that God knew all about it, and that we had nothing.

A day or two afterwards a new tax was enforced upon our Home, 77, Avenue Wagram, of £124, which was obliged to be paid within a few days. We can never forget the kindness of our Paris bankers, who allowed us to draw for this and the other necessary expenses of our five institutions without reminding us of our overdraft, or charging us interest, although within a few months we had drawn over £800.

At the close of that year, after an unlooked for expenditure of quite £1500, we ended with a deficit for the first time, which would have been £1500 but for the anonymous gift of £500 from a friend who had watched us in our difficulties.

Our deficit has continued to this day, and it has had its lessons—lessons which could not, perhaps, have been learned had we had a balance in hand. It has taught us the inability of friends. Many who would help, cannot; and they who could, have not always the desire; and led us more to see our true position before God—beggars daily on his bounty. We have often longed that He would lay our deficit upon the hearts of some of his children; but it is not for the servant to dictate to the Master when He shall order the payment of his accounts, though it is the duty of the servant to lay them before Him daily, to put Him "in remembrance;" to obtain his sanction for the little details of expenditure upon his work, knowing that He cannot bless where He is not glorified.

Meanwhile, our work has not been hindered, it has increased on every side, and we have had the joy of his recognition. Our bankers, both in England and Paris, have trusted us with large amounts, in this practical age, without interest. We still wait for his word of power to go forth, knowing that were our liabilities ten thousand times greater, He could easily send the supply. We sum up all his foreknowledge—of the roughness of the way—the unforeseen straits through which we have passed—mountains of difficulty which He has removed, and with a grateful heart for what He has hitherto done we appeal to Him anew—confidingly—"Thou knowest, Lord."—Yours very faithfully,

ADA M. LEIGH.

Paris, 77, Avenue Wigram, Jan. 23.

P.S.—Since the above was written a telegram has been received, stating that a gentleman (who is a stranger personally) offers a gift of £500 if two like sums are collected within two months, in any amounts, for our work. Surely this offer is his word of power gone forth on our behalf. May the answer be seen in the prompt gifts of his children.—Feb. 3.

THE KILBURN HOUSE OF REST.

WHETHER anything ever really comes of All-day Meetings for Prayer and Praise, is a question which probably not unfrequently crosses the minds of people as they read announcements of such gatherings from time to time. The gatherings at the House of Rest, Kilburn, on the first Friday of every month are a satisfactory answer to this question. The fifth of these meetings was held on the 2nd inst. The violent storm which was raging all over London told upon the numbers present, but the absence of numbers rather increased than diminished the fervency of the prayers, and the hallowed hours sped on at what seemed an unusually rapid rate. The object of these meetings is to give any Christian ministers, heads of Missions, or more obscure Christian workers, opportunities of coming together and presenting unitedly whatever subject may be on their heart. No circumlocution is used, and no vague anonymous petitions are offered, and time is not taken up by addresses.

The last meeting, like the previous ones, was a most precious time; the Lord spoke to the hearts of those present by the Holy Spirit, and many realised that, while they were asking, they "had the things they desired." Testimonies to definite answers to prayers offered at previous meetings were not wanting. It was stated by one that usually January had been a most trying month, scarcely anything, as a rule, coming in for carrying on the Lord's work, but that during the first month of this year a considerable amount had been received, and every claim met without the least anxiety. The special subjects for prayer are for an abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit on all Christian workers, for more labourers to be sent into the harvest, both for home and foreign work, for love and unity amongst God's people, and for funds for all Missions, specially naming those personally represented. C.

DOCK LABOURERS' MISSION.—On Wednesday evening, the 6th instant, we had a precious season amongst the poor dock labourers gathered in our Mission hall to tea. The service was conducted by Mr. Miles, and in the after-meeting five poor men found the Saviour. C. C.

THE GOSPEL IN BELGIUM.

DEAR SIR,—The name of our deeply-regretted sister, Miss Beamish, has been often, and again quite recently, connected with the work carried on in Belgium, amongst the Roman Catholics, by the Belgian Evangelical Society. Allow me to give your readers some details about this work, which is meeting with much encouragement and blessing

At Brussels the recent schism in the Rue Belliard Church has not at all interfered with the evangelistic work amongst the working classes. Our evangelist holds, every month, from thirty-five to forty meetings in the lodging-houses inhabited by masons and other workmen, where our friend Miss Beamish was in the habit, some years ago, of accompanying him. He also conducts meetings (in French) in the faubourg of Etterbeek, at the Bethel Hall, in our Flemish Chapel, Rue Blaes; also in the faubourg of Molenbeek St. Jean, and in several villages at some distance from Brussels. All these meetings are well attended, and afford the opportunity of making known the Gospel of grace every month to about 800 persons.

The greater portion of the population of Brussels is, however, Flemish. The Rev. A. W. Haksteen is pastor of an interesting congregation, which has already given to the Training School for Flemish Evangelists most of its pupils (five out of eight). He holds meetings once a week in a manufactory belonging to a Protestant friend. The meetings he recently began in the new hall at Molenbeek St. Jean, were from the first attended by about one hundred persons, all entirely ignorant of the Gospel. The first evening they took leave saying, "We will come again next week;" and they were true to their word.

This large city, with its eight populous faubourgs has, besides the churches for regular Protestant worship, only two rooms for evangelistic work. We are in great need not only of help to enable us to hire rooms in other parts, where no effort has yet been made to preach the Gospel, but also of the personal assistance of English friends who, as Mr. McAll has been doing in most of the towns of France, would take in hand the cause of Christ in this important capital. May God put it into the hearts of some who love his name to come over and help us!

Our work is most important and much prospering in the other parts of the country, where we have twenty-four churches and stations. Our ten Bible-readers alone have, during the last six months, presided at about 900 meetings. A great many members of our Churches, formerly Roman Catholics, help the pastors in their extensive field of labour; and they too hold numerous meetings, at which hundreds of Roman Catholics hear the glad tidings of love and peace.

Colportage continues to be carried on with success. Besides what our Bible-readers sell in their round of visits, two colporteurs have, during the last six months, sold £36 worth of Scriptures and religious books.

Our Sunday-schools number hundreds of Roman Catholic children, whose parents are often, through their influence, led to embrace the Gospel.

The result of these various efforts is the constant accession of Roman Catholic families to our congregations and an ever-increasing influence over the population in general. God is manifestly working with us, and we look forward to more and more victories over Popery and Infidelity, by which so many thousands of souls in this country are enslaved.

At Spa, the work in connection with the chapel built by Miss Beamish is making progress. The Rev. G. Nicolet, the venerable pastor to whom that station is entrusted, writes that several Roman Catholic families are giving hopeful signs, and this he meets with many encouraging subjects of thankfulness.

WAITING ON THE LORD.

THE monthly meeting of friends and workers in connection with the Strangers' Rest, 163, George's-street, E., was held on Thursday ening, 1st inst. Rev. J. Stephens, Highgate, ve an address on "Waiting on the Lord," in nnection with working for the Lord.

LOOKING UNTO THE MASTER.

His first reference was to Psalm cxxxii. 2: Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the and of their masters." That is to say, the rvant is so intent on finding out what his aster wants that he keeps his eye fixed on the aster's hand. He so well knows his place that single motion of the master's hand meets with prompt obedience and response. If we thus, workers, wait on the Lord, we shall consider ie question, what our Master would have us do. he worker for God is not one simply engaging Christian work, but he is the servant of God. Ie does the will of God. It is possible for a an to be engaged in religious or Christian ork and yet not be doing God's will. Here we nd the difference, that if we wait as servants e shall consider what the will of the Lord is. Ve are servants, and this is to be our daily atti- ude. We begin our work asking the great uestion, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" ut we do not need to be asking it continually, lthough we have to keep up the same attitude f mind of waiting upon God.

Many people say they are led to do a certain ork. From my experience, I feel very much nclined to be cautious in the use of this expres- ion. Not, however, because I lack faith in the ontinuance of God's guidance, but people are ery often led by their taste, their inclination, r their feeling, and not by the Spirit of God. ome Christians are given to change and haste, oing from work to work, and they are apt o excuse their change by saying, "I was ed to do so." But, led by whom? We are to vait on the Lord, in the spirit of submission and lependence, as servants looking unto the hand f the Master.

THE SERVANT SHALL BE HONOURED.

In Proverbs xxvii. 18, we have those words: He that waiteth on his master shall be honoured." Under this head, note that the Lord often gives a specialty of work that would not be of our own choice. Philip (Acts viii. 26) was led to a most unlikely place, viz., to a desert place, but he there met with the eunuch. Those who are ready to find out the will of God are those who are waiting upon Him. Peter was sent to minister to men whom otherwise he would not have thought of ministering to (Acts x. 19, 29).

We often find that the narrative of Martha and Mary (Luke x. 38) is spoken of as an illustration of the busy and the meditative Christian. But Martha was a cumbered server, and Mary was a wise servant. True service is not doing what we think right for our Master, but doing what our Master tells us. Mary knew that what the Lord wanted of her was that she should sit still and listen. Some say that Martha did something that was needful; but the Lord would cheerfully have taken anything that was ready if he could have got Martha to be still and listen. The worker must never cease to be a disciple, to be a learner. If she had attended to what the Lord said she would have been fit to do the Lord's work when the time came. It is not that we are to give ourselves always to meditation; but we are to take heed to keep at the feet of our Lord that we may learn of Him. There is a reading of the word of God, and there is a meditating on the word. Do you ever ask yourselves what you have been reading about? Could you tell in a clear and concise manner to another what you have been reading? Do you ever try to explain the Epistle of Paul as you would a letter from a friend?

We require one or two qualifications for knowing the mind of Christ. In Romans xii. 2 we have one: "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." The reason why many Christians do not see many things that are wrong is because they are conformed to this world. We have another qualification in 1 Cor. iii. 1, 2. The Apostle could not "speak unto them as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ." These men had among them envyings, and strife, and divisions.

INQUIRING OF THE LORD.

In 2 Samuel v. 22, we have another example of waiting on God: "David inquired of the Lord." He knew, generally, that it was right to go against the Philistines, and that the Lord was with him. We know in general that it is right to work in such a place; but like David we must inquire of the Lord, so that we may be in the line of God's working. Then the Lord shall go up before us. No doubt we all make our work a matter of prayer, but do we keep our minds fixed on praying for success? It is not so much that we should ask God to be with us as that we should be with God. God is intent on spiritual results if we could only be thoroughly with Him in the line of his action. We should wait on Him to know how He would like his work done. We have not only to have right work but right methods. This question of methods is one of the most important in the present day. It is very often lost sight of in Christian Churches. A Mission needs money, for instance. It is a good Mission. But the money is not coming in sufficiently to carry on the work. First of all, we have got to consider how God would have the money raised. People say if we do not resort to certain means the Mission will fall. Well, let the Mission fall. Many Missions are started without the Lord's bidding. There are hundreds of people undertaking money responsibilities who have no right to do so. We must first find out that it is God's work and God's work for us, and that God's time is come. If this is all right let us look up to the Lord for the money. But if it does not come, what are we to do? We have to find out how He would have us get the money. It is not merely that we should get it for the work, it is also that in getting it we should be a testimony to God.

Many of the ways of raising money are not testimonies to God. I think that scepticism has a right to retaliate on us. You say God is rich, and you go from door to door to beg for money. That is a wrong testimony to God. We are warranted in saying that God is rich, and if we abide faithfully in his work, doing his work, and looking up to Him, He will give us the necessary means. Many churches are built out of all proportion to God's mind. Thousands of pounds are spent in erecting magnificent structures, while only a nine thousand is given to Mr. Hudson Taylor in a year for the great work of evangelising China. A minister who adopted the plan of taking no stipend, was asked if his example should be followed in every case. His reply was, "Which the Egyptians essaying to do were drowned," meaning that God's work had to be carried out in God's way.

Our waiting on God should be a waiting on Him with a view of finding out how God would have his work carried on. God designed that David should sit on the throne of Israel. He had given Saul into David's hand, and one of his chief friends advised him to stretch forth his hand and kill Saul. But David did not take up God's cause in a wrong way. We must not do anything to hasten God's work, that is in itself wrong or unfit. How often a man going on with a great work is tempted to do a very unbrotherly thing. Someone stands in his way, and he acts in a high-handed manner. He forgets that the servant of the Lord must not strive. It may seem to him that he is hastening the work of the Lord, but he is called upon to wait on the Lord. The work is the Lord's. He shall make our way clear. He shall take away every obstacle. We have to testify, we have to speak out faithfully, but in love.

OUR STRENGTH SHALL BE RENEWED.

If we wait on the Lord He shall renew our strength (Isaiah xl. 31). He giveth power to the faint. We, as workers, need strength. We want a renewal of strength. We should not so much wait on the Lord as wait on the Lord. We look too much at the subjective act rather than at the objective person. Some men dwell upon the word "believe," until their hearers are sick and do not know what to do. Paul and Silas told the jailor to believe, and then "they spake unto him the word of the Lord" (Acts xvi. 32). They set before him the Person, and he believed. When we wait on the Lord we keep before our minds what He is, and what He has undertaken to do. Sometimes we feel very weak, but our weakness never touches God's promises. However we feel, God's word stands. God's strength shall be through and in us. If we abide in Jesus, like the branches in the vine, his power and love will flow through us, and the Father shall gather the fruit.

THE DEEPENING OF SPIRITUAL LIFE AT CAMBRIDGE.

DEAR SIR,—Your pages teem with accounts of Christian work and service in all parts of the world, but there are few places that can excite more general interest than the University towns in the British empire. We all have an interest in them, from the education there received by our young men who are designed for many of the more prominent positions in life. Cambridge and Oxford were both visited by Mr. Moody and his colleague in the autumn, as Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Aberdeen had been visited during the previous year. At Cambridge, as elsewhere, much good work was done for the Lord. Those who had received life were stirred up to a greater consciousness of it, and not a few received the touch of the Spirit of life in Christ for the first time, and are now rejoicing in the great gift. To follow up this good work was the object of the meetings held at the large room of the Guildhall last week.

To lead those who have received Christ as their Righteousness, to receive Him also as their Sanctification, to trust Him wholly in all the conflicts and duties of daily life, to seek to manifest his life in all they do, to realise his continued presence, and to live in unbroken communion with Him,—these were the themes, and this the purpose, of these meetings.

The result was very encouraging. The attendance was good—in the evening especially—and one evening the meeting was organised by the Undergraduates themselves, when a large body of them occupied the central part of the hall. Each evening, also, an after meeting was held, when the great majority of the audience remained. None who were present will forget those solemn half-hours, when the outward silence did but indicate the deeply-moving presence of the Spirit of God.

Many found that liberty wherewith Christ makes his people free; and to use the language of one of the young men, "discovered that not only was he in Christ, but Christ was in him," with some of the blessedness of that indwelling.

If it were a fitting thing, some incidents of telling interest and power might be related. Let this suffice, however. We thank God, and take courage. Let us take up the stirring command, "Go forward." The Church of God is awakening to a greater consciousness of her need—a need that Christ only can meet—to overtake the accumulated evils of past indifference and neglect.

The men who had the great privilege of sharing in the good work at Cambridge, were Revs. C. A. Fox, E. W. Hopkins, E. W. Moore, W. Webb-Peploe, and Mr. H. F. Bowker, aided by the Rev. H. Trotter, W. Robinson, R. Black, and many other local friends. AMICUS.

REV. ARCH. G. BROWN, 22, Bow-road E., will forward a copy of his annual report, mentioned in our last issue, to any of our readers who will send him their names and addresses.

MANCHESTER Y.M.C.A.—The annual social meeting lately held was attended by over two thousand members and friends. The President, Mr. Herbert Philips, J.P., presided. Addresses were delivered by the Bishop of Manchester on "The Young; their temptations and safeguards;" by Rev. Dr. Macfadyen on "Manliness;" by Rev. Dr. McCaw on "Christian, a name or a reality?" Rev. Charles Garrett was unavoidably absent.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

CORNWALL.

MR. W. FORBES has conducted a four days' mission at Saltash. About one-fourth of the population now wear the blue ribbon. At Camborne, last week, great enthusiasm prevailed. On Thursday night upwards of 300 persons donned the "bit of blue."

Mr. George Blaiklock has finished his engagements in Cornwall. He has visited Camelford, Delabale, Wadebridge, Launceston, Callington, and Padstow. Nearly 1200 persons donned the ribbon at the meetings. Mr. Blaiklock commenced a six days' Mission at Worksop on the 12th.

MR. T. E. MURPHY AT SHREWSBURY.

Mr. T E. Murphy's Mission in Shrewsbury went on with increasing success till it terminated on Friday, Feb. 9; 2666 blue ribbons were given, 2213 of these being new pledges. God has been working in our midst. The hall has been crowded every night, and hundreds have failed to get in. In one house of business all the employés put on the blue ribbon, and at their request the master has substituted cocoa for beer at supper time. It is hoped that other masters will make this concession.

Some of the saved ones have attended and assisted at the daily prayer-meetings, and we expect still greater results; with God's help we mean to carry on the Mission and hold weekly meetings until we can arrange for another protracted effort. The committee of ladies and gentlemen and the Young Men's Christian Association choir have rendered valuable help.

MR. W. NOBLE AT BRADFORD.

A Mission has been continued here nightly in St. George's Hall by Mr. W. Noble, and now (Sunday, February 11th) we are on the eve of the closing meeting. The hall, which seats 5000 persons, has been attended by ever-increasing numbers, and overflow-meetings had to be provided. The town has never been so moved before, this being the first occasion on which any united Mission has been held here.

On Friday, the 9th inst., 1163 pledges and ribbons were taken, and, in addition, 379 ribbons given, chiefly to old abstainers. This is the largest record for one day.

The third meeting for women, held yesterday, was a most remarkable gathering. The hall was well filled by a serious and attentive audience. A really earnest feeling pervaded the assembly, and at the close 460 took the pledge. Up to last night 7044 pledges and 3836 ribbons have been taken. Meetings have been held in various factories during the dinner hour, and the daily prayer-meetings were seasons of earnest prayer and praise.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble will leave behind them many friends; we are sure their labours, and those of the Revs. Forbes Winslow, S. Hooke, and others, will be, under the blessing of Almighty God, attended by permanent results.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY AT CARLISLE.

On Sunday week, Feb. 4, Mr. Francis Murphy commenced a series of Gospel Temperance Meetings in this ancient Border city. In anticipation of Mr. Murphy's visit, the Committee of Arrangements engaged the Drill Hall, a newly renovated and attractively adorned building, capable of holding 2500 people. Night after night the capacious structure has been crowded with deeply interested and highly appreciative audiences. Mr. Murphy's simple argument, affecting narratives, humorous and playful sallies, personal confessions, pungent appeals, and powerful and eloquent perorations provoke now to tears, now to laughter, now to conviction, and in not a few instances to signing the pledge, and manfully donning the ribbon of blue.

Ministers of all denominations and a goodly number of the local gentry, including Mr. George Howard, M.P., of Naworth Castle, James MacInnes, Esq., of Rickerby Hall, Mr. Martin, of Holme Green, &c., &c., have appeared upon the platform, and expressed their sympathy with the wonderful work. A prayer-meeting, which is felt to be most refreshing and animating, is held daily at 3 o'clock, and is largely attended.

During the few nights Mr. Murphy has been with us about 1800 persons have signed the pledge, and before the Mission is ended we have every reason to believe the numbers will at least be doubled. Altogether we are enjoying a great blessing, and many a poor drunkard, as well as many a discouraged abstainer, will have cause to thank God for Mr. Murphy's visit to Carlisle.

MAJOR AND MRS. POOLE AT CROYDON.

The Gospel Temperance Mission at Croydon has been marked by a new feature which all who love the work will rejoice in beholding. The "after meeting" and inquiry-room have deeply solemnised and given tone to this Mission. It is not that the Gospel has been more fully proclaimed than at former Missions conducted by Major Poole, but hitherto the decision of the audience has, at the close of an address, been simply urged on behalf of total abstinence. The speaker would not of course have failed in pleading, during the address, with all to become truly Christ's. Now the thought is carried beyond the pledge-signing, and individuals are urged to immediate decision for Him in whose name they have been asked to become Temperance workers.

Many will ask how the after-meeting, with its inquiry room, can be worked in with an ordinary Gospel Temperance address. A brief description of one meeting will answer the question. Last Friday evening the Rink at Croydon was packed in every corner, and many hundreds were turned away. Mrs. G. S. Reaney was the speaker announced for the evening, but Major Poole, as usual, was in full command. Mrs. Reaney spoke for fifty minutes from the words, "What is your life?" The former part of her address was purely gospel; then came the appeal, "If you are Christ's you must work for Him." Lastly, there was a reminder to any abstainers that "teetotalism is not salvation." At the close of the address, pledge signers were invited to come up to the tables, and many came forward. After twenty minutes had been devoted to this, the Doxology was sung, and those not able to remain for the after-meeting were asked to withdraw during the singing of a hymn.

About six hundred people remained for this after-meeting, the silence and solemnity of which formed a striking contrast to the enthusiasm and animation which had marked the close of the evening meeting. Major Poole invited all to kneel in solemn prayer; and, after a moment's pause, read verse after verse from the word of God. Then Mrs. Reaney spoke briefly, taking the words "To Me" in the three texts: "Come unto Me, and I will give you rest;" "Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out;" and "Ye will not come to Me that ye might have life." After this, Major Poole invited any who desired to be prayed for to rise from their seats, while all others remained in prayer. It was very touching to see one after another rise, until over fifty of those present had hus declared their desire for prayer. Those who had stood up were invited to go into the inquiry-room, to which the workers—ladies and gentlemen—led the way, the latter to take the men, and the former the women, in the different rooms provided.

Tearful were the faces of those who entered the inquiry-room, but very beaming were many of them as one by one "the seekers after God" left the rink for their respective homes. "I am His from this hour!" said one, as she rose from her knees, after audibly thanking God for the salvation offered at the cross of Christ. "Oh!" what a load has been lifted off my heart!" said a young wife as she, too, rose from her knees.

The work of Major and Mrs. Poole has everywhere been blessed, but we venture to believe that in associating the after-meeting and inquiry-room with Gospel Temperance work they may look for even greater things. This new feature is the outgrowth of much prayer and waiting upon God for guidance. We trust others may be led to follow in their steps in this matter.

"JESUS IS MINE."

1 COR. i. 30.

JESUS is mine! Oh, thought of sweetest joy
Now shall his praise my tongue and life empl
Bought by his blood, on Calvary's cross Who d
And every claim of justice satisfied.
He is my Peace, He hath made peace for me,
And with his freedom He hath set me free.

He is my Righteousness, in Him I hide,
Cleansed in the fountain flowing from his side;
He is my Wisdom, He will set me right,
And in the darkest hour will be my light;
Sanctification and redemption too
In Him I find who maketh all things new.

It is enough; He is my all in all;
In grateful wonder at his feet I fall;
By blessed union and by purchase his,
Oh, joy surpassing thought, oh, heavenly bliss!
I too am his before whose throne I bow
In willing, joyful, glad surrender now.

For grace has conquered, Jesus now bears sway,
I'll trust in Him to keep me all the way;
Weak in myself, in Him I shall be strong,
Who is for me my Strength, Salvation, Song.
'Tis all of grace, and taught by Him I'll sing
Glad hallelujahs to my Saviour King.

MISSION AT LEEDS.

THE Rev. W. Haslam, author of "Fro Death into Life," conducted the Mission St. Stephen's, Burmantofts, from Jan. 20 Jan. 31.

The Missioner kept the two objects of a Missi continually before the minds of his hearers, viz the revival of believers, and the salvation of t unconverted, laying the greatest stress upon t fact, that unless saved souls were looking to risen Saviour, to be kept and used by Him, a were boldly and joyfully testifying for Chris they had no right to expect the salvation their fellow-sinners. He dwelt with great powe upon the utter uselessness of making resolution in one's own strength to overcome sin and lea a consistent life.

Addresses on the Christian life in progressiv stages were given by Mr. Haslam from Monda to Friday inclusive, at 12.20. These were fu of deep spiritual instruction to the believers under the allegory of the Children of Isra passing from Egypt to Canaan. For three mor days the preacher dwelt upon the Christian' Hope.

Meetings for women were held daily (with two exceptions) by Mrs. Haslam; these were increasingly well attended.

The Mission in this parish has resulted in great blessing to many souls. On the last day of the Mission a liberal contribution wa made as a thank-offering to the Parochial Mission Society.

WORKING GIRLS IN LONDON.—In answer to prayer and effort, the £500 required to secure the promise of an equal amount from Mr. R. Barlow Kennett for the opening of the eighth home has been received.

MR. PHILIP PHILLIPS and his son have met with a hearty reception at Kingston, Jamaica. The Bishop of Jamaica and ministers of all denominations were present at their first meeting in Coke Chapel. The service was most impressive throughout.

SERMON TO YOUNG MEN. — Rev. Archibald G. Brown preached his annual sermon to young men on Sunday evening last. Eight thousand tickets of admission had been distributed in shops, warehouses, and lodging-houses, care being taken, as far as possible, to get them into the hands of the unconverted. Half an hour before service time a steady stream poured into the Tabernacle, and when the doors were opened to the public, there could not have been less than between two or three thousand men assembled. By the time of commencing worship, all available standing-room was occupied, and many were unable to gain admission. Mr. Brown took for his subject Christ's miracle on the man with the withered hand, specially dwelling on the words, "Stand forth," and "Stretch forth." The power of the Lord was felt to be present, and much fruit is expected from the service.

JERSEY SAILORS' HOME AND BETHEL. — A me was opened last week at No. 3 Pier, Jersey, Col. P. D. Marett. The intention is to provide comfortable place of resort for sailors and hers, where food and lodgings can be had at w rate. Religious meetings will be held in the ethel.

THE Y.M.C.A., IPSWICH.—The good Spirit is vidently working on the hearts of the young men this town. Several have been recently led to ccept Christ as their Saviour. All glory to God. We have formed, in connection with the Associa- ion, an "Evangelistic Choir." The members are Christians. On Thursday last, the Presbyterian choolroom was well filled, to listen to a Service of Song, by the choir, the subject being "Our Re- deemer." Short addresses were interspersed. The audience listened with great attention throughout; and we trust the good seed sown will be productive. On Friday evening, a most interesting and instruc- tive lecture was delivered by Dr. Roche, on "How to be healthy, wealthy, and wise." The room was crowded. W. H. A.

Notices of Books, &c.

C. SONNETS BY C. AUTHORS. Macniven & Wallace. A handsomely-got up little book, compiled from the productions of the most eminent sonnet writers. These poetic gems appeal powerfully to all the better feelings of the heart.

THE WAY TO FORTUNE. A Third Edition of this work is published by Mr. T. F. Unwin. 2s. 6d. It contains fifty short essays on subjects of practical value to all who would win a successful career. Its illustrative proverbs and anecdotes are full of interest and point.

FROM THE BEGINNING; OR, THE STORY OF MARY JONES AND HER BIBLE. By M. E. R. British and Foreign Bible Society. To the heroine of this deeply interesting narrative the world owes a debt of gratitude. Her tears for the lack of the word of God set on foot that great organisation, The British and Foreign Bible Society, which has blessed millions in the dissemination of the Bread of Life.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION, AND ITS PLACE IN A SYSTEM OF RATIONAL EDUCATION. By CONCORDIA LOEVING. W. Swan, Sonnenschein & Co. A very carefully prepared lecture—the work of a matured mind, dealing with many of the growing evils of our present educational system, and striking a blow at the root of some of our social evils. The work is dedicated to H.R.H. Princess Louise, and contains a portrait of the authoress.

THE FOUR CARDINAL VIRTUES. By Rev. J. B. FIGGIS, M.A. 1s. S. W. Partridge & Co. Excellent advice to young Christians as to the proper position of morality as the handmaid of true religion. But Mr. Figgis might have dwelt less emphatically in his chapter on Temperance upon the error of being "righteous overmuch." The general signs of the times point in the opposite direction.

BONDAGE AND VICTORY. Under this title The National Temperance League, 337, Strand, W.C., has issued the admirable Temperance Address which Sir Edward Baines, Kt., delivered at Colston Hall, Bristol, in connection with the Congregational Union of England and Wales. It is neatly printed, and the price is 3s. per hundred.

TRYING TO ENTER. By AGNES GIBERNE. 1s. Seeley, Jackson & Halliday. A devout and definite endeavour to expound the way of salvation on the old substantial lines of repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Intended for anxious inquirers, and also for those inquirers "who are not yet anxious, but who wish they were." May it be owned and blessed of God, and have much success in its destined paths of usefulness.

CHRIST'S SACRIFICE AND OURS. By MARCUS DODS, D.D. Edinburgh: Macniven & Wallace. 3d. As an exposition of the Sacrifice of Christ this sermon fails to satisfy either head or heart, although the general principle it lays down of the duty of conformity to the spirit of self-renunciation and of consecration which our Lord exemplified is of course true, and important in its application. But to reach that conformity to the Saviour's example more stress must be laid, and more complete recognition made of the substitutional aspect of his sacrifice than the sermon admits, or at least inculcates. It is the blood which maketh atonement for the soul.

WEEK DAY SERMONS. By R. W. DALE. Hodder & Stoughton. Mr. Dale may not be a very profound theologian, in the strictest sense of the term; he is certainly an admirable teacher of Christian ethics. Among the occupants of the modern pulpit he is, perhaps, the greatest living successor of the Apostle James. In this volume of "Week Day Sermons" he appears at his best. We cannot, indeed, express unqualified commendation of these discourses: we should have expected a less uncertain sound with respect to the Temperance question in the sermon on "The Discipline of the Body," and his views on "Amusements" seem to us in some respects to be perilously liberal. As a whole, however, he carries our judgment with him in these clear, penetrating, robust, logical and sensible expositions of what a Christian ought to be in his every-day relations—whether individual, social, or political. We wish for these sermons a vast congregation of readers.

THE GALILEAN GOSPEL. By ALEXANDER BALMAN BRUCE, D.D. Edinburgh: Macniven & Wallace. We confess to a feeling of disappointment after reading this book. It may be the peculiar phraseology of its author has misled us. In some parts of the work, our Lord seems to be regarded very much as an essayist who had simply done his best to carry out a mere human venture, instead of One who came to do his Father's will, and that in beautiful accord with the types and prophecies that had gone before Him. For example, we find this sentence, "Jesus was inventive. He did not blindly imitate the method in vogue for making men holy, which was the practice of austerity, believed in as a specific by all the moral physicians of the time 'The Baptist,' the Pharisees, the Essenes. He (Jesus) saw that method failed, and He tried another, as unlike it as possible. . . . It was a new way much found fault with, but it worked well, as it always will, and must. Again, judging from his conduct, there were two things He greatly desired—the extinction of sin, and the extirpation of misery. These things He would do if He could. The will was there at least, if not the power."

The author draws some interesting and instructive contrasts between the ministry of Jesus and the Baptist; but here we think, too, his language misleading. "John," he says, "speaks much of the axe and the fan, of wrath" and fire unquenchable; Jesus, of salvation for the lost. But that we have our New Testaments to guide us, we should have thought from this that our Lord's discourses contained no mention of "unquenchable fire," or that such parables as "the tares," "the unprofitable servant," &c., were never spoken by the Lord. Further, the author in his anxiety to protest against what he terms "the tendency to multiply fundamental doctrines and to erect scruples into principles in conduct" (we should have thought the tendency to be all the other way), "and to be content with mere evangelical doctrine without the evangelic spirit," writes in such a way as to leave an uncomfortable feeling on the mind, that he is of opinion that because clearly defined Gospel doctrines may be found where the warm "evangelic" spirit is wanting, these two have no necessary connection with each other.

In thus faithfully recording some of our own impressions on the first reading of this book we should be grieved if in doing so we have even seemed to undervalue what is excellent in it. It is the work of a Professor of the Free Church of Scotland, a fact which greatly prepossessed us in its favour. Hence our greater regret that we cannot give it our unqualified commendation.

PUBLICATIONS BY MESSRS. SHAW & CO.

Messrs. Shaw & Co. publish a continual wealth of high-toned reading for boys and girls. Of those now before us the foremost in interest is CRIPPLE JESS, the Hop-picker's Daughter (2s. 6d.). The history of Zenobia's self-sacrifice to prevent her little sister from being trained for a soul-destroying profession, and all the events that arose from it, are fully as engrossing as anything from the pen of Hesba Stretton. By the same writer is BENNIE, THE KING'S LITTLE SERVANT (1s.), a touching little story; like the former, it contains a fund of genuine Gospel teaching. LONELY JACK; AND HIS FRIENES AT SUNNYSIDE, by EMILY BRODIE (3s. 6d.), is a cheerful and well-told story, inculcating lessons of consideration and kindness towards the children of the street, and portraying, with much power, the beneficent influences put forth by one Christian home. LITTLE FREDDIE; OR, FRIENDS IN NEED (2s. 6d.), introduces us to life in the wards of a large London hospital. JACK AND JILL, a Story of To-Day (2s. 6d.), by Mrs. STANLEY LEATHES, is a quaintly-told narrative of two mites who arrive at Euston with no one to claim them. The kindness they meet with on almost every hand, and the delightful people the story introduces us to, makes one wish that it might be true; but the number of extraordinary coincidences constantly occurring deprive the reader of this satisfaction. A LITTLE WILDFLOWER; OR, ROSY'S STORY (1s. 6d.). The history of a friendless child, adopted by an old hawker, who finally turns out to be her real grandfather. Full of pathos, beautifully told, but marred by the uncouth language put into the mouth of little Rosy herself. THE THREE CHUMS, a Story of School Life (3s. 6d.) By M. L RIDLEY. A capital book for boys, without a dull page in it, and teaching some excellent lessons. GARRICK; OR, HIS OWN FAULT, by YOTTY OSBORN (5s.), is a book for boys, but not of so high a tone or so free from objectionable traits as any of the foregoing. The last of the batch which remains to be noticed is a capital book of Sunday lectures for children, called LIVING WATER FOR LITTLE PITCHERS (3s.), by the Rev. JAMES STEPHENS, a missioner of the Church of England. It abounds in narrative and incident, well used to illustrate fundamental Gospel truth, and contains the coloured pages which constitute the "wordless book."

SANCTIFICATION AND HOLINESS.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, Mr. Edward Knocker, would lead us to suppose that the above terms are synonymous. He appears to me, however, to arrive at this conclusion from insufficient grounds. If he will consult the Greek Testament with the Revisers' readings, he will see that the Greek word which is translated "holiness" in Rom. i. 4., 2 Cor. vii. 1, 1 Thess. iii. 13, Heb. xii. 10, is not the same as that which in other passages to which he refers is rendered "sanctification." But in the first three above passages it is ἁγιωσύνη and in the last ἁγιότης. Whereas the word which is rendered "sanctification" is ἁγιασμός.

I should be disposed, therefore, to arrive at the opposite conclusion to your correspondent, and to say that sanctification and holiness are not synonymous terms. The latter appears to be the outcome of the former—we are sanctified that we may be holy.—Yours faithfully, EDWIN POPE.

The Vicarage, Paddock Wood, Feb. 6.

"JESUS ONLY."

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, in directing attention to the above matter, has done good service. All orthodox Christians agree in the belief that Jesus is the only Saviour, but it is to be feared that many well-meaning persons, carried away with the words "Jesus only," are practically making Him the only object of their love and worship. Instead of coming through the Son to the Father they fall before the Son and forget the Father. And where this is not done entirely it is done partially. In our popular Songs of Praise the Father is put in a very subordinate position. Can this be right? It is not right. A theology which exalts only One Person in the Trinity—and that the Second Person—is quite out of harmony with Christ's own teaching, as may be seen in all parts of the Gospel, especially in John xiv.—xvii. Upon the whole, I fear the motto "Jesus Only" is working harm in the Churches. We please Jesus best when, with Him, we glorify the Father and the Holy Ghost.—Yours very truly, 27, Tredegar-square, Bow. G. L.

[The young convert is naturally first occupied with Jesus, for it is to Him he comes. But Jesus is the way to the Father. "By Him ye do believe in God, who raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God." GOD is the proper object of a believer's faith, as it was from faith in God that Adam fell.—ED.]

HOME OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

SIR,—May I be allowed, through your columns, to make the following appeal for funds to start the above home as a temporary refuge for girls waiting to enter houses of mercy, penitentiaries, or other suitable situations.

It is well known that there are a few homes or refuges in London for the same purpose, but many of the clergy and all who work amongst the friendless and outcast classes will testify to the great need there is for many more—that for want of sufficient temporary provision many cases are lost and slip back to the old life of sin. It is also most essential to have such refuges in various localities and on a small scale.

Such a Home has long been wanting in this part of London, and the time for making an effort to start it seems to have arrived, as experienced workers (who will reside in the Home) have volunteered, and part of the furniture is promised. We shall now, therefore, be very grateful for help towards the annual expenses as well as furnishing.

The opinions expressed in the two letters which are appended to this appeal, coming as they do from those so well qualified to judge as the Chaplains of H.M. Prisons of Westminster and Clerkenwell, offer valuable testimony to the great need there is for more refuges, and they will, I feel sure, stir up many hearts to come forward and help with the money necessary to start and carry on such a Home as that for which I now plead.

I shall be happy to give further particulars of the arrangements proposed to any friends desiring such information. Those wishing to help forward this work can send subscriptions and donations to my address as below, and all will be acknowledged. ELLEN WILSON.

130, Holland-road, Kensington, W., Feb. 3.

DEAR LADY WILSON,—There is a great want of refuges where cases and characters can be tested, so that girls may be sent in a more settled frame of mind to a home, and also that they may be sent to the most fitting home for their case, and not merely into the first that is heard of.

Girls are often sent too soon to homes, and leave and discredit such places amongst all girls they meet, whereas the fault was not in the home, nor altogether in the girl, but in her being sent straight there without the preliminary settling down in a refuge. And in other ways for other kinds of cases refuges are most useful, and should be small and plentiful.

I have a girl here now whom a police-magistrate kindly commended to my special notice. She seems just the girl to do well in a home, but I spent a whole week, in vain, trying to find a vacancy for her in a good home out of London, which she sensibly saw would be best for her, rather than one near old haunts and companions. Even from Stonehouse Refuge there came the answer, "both houses over full.' Another home, accommodating 140, was quite full. I had to get her remanded for another week, and have only to-day found a place for her. But she might much better have gone to you (had your proposed refuge been in work) instead of being sent back to prison.

Let your refuge be cheery, home-like, and small, and you will do a great work, though of course your inmates will be birds of passage, and therefore you will not see results as plainly as if they stopped with you for a long time. But a refuge is a sorting-house and a cooling-house, not a manufactory of a finished article. There should be a dozen such places at least in London—there are not six.

Wishing you all success in your efforts to establish this most useful work,—I am, yours very sincerely,

H. M. Prison, Clerkenwell, E.C. J. W. HORSLEY.

MY DEAR HORSLEY,—I trust that Lady Wilson will succeed in establishing a refuge for women "waifs and strays" in Kensington, as it will supply a want that the clergy and other philanthropists of that neighbourhood must be continually experiencing. Perhaps more than anybody else in London, I have, through the good offices of several penitentiary institutions, facilities for making preventive and reformatory provision for girls and women; yet I am frequently at a loss to find proper temporary shelter for cases unexpectedly thrown upon my hands. What others do in a like dilemma, but under less favourable circumstances, I cannot conceive.

A large number of girls come up to London from the country with the view of obtaining employment as needlewomen, factory operatives, and domestic servants, or perhaps with the idea of emigrating to the Colonies, or of otherwise "bettering themselves," as they say, who, from causes too numerous to mention in a letter, never achieve the object of their journey, and who sooner or later fall away from the paths of purity and honesty into the ways of sin and vice.

If there were more refuges established in different parts of London, and their existence were published and made widely known, many a poor girl would be saved from a life of shame, and many a fallen woman would be rescued before the seeds of immorality had been planted in her heart too many and deep.

I hope therefore that Lady Wilson will obtain the aid of money and friends which she seeks, so that she may accomplish the good work upon which she has set her mind.—Yours sincerely, G. P. MERRICK.

H. M. Prison, Westminster, S.W., Jan. 16.

"HEALING BY FAITH."

SIR,—In the war of Israel with Amalek, Moses, Aaron, and Hur were on the hill praying, Joshua and the chosen men on the plain fighting, and God giving the victory, hearing prayer, and blessing means.

In the Epistle of James we have praying and anointing with oil, or prayers and medicine, and God raising up the sick, hearing prayer, and blessing means.

Some forty-seven years ago I went into a sick room, and the first words of the sick man were, "Sir, I'm dying." After a few moments I kneeled down and prayed for two or three minutes, and on rising from my knees the first words I heard were, "Sir, I'm better;" and the man recovered. At the same time physicians were there using means; so that there were the "prayer of faith," what was equivalent to anointing with oil, and God hearing prayer, and blessing means. I have been in sick rooms where physicians were using means, and I have put up "the prayer of faith," and before I left the rooms the patients have said, "I feel better." There again was prayer, medicine, and God hearing prayer and blessing means.

So it was, is, and will be. To pray and use no means is presumption. To use means and not pray is near to atheism. To pray and use means is evangelical obedience.

Your correspondent, "A Disciple," says, "No . . . doctrine . . . rests on any mere isolated passage, and no practice . . . can be warranted if unsanctioned by our Lord or his apostles." But one passage is sufficient to support a doctrine, if that doctrine be in harmony with "the analogy of faith." He says, "James . . . was not an apostle; and his epistle is not addressed to the Church at large, but to Jewish Christians;" and adds, "he does not claim apostolic authority, nor does he address himself to Gentile Christians." But this argument proves too much, and is therefore false. According to it, as Mark and Luke were not apostles, their "Gospels" and "the Acts of the Apostles," being without apostolic authority, are inferior to other portions of the Word of God; but by the consent of the Churches they are equal to any other portion of the Bible. Again, if the Epistle of James have not full authority because it is "addressed" to the Jewish dispersion, the first Epistle of Peter is also without full authority, because it is addressed to the Jews of the dispersion; and thus the argument, proving too much, is a false argument.

No matter who were the writers of Scripture, whether apostles, evangelists, or disciples, when the Spirit of God guided the pen. All is of equal authority, being given by inspiration of having the authority of God, and serving the pose for which it was written. There "preference shares" in the Bible. It is a book, all of the same authority, and all in p harmony.

The Epistle of James is a very precious p of God's Word—the Bible would be very in plete without it—and the Lutheran Church o Continent is, at present, suffering greatly in sequence of the low opinion that Luther an followers entertained regarding it.

DRINKING BARS.

SIR,—In reading the remarks respecting temptation offered at the bars of public-ho and drinking-stalls to the young women emplo it brought to my mind that when staying at principal hotel in Londonderry, some few y ago, the landlady told me she found it impos to keep a barmaid longer than a few month they all became drinkers. She had tried yo girls from the country places, who, at first, w not touch wine or beer, but they soon comme drinking, and presently took whiskey, or whi and water, with the young officers who constantly in and out, and then paid for what drank themselves, and for what they "treat the barmaid to.

At the hotel in ——, a young girl of eighteen was sent to the county asylum, entirely through the effects of drink, and the h was contracted at that bar.

For the underground railway stations the are engaged who are attractive looking, and t appearance often entices the young men "drink" and "chat," so that while many a girl is led to ruin through these places, yo men drink who would often not to do so if only served at these bars. Is it possible to th of these matters and not see how harmful result must be and is?

Hoping the matter may be taken up and subject constantly be brought before the pu through the means of your valuable paper,

I am, Sir, yours ever truly,

"RAGGED CHURCHES AND CHAPELS."

DEAR SIR,—You have rendered a much valued service to the cause of God in giving publicity in your last issue to the remarks of the Rev. E. J. Hytche on the work and financial needs of the Ragged Church and Chapel Union. This unobtrusive society, with an income of £500 per annum, has for more than twenty-five years assisted in the maintenance of places of worship for the destitute poor of the metropolis. It is waste of breath to complain of non-attendance on the means of grace when the ragged and wretched would be voted a nuisance in our ornate and cosily-arranged sanctuaries. They are as ready to listen to the Gospel as their superiors in the social scale when Mission-halls are provided for their accommodation, and the glad tidings of "the common salvation" are published in plain language by loving lips. There is in our midst a numerous class, possibly little short of 500,000 souls, who live from hand to mouth, and who hardly ever know in the morning where to look for the food of the day. Many of these received instruction during childhood in Sabbath-schools, and not a few are reduced in circumstances through no fault of their own.

It is for the poor, who are thus always with us, and for the "waifs and strays," who are constantly being attracted to London in the hope of bettering their condition, that the Committee of the Ragged Church and Chapel Union earnestly plead for increased funds. The cost of a single church or chapel of the approved type would supply the means of multiplying the operations of this society more than a hundredfold, and scatter light as well as blessing in many a blind alley or neglected thoroughfare. That the rich may be induced to help the poor, as the Lord would help them, by bringing the Gospel of his grace to their very doors, is the earnest prayer of your grateful reader,

LAICUS.

PRAYER FOR FUNDS.

DEAR SIR,—I see my letter of January 18th has been commented upon by two parties, both admitting that the subject is an important one, for which I am glad; and if it stirs up someone to write who can shed a ray of light on the matter, I shall not regret having written, though not understood by "J. V. S."

If he or others will give us Scripture how to avoid the errors on the right hand and left he will do us good service. I agree with him that we should use all proper means. But is getting into debt and then asking the public to help, proper means? Man's reason must never put aside the word of God.

I do not wish to enter into discussion, but gladly leave the matter to abler hands.

On reading the letter signed "Head of a Mission," I was not surprised to find the writer at the close saying: "I feel the question is yet a point that I am far from satisfied about;" and so he will continue to be, till he is fully satisfied with the Lord and his promises. See Isaiah xxvi. 3, 4: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." See also 1 Chron. v. 20; Psalm ix. 10.

The gentleman on Ashley Down, or Mr. Müller himself, cannot satisfy the soul who wishes to glorify God in his work. The Lord alone can and will.

It is very humbling, but true, what "The Head of a Mission" says respecting Christians giving, They forget 2 Cor. ix. 7, to give not grudgingly, or of necessity, "for God loveth a cheerful giver." Luke xvi. 9—11, all spoken to the followers of Christ.

And surely the greatness of a thing is no proof that it is of God. Saul had the thousands of Israel with him, while David had only a few hundreds.

To be really at peace and be satisfied, is to leave man and trust in the Lord alone, and if funds do not come in in answer to prayer, take it as a token from the Lord that the work must be curtailed, on the same principle as that we ought to lessen our expenditure when our income is reduced.

Surely we see that God can be honoured by reducing as well as increasing a work. He is not a hard master, but a loving Father, who would have his children look to Him for their daily bread, and has written, "He that believeth shall not make haste" (Isaiah xxvi. 16).

Let us all remember the lesson taught us in 1 Sam. xiii. 8—14. It was Saul who forced himself to do a religious act without waiting.

Let us be satisfied for the Lord to use us or not as He pleases, and not lean to our own understanding.

Wishing "The Head of a Mission," and all the Lord's children engaged in any work for good, every blessing,—Yours in Christ,

AN OLD MAN.

CONTENTS OF NO. 1.

Where is my wandering boy to-night?
One there is who loves thee
The mistakes of my life have been many
Long in darkness we have waited
Are you coming home, ye wanderers?
A ruler once came to Jesus by night
Fierce and wild the storm is raging
Why do you wait, dear brother?
Say, where is thy refuge, my brother?
Why perish with cold and with hunger?
From the riven Rock there floweth

CONTENTS OF No. 2.

What can wash away my stain?
Come, thou weary! Jesus calls thee
Should the death-angel knock at your chamber
The Gospel bells are ringing
Have you any room for Jesus?
Oh come, sinner, come! 'tis mercy's call
Make room for Jesus! room, sad heart!
Oh, do not let the Word depart
Brightly beams our Father's mercy
O Christ, in Thee my soul hath found
Light in the darkness, sailor!

CONTENTS OF No. 3.

When my final farewell to the world I have said
Standing by a purpose true
When the storms of life are raging
I have read of a beautiful city
Ring the bells of heaven! there is joy to day
I have heard of a land far away
"Land ahead!" its fruits are waving
Oh, tender and sweet was the Master' voice
'Tis the promise of God full salvation to give
When storms around are sweeping

CONTENTS OF No. 4.

Of course you know that to a d fro. throughout our glorious land
She only touched the hem of His ga ment
Our Master has taken His journey
Tempted and tried
Father, don't you hear the ang ls?
The prize is set before us
There is a Fountain filled with blood
Would you lose your load of sin?
Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin

To the Readers of The Christian.

Dear Friends,

I want to make an earnest appeal to you for help. As Secretary to the RESCUE SOCIETY, I have often had to ask your assistance. Much of that assistance has been rendered anonymously. I thank you most heartily for the aid you have extended to the Society through me for the long period of thirty years. The Society, with its many Homes full of inmates, is now in great need—in fact, absolutely without Funds. We have never yet been under the necessity of sending any of our inmates away, and I do trust in God we never shall.

I have been laid aside by illness for many weeks, and am now, under medical advice, compelled for a time to relinquish the labours in which I have so much delighted. I am ordered to take a long voyage—to New Zealand—and that without delay. How grateful I shall be to you if under these circumstances you should be led to send us assistance! Arrangements have been made by which the Society's work may, with God's blessing, go on as before. Applications, therefore, from you on behalf of any poor girl will receive every consideration.

Yours faithfully,

85, Queen Street, Cheapside, London. DANIEL COOPER.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

ON PREPARATION FOR PREACHING.

"The best preparation for preaching on Sundays," he used to say, "was to preach every day in the week." This he called "his good thirty-year old medicine," his "grand catholicon"; and when the physicians once prescribed a "perpetual blister," he said "he found perpetual preaching more effective." "A good pulpit-sweat, or a thirty-mile ride on horseback," he generally fancied, would set him right on the morrow. Preaching in the field he called his "airy pluralities"; the weather was spoken of, if fine, as "blessed itinerating weather"; his pulpits, those he preferred the most, were "mounts," and he had had considerable experience and variety in his time, for he had used horse blocks, inn tables, staircases, old walls, windmills, market crosses, brickyards, and scaffolds in abundance, to say nothing of the regular pulpits in churches and chapels. He esteemed being a field preacher a greater honour "than to be monarch of the universe." George II. said of him "There is no way of stopping George Whitefield but to make a bishop of him!" a remedy, unfortunately, efficacious in our own day.

SPECIAL SERVICES FOR THE DESTITUTE.

RAGGED CHURCH AND CHAPEL UNION. Office—4, Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross. Patron—The Right Hon. the Earl of SHAFTESBURY.—RULE I. The object of this Association is to raise Funds to assist in providing buildings for Places of Worship for the sole and exclusive use of the Destitute Poor of the Metropolis. Funds are Urgently Needed to meet the many Pressing Appeals made to the Committee. The number of Places of Worship connected with the Union is 100. Were that number multiplied tenfold there would be room for them. The Committee feel that they cannot too earnestly press upon all who are interested in Christ's work, that the class whom they seek to evangelise will not trouble themselves to seek after the Gospel. The Gospel must be carried to their very doors; they must be "compelled" to come in; and this can be accomplished only by establishing places for meeting to which they can resort without trouble and without form or ceremony. Such places can be maintained at a small expense or cost. Contributions will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, ARTHUR SPERLING, Esq., J.P.; Secretary, Mr. W. A. BLAKE, 4, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or by the Bankers, Messrs. SMITH, PAYNE, & SMITHS, 1, Lombard-street, E.C.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION. Office: 55, Haymarket, London, S.W. This Society is employing 120 Scripture Readers amongst the poor and destitute of London. They go from house to house, and from room to room, reading the Word of God, pressing its precious truths on men's acceptance, pleading with God in prayer for a blessing, and directing all with whom they come in contact to Jesus the Saviour of Sinners. We want to multiply Scripture Readers, for nothing, we believe, can supply the place of house-to-house visitation, and as surely bring the Word of God into immediate contact with individual souls. Funds are urgently needed, and will be thankfully received by either of the Undernamed: MARCUS RAINSFORD, Clerical Secretary; J. RODDAM TATE, Lay Secretary; or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout:

WHAT IS THEIR CAUSE, AND CAN THEY BE CURED?

OUR experience is nil as regards a cure for the symptoms—but happily our experience is in the treatment of their cause. For instance: a lady contracted Rheumatism and Sciatica in a very acute form, from a chill after a tepid swimming-bath early in the spring of 1882. She suffered most acutely, hers being a very rheumatic family. Many who knew her lamented sympathisingly that they could not point her to a remedy. Most of the reformed methods of treatment had been adopted by this lady for herself and children. Any or all of the remedies tried may have aided the recovery. The lady has, however, been free from rheumatic troubles for the past two or three months, notwithstanding the present damp and unfavourable winter, and she believes that Magnetism has mainly contributed to this result.

NO CURE FOR RHEUMATISM!!! We do not advocate a remedy for symptoms, but knowing that we have in our hands a remedy for their cause, we are justified in saying that Rheumatism is curable. Whoever doubts the possibility of so strengthening the physical powers as to enable them to overcome the tendency to chronic ailments, should read the following statements, and inquire of any of our patients among a list of 850 names.

From Mr. RICHARDSON, Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland.

"Feb. 13, 1883.—The Magnetic Appliance which you supplied me with some time since acted like a charm; I was suffering terribly from pains in the back, and hardly knew what to do with myself. After adopting your treatment the attacks grew less frequent and severe, and then after a period they ceased altogether. I owe this, under God, to the means used."

From Miss BROCKLEBANK, Plas Llandyfan, Menai Bridge.

"February 13, 1883.—I have derived so much benefit from your treatment, that I ought to have written you long ago. Although this has been a most damp and trying winter, I never enjoyed such good health for eighteen years, as I have since accepting your advice last spring. I attribute all my improvement to this instrumentality, and cannot speak too highly of it. I am now most energetic, and enjoy health with the strongest, after suffering acutely for twelve years."

From Miss MAGGIE LYONS, care of Mr. Anderson, Armagh:—

"Feb. 13.—I thank you for your prompt attention to all my communications. Your remedy for rheumatic gout has been so successful in my case, that I am anxious to recommend it wherever I go. Just a month ago I left home on a round of visits, enjoying it to the full, which I never could have done, but for your treatment. I am quite free from pain in all my joints, and the knots which had formed round them are going away, absorption or dispersion having thoroughly set in. I can stand now, and walk fairly straight. My general health has so much improved that it is like a magical work. A new life seems to course through my veins since my system became impregnated with the odo-magnetic influence. The pain, agony, and weariness have been exchanged for delicious sleep and rest. I can never, never say enough for your treatment of my case."

"Feb. 17, 1883.—I am your debtor, and ever will be while life lasts. I still improve, and gain a little every day; I suffer no pain or ache, for God has blessed the treatment of my case. I feel it my duty to state this most emphatically, whenever I am thrown in contact with a suffering individual."

Mr. Garratt will be happy to confer with inquirers in search of health, or with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment.

Every particular may be obtained free on application to B. COPSON GARRATT, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

WATCHING FOR SOULS.

By W. D. DUNN.

IT would, I believe, be a most profitable question for everyone of us to put to ourselves, "What am I doing for the salvation of poor perishing souls?" I solemnly believe the child of God who is not watching for souls and seeking to save them, is in a most deplorable condition; and the Christian Church which is not cultivating and manifesting an earnest evangelistic spirit is equally in a deplorable condition. One of the clearest marks of spiritual growth and prosperity is a deep longing to win precious souls to the feet of Jesus. This God-given anxiety will fill the soul with most generous emotions; yea, it will flow forth in copious streams of loving work for the Lord, ever flowing toward the poor Christless ones around us. It is truly a very difficult thing to believe that a soul can be saved by blood, and united to Christ by the Holy Ghost, and made a partaker of his gracious loving Spirit, and, after all, sit still from one year's end to another without making any effort in any way to rescue the perishing. The whole spirit of the Bible, and the conduct of all holy, consecrated souls, lift up a solemn testimony against such an one.

All God's great preachers of the Church have had what is called a passion for souls. John Smith, the holy Wesleyan preacher, used to say: "I am a broken-hearted man, not for myself, but on account of others; my God has given me such a sight of the value of precious souls, that I cannot live if souls are not saved. Oh, give me souls, or else I die!"

And, it is said, during the troublous times in this land of Scotland, when the Popish cortes and aristocracy were arming themselves to suppress the grand Reformation in this land, late on a Saturday night holy John Knox was seen to leave his study, and pass from his house down into an enclosure to the rear of it. He was followed by a friend, when after a few moments of silence, his voice was heard as if in prayer; in another moment his accents deepened into intelligible words, and the earnest petition went up from his struggling soul to heaven: "O Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" Then a pause of hushed stillness, when again the petition broke forth, "O Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" Once more all was voiceless, noiseless, when with a yet intenser pathos the thrice repeated intercession struggled forth from the man of God, "O Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" And God gave his child Scotland, in spite of Mary and her Popish priests.

And Brainerd could say of himself on more than one occasion, "I cared not where or how I lived, or what hardships I went through, so that I could but gain precious souls to Christ. While I was asleep I dreamed of these things, and when I waked the first thing I thought of was this great and solemn work. All my desire was for the conversion of souls, and all my hope was in God." Of Alleine, author of "The Alarm of Unconverted Sinners," it is said that "he was infinitely and insatiably greedy of the salvation of souls. To this end he poured out his very heart in prayer and preaching." O may our covenant-keeping Lord imbue all his witnesses with an insatiable thirst for the salvation of men; then we may count upon multitudes being won to the feet of the Lord Jesus Christ. It was "when Zion travailed she brought forth children."

Dear reader, "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest; behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest" (John iv. 35). In this country of ours at this moment there are multitudes as ready to receive the Gospel as a field of corn that is fully ripe is ready to be reaped. The fields are now made white to the harvest by the Holy Spirit of God; now is the time when the gathering of the people should be to Christ. Oh, let every preacher of the Gospel and every saint of God apply themselves to his work with the utmost vigour, to thrust in the sickle when the harvest is dead ripe! It is truly necessary to work now; pity that such a season as this should be let slip. If the corn that is ripe be not reaped it will shed and be lost, and the fowls will pick it up! If precious souls that are under deep conviction of sin, and being prepared of the Lord for the reception of his Gospel, be not helped now by the Lord's watchmen, their convictions will be stifled, and they will fall a prey to pretenders.

Let me narrate very briefly a few instances to show you how blessedly the people are being prepared by the Holy Ghost for his saving message.

I knocked at a cottage door lately, and a little motherly-looking woman responded. I handed her a Gospel book, which she very gladly received. Then, I asked her if she knew the Lord Jesus Christ as her own personal Saviour. "No, sir," said she, "but I do long to know Him; come in, please!" I went in and found the mother, not only deeply awakened, but her daughter also. I sat down beside them, and from the Scriptures pointed the two weeping ones to the "Lamb of God who beareth away the sin of the world." In a few minutes both of them professed to receive Christ Jesus the Lord. His peace and joy filled their hearts. After a word of prayer and thanksgiving I left, glorifying God for such a rich display of his saving grace.

When coming home by rail the other week from P——, where I had been preaching the Gospel over a fortnight, when the train stopped at one of the stations, two young ladies got into the same compartment beside me. After waiting on the Lord for an opening to speak to them, I gave them each a little book, which they carefully read. When I put the solemn question, "Are your souls saved for eternity?" one of them very joyfully exclaimed, "Yes, thank God, I am." The other said, "No; but I do wish I knew how to be saved." I said to her, "Have you been long anxious?" "Ever since Mr. Scroggie was in the Circus in Glasgow." Then I said, "Are you perfectly willing to receive the Lord Jesus Christ in this railway-carriage to be your Saviour now?" With tears running down her face, she said, "Yes, I am perfectly willing." I opened my Bible at John xix. 30, and read under the gaslight those precious words, "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, He said, it is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost." I repeated the word finished a few times over, then I said, "For whom did Jesus finish this work?" She replied slowly, but confidently, "For me." "Do you believe that Jesus on the cross finished the work for you?" "Oh, yes!" said the weeping one; "I cannot doubt that!" At this point I turned up John iii. 18, and read slowly those life-giving words, "He that believeth on Him is not condemned." As she stood up under the gaslight with her tearful eyes fixed on those precious words, her soul bounded into liberty, and she cried out in that railway carriage, "I am saved, I am saved! Praise, praise!"

In one of our inquiry-rooms the other week sat four fine young fellows, all anxious about their eternal interests. Three out of the four told me they had been anxious for months, and longing for some of God's people to speak to them of Christ. If time and space would allow, I could mention numbers of such cases.

Before I close, let me press upon my reader the deep necessity of private, earnest, personal dealing with precious souls, I am confident if we had more "Philips" we should have more "Nathanaels." If we had more "Andrews" we should have more "Simons." Oh, what amazing power there is in earnest, personal dealing. Of course it is all right enough to gather congregations together, and preach to them, as our God gives ability and opportunity. By all means use your churches, hire rooms, halls, and theatres, if you will; put out large bills, inviting people to come. Leave no lawful means untried to spread the glorious Gospel of the grace of God; seek to get at souls who are going down to hell as best you can. But does it not often happen at our public gatherings and preachings, that when the Gospel is preached, a hymn sung, and a word of prayer offered, all go away without any attempt at personal work? I speak not now of the preacher, who cannot possibly reach every case, but of the hundreds of Christians who have been listening to his ministry; they have seen men and women sitting beside them deeply anxious, they have seen the tear stealing down the cheek, and yet they have let them pass away without a loving, tender word or effort to win them to the feet of Jesus.

Oh, how cold, how dull, how dispiriting, it is to God's faithful ambassadors to see numbers of Christians clear out of the place the moment the address is over; no loving, lingering hearts gathering round new-born souls to speak a word in season to him that is weary; no tearful eyes looking round the place for the slain of the Lord; no feelings of sad disappointment when there are no precious jewels to gather to his dear feet. Oh, how unlike the weeping Lord, when He beheld the city in the awful place of rejection! If all were on the watch for souls we may rest assured we should see soul-stirring results. But if we are perfectly content to go on from week to week, month to month, and year to year, without a single case of conversion to God, our state of soul must be truly lamentable. My reader, let you and me wake up out of sleep, and deal personally with souls as we have never done before.

A teacher had among her pupils a young man of wicked habits. At last, when she heard that he was fast going down to hell, she sought grace and courage from the Lord to speak to him about Jesus. The young fellow was much affected by her earnest, loving appeal, moved, as he knew she was, by love for his soul. And when he had mastered his emotion, he said to her, in a tremulous voice, "Had anyone ever spoken to me before as you have to-night, I might have been a child of God long ago! But no one has thought me worth saving."

Bishop Wilson says, "We deceive ourselves if we fancy we have done our duty when we have given our people a sermon one day in seven. We must try always to gain a precious soul to Christ." May his matchless grace help us.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

Chap. IX.—RELIGIOUS ECONOMY.

"It shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee." (Ex. xviii. 22.)

"And nothing walks with aimless feet,
And not a worm is cloven in vain;
And not a moth with vain desire
Is shrivelled in a fruitless fire—
Or but subserves another's gain
When God hath made the pile complete."

THE God of Nature is a great Economist. Nothing exists simply for the sake of its loveliness. Each creation, however tiny, is made to travel toward many ends. A horror of waste everywhere prevails in physical laws. Christ showed plainly the oneness of the God of nature and of revelation when He said, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." A thoughtful economy in all sorts of pious expenditure is an evident duty, and merits well our earnest study.

"Political economy is the science which treats of the management and regulation of the resources of a nation, and of its productive property and labour." In like manner may religious economy be spoken of as a science, and this definition appropriated and adapted. The gravity of the issues at stake; the magnitude of the resources of the Church; the danger lest they should remain undiscovered or recklessly squandered; all justify the application to it of the name "science."

Each Church should steadily keep in sight the fact that

IT EXISTS FOR PURPOSES OF AGGRESSION.

It is part of God's invading army. A feeling of indebtedness should be cherished, and most carefully exhibited to those who dwell within the nearer circumference. No Church ever loved too many populations, or loved them too well, but to each Church the call that rings the most loudly is the command to bring good to those placed by Providence at its doors. About the only exception to this is, where the congregation is wholly aristocratic, and where there are scarcely any poor close at hand. Then a protégé may be taken up with, in the shape of some needy, struggling cause miles away, in city or village, and large—but not pauperising—donations sent to this. Anyhow, the debt to humanity is a debt of honour, and God expects us to pay to the suffering and sinful something of what we owe to Him. The passion for conquest is to have a foremost place amongst the militant host, and the outgrowths of that passion ought to occupy much of our counsels. Just because this is not recognised, there is not nearly enough encouragement given to the evangelistic spirit. If all Churches would but return to the point of their first formation, re-consider their responsibilities, and make aggressiveness a first necessity of their constitution, well would it be for the semi-heathen of this land! Every Church needs to be frequently stirred up on this great subject.

To this end each religious community of large or moderate size, as well as some of the smaller ones, should have

A "COMMITTEE FOR EXTENSION."

The name of this body is quite a secondary matter, and the thing signified should be shaped and well based. Whether formed from both sexes, or from one only, the utmost discretion should be shown in the choice of members. There should be enlisted into it a variety of experience and character. Let its office be clearly understood. No finality should be allowed to it—or there might be jealousy and dispute between it and the older accredited courts. If these were galled into opposition, it would be most unfortunate, for some who would not actively oppose might become dead weights. But if such a committee were discreetly conducted, and quietly kept within its own province, suggestions of high value would be yielded by it, and, through its advice, initiatory movements entered upon which would end in the reclamation of the bruised and ruined, and of the hitherto careless as well.

The reply may be given, that "the Churches have already committees enough, and that the time of their prominent members is too much taken up by them." That is quite true, but, sad to say, these exist for purposes of conservation for the most part, and by their means aggression has been deprived of its claims to our time and thought.

Any economy which will not find room for aggression is false and self-destructive. If complexity of polity stand in the way, it must be interfered with at all hazards, though, to be sure, it is vastly easier to add to methods for conservation pure and simple than to lessen their number. But to take the initiative, and, neglecting the merely defensive, to plunge at the heart of the assailant foe, is sometimes the wisest course, as was plainly testified in the Seven Years' War.

If religious economy is to be formulated, and worked on right principles, the governing body of each Church ought to be made up of capable persons. We may set out on right lines, but if the guide be unskilful, or inimical, we shall soon find ourselves on wrong ones. Ill-considered directions spoil wise expedients. Incapable officers mean a demoralised army. Now, very much of any Church. Of course he is acted upon by his people—being in one place well-nigh swamped by worldliness, and in another pleasantly incited to new passion for souls. But he also acts upon his flock, and, by virtue of his very call, is supposed to be greatly above the average Christian in knowledge, spirituality, and force of heart. No amount of money spent in procuring and properly educating good pastors is ill-spent. At the same time, "We must have somebody polished and social," means mischief. If all the stress be laid upon these qualities, and the higher qualities which the Holy Spirit delights to honour are ignored, then a bad economy has prevailed. If the mainspring act wrongly the wheels and leverages will prove erratic. How much better that an agreement should be made between pastor and people. On his side the question goes forth, "Will you release me from some of the duties of the pastorate, and relieve me of some of the smaller and less important evening meetings? Will you be content with fewer pastoral visits for the sake of those around you who neglect public worship? If you will consent to this, I will go out into the highways and hedges." On their side the answer is given, "We will endeavour to keep up our organisation even though some of your care be withdrawn. We will cheerfully part with a slice of your time so as to give you opportunity to do the work which lies near your heart, and, more than that, we will follow your leadership, and will help you in any way you may think fit to dictate." As a part of religious economy such an arrangement would be praiseworthy, and, if this had been generally done, we should not have had to bewail the smallness of attendance as loudly as we have been doing.

A wise use of the resources of a Church depends also upon its

OFFICE-BEARERS.

Talkative, ambitious, forward men, push themselves into official positions, and sometimes the money qualification is absorbingly looked at. Lucre becomes the key of office. It is notorious that men of wealth are prone to rank themselves with those who are "at ease in Zion." A plutocracy is little better than a mobocracy. If the second unduly excites, the first unduly stagnates. The select men, whether they belong to the ambitious or the wealthy class, have often curbed, unwisely, the aggressive spirit. They are prone to do all they can to monopolise the leisure and some of the work-hours of the pastor. If he breaks from their own little circle, all the worse for him! How can inroads be made on the empire of sin under such conditions? No! let there be an honest effort made to secure for the chief places men who have thought painfully on the problems of the times; or men who, though naturally self-contained and reticent, are content to sacrifice for the good of others what they relish the most, and to accept much that does not accord with their tastes; or men who have fulness of faith in the adaptation of the Gospel to all classes of mind and life, and who dread nothing so much as being unhelpful in the work of filling the land with Christian truth. Rich men are not always unsympathetic; and sometimes, and especially in working-class Churches, it is good to put into office two or three who, either in wealth or in mental caste, are head and shoulders above the rest. "All on a level" may mean "All in a quarrel."

(To be concluded.)

TRAINING HOME, HACKNEY.

FRIENDS of destitute children will be glad to know that seventy of these are being cared for. Visitors will find the youthful schoolmaster (for several years a helper on the farm at Galt) ready to give them a warm welcome, so also will a Canadian lady who is sowing in our large family seeds of loving kindness, which we pray will bring forth fruit in the New Dominion of Canada as they grow into manhood woven in among the people.

After listening for four months to stories of sorrow, our own heart got a little overstrained; therefore during February we have come apart to rest awhile.

In a recent letter to me the young schoolmaster says: "I have great pleasure in reporting that we are all well; the boys are looking the very pictures of health, and are as happy as the day is long. It would do you good to see them all gathered around the tables in the dining-room, with their different monitors, all busy playing at different games. We continue to enjoy the Master's presence, and are endeavouring to plant the good seed, in sure hope of the result being for the glory of God. The more I have to do with the boys the more I enjoy it."

Fifty of these youths will start on March 29th for Canada, where Mrs. Merry is corresponding with farmers about a home for each.

FUNERAL REFORM.—At a recent meeting in York of the Church of England Funeral and Mourning Reform Association, the Archbishop of York and others spoke warmly in favour of the objects of the society. The new Archbishop of Canterbury has expressed himself in similar terms.

PREACHING "THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

THE Lord Jesus Christ said, "This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world." The Apostle Paul, reviewing his service with the elders of the Church in Ephesus, said that he had gone amongst them preaching "the kingdom of God." And at the end of the Acts of the Apostles, he is referred to as preaching "the kingdom of God," and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ.

The question I desire to suggest for the quiet thought of some who read your paper, comprising, doubtless, many who endeavour to serve God in the Gospel of his Son, is whether, if an account were given of their labours, it would be accurate to say that they preached "the kingdom of God."

In a general sense I apprehend it is true that all who set forth Christian truth, either its negative or its positive side, who make known the merciful provision of deliverance from sin, guilt, sorrow, and wrath, or of righteousness, sanctification, and eternal happiness, do in some degree preach "the kingdom of God." Still the words contain a greater fulness than that. Also in a statement of that character, man's need and happiness come more prominently into view, whilst in the words "the kingdom of God" the Divine element prevails.

The importance of the subject might be inferred, if proof could be necessary, from the statement that the Lord Jesus showed Himself alive to the Apostles after his passion by many infallible proofs, appearing unto them by the space of forty days, and speaking of the things concerning "the kingdom of God." The very expression is calculated to raise our thoughts God-ward. And that God should be first, is of immeasurable importance. The principle is of wide application. It would, for instance, prevent us as parents from pressing upon our children the account of the serpent, and of our first parents' fall, in the third chapter of Genesis, until they had taken in happy thoughts, which they are quite ready to do, of God Himself, and his goodness, wisdom, and kindness in creation, and in all his arrangements, as narrated in the first and second chapters. There is a right order in the presentation of truth; and we do well to observe and to follow it.

For want of perceiving this principle accurately, it may be that some addresses come short of the good which they might accomplish. How often does a speaker commence in this way: he begins with man's ruined and lost condition, and narrates the sin of Adam; and it is explained that by Adam's one act of disobedience he not only became a sinner himself, but involved his descendants.

All true; yet the principle underlying such mode of preaching is, that man and his condition should be contemplated first, which is not the order of a Gospel address according to the pattern of the discourses in the Acts of the Apostles. I say pattern, for the discourses should be studied not only for the truths contained in them, but to learn the order in which the Apostles presented them.

Let us refer to some of these discourses in the Acts. See the second chapter, and mark how "God," and his purposes and works, come first:—

Jesus, authenticated of "God"—signs which "God" did—counsel of "God"—"God" raised up—"God" had sworn—to the right hand of "God" exalted—received of "the Father" the promise of the Holy Spirit—"God" hath made both "Lord" and "Christ" this Jesus whom ye crucified. (Acts ii.)

The "God" of our fathers—the "God" of Abraham hath glorified—"God" raised—"God" foreshowed—"He" thus fulfilled—times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the "Lord"—"He" will send—"God" spoke—the covenant which "God" made—"God" having raised up his servant, sent Him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities (Acts iii.).

The "God" of this people chose—"He" exalted and led them forth—"He" suffered—"He" destroyed—"God" gave Judges—"God" gave Saul—"He" removed him—"He" raised up David—"He" bore witness—"I" have found—"My" will—"God" brought unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus—"God" raised Him from the dead—the promise made, "God" hath fulfilled in that "He" hath raised up—"my" Son—"I" have begotten—"He" hath spoken—"I" will give—"He" saith also in another place—"Thou" wilt not suffer—the counsel of "God"—whom "God" raised up (Acts xiii.).

"God" that made—"Lord" of heaven and earth dwelleth not in sanctuaries made with hands, nor is "He" to be served as if "He" were needy—"He" Himself giveth all things; "He" made and hath determined—"He" is not far—offspring of "God"—God overlooked, now commandeth—"He" hath appointed—"He" will judge—"He" hath given assurance—"He" hath raised Him from the dead (Acts xvii.)

From these notes it will be seen that the Apostles, whether they were addressing Jews at Jerusalem, or Jews and religious proselytes at Antioch, or idolaters (yet worshippers of "God" unknown) at Athens, commenced with the word of knowledge, which knowledge was about "God" Himself, his Christ, his character, and his works.

How very sensitive, how impressionable, is the spirit of man which is in him. How important, therefore, that he who with well-intentioned efforts seeks to touch it with words of truth, should follow the Divine order, and that with tenderness, wisdom, love, and skill.

The Apostles thus gave God the first place; and while they also spoke, of course, of men, our state, our need, and the provision for us, thoughts of God pre-eminently, not secondarily, permeated their minds, and flowed out from the abundance of their hearts.

Next, as in the Apostles' preaching God was first considered, what of the preaching itself?

Perhaps many of us have listened to, or have given, a Gospel address, say on the words, that "Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them;" and many true words have been spoken which unquestionably God has blessed. Are we, however, quite satisfied that the preaching has really been such as is meant by the words, that "Philip proclaimed unto them the Christ"? Each of us trusts so, indeed. Nevertheless let it be patiently observed that a few verses on we read, "but when they believed Philip preaching good tidings concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." Thus, as regards the speaker, it is said he "preached Christ"; and as regards the hearers, that they heard the things concerning "the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." May not something more have been contained in Philip's proclamation than in ours? Does it not seem that in preaching Christ, the truth, and the centre of truth, Philip so preached Him as to involve, if only by an initiatory statement at first, yet still so as to proclaim the circumference of Divine truth, with Christ for its central sun?

Proceeding with the fact that the preaching was a preaching of "the kingdom of God," let us next notice that those words never actually occur in the discourses narrated. This is just like the Book of Esther, wherein the word "God" is never mentioned; but the Book is nevertheless full of God, as may be seen by those who have a seeing eye, and heard by those who have a hearing ear. The name, character, and dealings of God are ever discoverable, though the word "God" does not actually occur.

In a subsequent paper I will proceed to trace how, while the words "the kingdom of God" are not narrated as having been spoken in those discourses, it was, nevertheless, preached or proclaimed.

MEDICAL MISSIONS TO JEWS.

DEAR SIR,—Since I wrote to you four weeks ago about Missions to Jews and Mohammedans, a letter from a well-known Jewish Missionary in Jerusalem has come under my notice, which I think it well to make public. I do so hoping that English Christians will consider the claims of God's ancient people, as well as the wonderful openings presented by Medical Missions in such a country as Palestine, in many towns and villages in which there is no medical skill at present available. A modestly equipped Medical Mission might be maintained by an individual Christian, and might be expected to bring to him a rich recompense from the God of Israel.

"For the last forty years," says this writer, "the agents of the Jewish Mission here have paid periodical visits to all the towns of Palestine in which Jews are settled, and in which a permanent Mission was not possible; that is to say, to Hebron, Tiberias, and Safet, as well as to Haifa and Jaffa.

"Leaving the latter two places aside, because there are European doctors established there, we have had every evidence from various quarters that in Hebron, as well as in Safet and Tiberias, the time has come when permanent Mission stations might be opened. In Hebron no attempt has yet been made to preach the Gospel to the Mohammedams, whilst the Jews are only once a year visited by Jewish missionaries, accompanied by a medical man; if this state of things is at last to be altered, a Medical Mission must be opened there, so that both Jews and Mohammedans may have regular opportunities of getting to know the Gospel.

"A Medical Mission would be welcomed by all classes of the population in Hebron, and it would be a glorious thing if it could be established, for we may then expect Christian influence to gain ground in the whole neighbourhood. Fancy a population of 5000, one fourth of whom are Jews, with no provision for medical relief, so that patients must either be left uncared for, or taken a seven hours' ride to Jerusalem. For Safet and Tiberias it would be like starting a new career to have Mission stations opened and the Gospel brought to the people now perishing for lack of knowledge.

"That readiness for the opening of Medical Mission stations should coincide in point of time with the beginning of the return of the Jews to their own land, which we are now witnessing, is a fact which lends special importance and special interest to the work I am anxious to commend to notice."

I may add that precisely similar testimony to the needs of the places named, and the probable success of Medical Missions if there established, has reached us from the ladies engaged in the Mildmay Medical Mission at Jaffa; they are proving what a power there is in the blessed combination of the ministry of the Gospel with the ministry of healing.—Yours sincerely,

James E. Mathieson.

"IN DEFENCE": MOSES AND CHRIST.*

DR. PATERSON'S work is specially suitable for that large class of readers who have no desire to enter deeply into critical questions, but who, nevertheless, wish to know what can be said in favour of the Pentateuch, and who will also be glad to learn how much there is in it that is worth defending. The book is characterised by a simple directness, combined with a frank and fearless expression of opinion and a deep insight into the inner meaning of Scripture, which should make it at once popular, and, in the highest sense, helpful. The author's own position regarding the Bible is confessed at the outset:—

In entering upon this course of Bible studies, I am anxious to define carefully, exactly, and clearly, the position which I occupy in regard to the Divine Word. I accept it honestly and fully as God's revelation to me. I recognise in it a human element and a Divine element, just as I recognise in the person of my risen Lord divinity and humanity. . . . It is God speaking to me in the language of my race, and the language is intelligible, and definite, and sufficient. I do not dare to judge this Word; for, indeed, it judges me. I sit at God's feet, speaking to me in the Bible, as a scholar, and not as a critic. I do not worship the Book, but I worship the God who speaks to me in the Book, and, since it is his Book, it commands my conscience, and I pray that it may govern my heart and my life. . . . I have meddled with some sciences, and I am not ignorant of the speculations of our day, but I have seen no reason to change the faith of my childhood. I accept the Bible as I was taught in my earliest days, simply and altogether as the Book of God, and there is no part of it, from Genesis to Revelation, with which I dare find, or could find, cause of quarrel; it is to me all true from beginning to end.

It may be asked on what grounds he bases these bold assertions, and how it happens that he possesses a faith so full and unwavering in the midst of so much questioning and doubt. His answer to this question is equally clear and direct. He does not profess to be an unerring judge of what is inspired or non-inspired. He does not believe the Pentateuch to be the work of Moses and the Word of God because of its power to impress and "to find" him, as Coleridge phrased it. His faith rests on a surer foundation than that. There is another miracle that is confessed by all, and that touches us more nearly; it is the personality and work of the Lord Jesus. What this book was to Him we can safely make it to be to us:—

Jesus Christ not only tells me God's thoughts, but gives me also God's Word, with the impress of his own assurance that these ancient Scriptures are God's previous revelations to mankind. To discover and demonstrate the history of the Jewish canon would be a very difficult task. We are not sure who collected these books; some people tell us that we do not even know who wrote them, and that a great deal of mystery rests upon the origin of these books which can only be lessened by the subtleties of critical conjecture . . . . Well, I stand upon the fact that we are linked with Jesus by the Lord's Supper and the Lord's Day. He says "Moses wrote of Me." Quoting the words of God spoken by his servant Moses, He asserts "David in the Psalms wrote of Me. This prophet and that prophet wrote of Me." Thus Jesus authenticates to me the whole Jewish canon, as received in his time, and I am not anxious to enter into the question, or take part in the controversy about the dates or the authors of these books. What Christ tells me I believe, and when He speaks concerning God's past revelations to men, I am content to receive his canon, implicitly resting upon his word. . . . We do not need to know Hebrew, we do not require to study antiquities or any of the sciences, to know that this is God's Book. Christ's word settles the question at once and for ever.

These words express the deep conviction of multitudes in this country, who will be thankful to find it so fitly and fearlessly stated. It is enough for them that Jesus found in these books the Word of God, and that his apostles have handed them to us as Scriptures inspired of God, and able to make us wise unto salvation. They feel there is nothing to be ashamed of in owning themselves "traditionalists" with such a sanction as this behind them.

The book consists, with the addition of a number of interesting and valuable appendices, of six lectures. The first deals with the science which bears the unhappy name of "Biblical Criticism." The axiom, on which so much of this so-called science is based, that the Old Testament Scriptures are simply Hebrew literature, is bound to lead to disaster.

If the claim I have advanced upon the attestation of Christ is really such as I have attempted to show, then it is quite evident with what spirit and with what mind we ought to come to the Bible. I may find in it things I do not understand, I may find things that I cannot co-arrange, the contents may seem contradictory and opposite to the conclusions I have reached in other spheres; so be it, I am content to wait, for I believe that if I knew more, if my knowledge in these other spheres were greater, then my difficulties would vanish. But if I come to this Book, believing it to be merely a human book, and to be judged as other human books are judged, and, because of its origin, likely to be filled with mistakes and difficulties, then I may acknowledge these to be difficulties that can never be explained away, and mistakes that can never be corrected.

There is a sphere, however, for criticism, when it comes not as an opponent, but as a servant of faith.

I do not think there can be any objection to fair criticism of the Bible; indeed, we do not criticise it enough, if you mean by criticism an examination of its contents to make sure that we have the Word in the state in which God originally gave it. All attempts to find out the true original, to verify the actual language in which God gave to man his word in the beginning, such criticism I welcome with all my heart. . . . We welcome it further when it endeavours to interpret for us by all grammatical and other appliances the exact meaning of those words in which God gave his revelation at first to men.

But when criticism attempts to go beyond these limits its pretensions are self-refuted.

Those subtle critics who claim to possess what they call a power of higher criticism are proved to be in the wrong by a simple fact which is apprehensible by any ordinary person so soon as it is stated. They tell us that they can point out how much Moses wrote, or how much Isaiah wrote, and how much other people wrote, by an inner consciousness, a capacity which enables them to detect various styles and variety of treatment; and yet in spite of this inner consciousness they contradict each other, and we find almost as many schools of critics as there are separate critics. One man finds three writers in Genesis, while another discovers seven; they are not agreed among themselves, though they have this inner faculty which enables them to detect styles and characteristics; they are self-contradictory, and each man becomes the standard whereby he determines his own result. The fact is, each man re-edits the Bible according to his own nature, or wish, or idea, so that it becomes merely a book after his own heart.

The other five lectures deal with the Books of the Pentateuch, and the suggestive headings are a true index to the manner in which the Books are approached and dealt with: "Genesis—the Beginning," "Exodus—Redemption," "Leviticus—Worship," "Numbers — Pilgrimage," "Deuteronomy — Obedience." As might be expected, the lecture on Genesis takes the reader over a wide range of subjects, to which, interesting though they are, our space forbids our adverting. We may note, however, that the unique character of Genesis as compared with other "sacred books," and the traditions which the nations have preserved of the events which it records, are well brought out.

Tell me, where do we find such an account as that given in the Bible—so simple, so truth-like? Are there any other statements to compare with it? Take the best of heathen mythologies, the record of the thoughts of the wisest human thinkers—for these are not confined to Canaan, to the wilderness, to the land of Egypt—take, then, the writings of the wisest of men and tell me, do you find there anything at all corresponding to what we read in the opening chapter of Genesis? All honest men who have examined such ancient writings will at once reply, we do not!* There are certain corresponding elements, evidently derived from the same source. All systems of mythology bear tokens—some more and some less—of a strange relationship to the contents of the earlier Scriptures; . . . wherever you go you find that a shadow, more or less faint, of the Bible Revelation existed in the minds of men. Here, however, we have no faint shadow; we find the full blaze of Divine revelation in God's book of Origins.

Two remarks which indicate one of the best features of Dr. Paterson's book, may also detain us a moment. The antediluvian history, though short, contains three important names. These three, Abel, Enoch, and Noah, bear witness to three important truths. Abel . . . gives testimony to the truth that only by sacrifice in which blood is shed can sinful man find acceptance with God. We read in his history that man is justified by faith. Enoch thereafter, in his devout fellowship with God, singularly free from asceticism and seclusion, and in the consequent holiness of a life pleasing to God, gives testimony to the fact that man is sanctified by faith. And Noah, who built the Ark, and passed through judgment safely, testifies to to the fact that by faith we are saved from wrath. "I may note, in passing, that the Ark rested on the mount on the seventeenth day of the seventh month. Now we are told that at the institution of the Passover, the seventh month became the first month. And, as the Passover took place on the fourteenth day of the month, our Lord rose from the dead three days after, that is, on the seventeenth day of the month. Hence our Lord Jesus Christ rose again from the dead on the same day that the Ark rested on Mount Ararat, when Noah and his family emerged from the Ark in typical resurrection life, having passed through the waters of judgment."

MISSION WORK IN BERLIN.

THE Lord's work continues greatly to prosper in our hands. We have been led to engage a Christian young man and his wife as helpers in our Mission, and we are thankful to say that they prove in every way suitable and efficient. Our meetings continue to be well attended, and on Sunday evenings, as well as Thursday evenings, when we have preaching or lecturing services, every available bit of room is taken. But most thankful we are to see how the number of converts increases from month to month; how the converts set to work and help in Sunday-school work, tract distribution, &c. Our young men's Bible-class has become quite a Bible-class with working-men, and some of those who have been converted help in the conducting of it, or contribute their testimony to the power and blessing of the Gospel.

Our Mission-rooms are not large enough to accommodate the people, and we are making special efforts to erect an iron Mission church. The cost of such a building, which might, if needful, be transferred to another site in Berlin at a future time, will be about £300, to accommodate 300 people. We have already received £87 towards the building. We greatly rejoice in the blessing which Mr. von Schluembach has brought in several parts of Berlin. We need more Christian workers, and an alliance among them, that the unbelieving world may see that we live and work together for one Master, even Jesus Christ.

"OUT OF THE MOUTH OF BABES."

DEAR SIR,—As many children have been writing to you lately, I thought I would tell you about my little sister Mary. She is only two years old. She nearly always begins to sing as soon as she awakes in the morning. Last Sunday morning she awoke singing :

"Did the Saviour say them nay?
No, He kindly bade them stay,
Suffered none to turn away,
Little ones like me."

We have no piano. My father is not rich. But he has an English concertina, and teaches us children to sing lots of nice hymns. Father tells me that he knew nothing about music until he was thirty-four years old; then he taught himself, because he wanted all of us children to sing for Jesus.

Would it not be nice if all fathers would teach their children to sing for the Lord Jesus, who died that we might be forgiven?

DAISY (aged 10).

THE STORY OF A MISSION BOX.

BY MRS. CAVALIER.

I was selected because I was strong, had a good lock, and two bolts. I was medium size, and was made air and water-tight. I little thought how necessary this was, until I had found out the climate to which I was sent. Ah! I preserved my goods through many a shower, such showers as are seldom, if ever, seen in England; for I was sent from the land in which I was made to an island far away. It was a very beautiful island. Hill and dale, wood and water, trees of varied foliage, and flowers of gayest hues prevailed. No one knew this better than I, for I visited so many places during my stay there. As I went about from one bungalow to another, I always met with a warm welcome, as soon as my errand was understood. Children would gather round me, as I stood near the verandah table, and with wistful eyes and busy fingers, look over the things I brought. I afforded great pleasure in my travels, especially to the little ones, who could not see the pretty things you children can gaze at in the shop windows in England.

There would be a ball for Willie, reins with bells for Fred, a doll for Daisy, and as for Baby, she always came in for a large share. How the old Ayah admired her, in a pretty new flannel frock, white muslin pinafore, with ribbon bows and sash, and white knitted socks, all of which I had brought for sale! A rattle or soft ball in her hand, made her sweet face light up with sunny smiles. Mamma must have something; so she chooses two nice texts, in cardboard, illuminated with real pressed flowers and ferns, the whole neatly framed. Then Papa—I managed to supply him with several treasures. Fine warm knitted socks, to keep his feet dry when the monsoon set in, and he would have to climb all about his mountainous coffee estate in the drenching rain. He calls, "Appoo,* ingi va," i.e., "Appoo, come here," and there is a print frock and scarf for Appoo's little child, and a supply of dusters, ready hemmed, for use in the bungalow. Appoo's pearly teeth are shown, as he says, "Now Master no see dust!" Nor does the pleasure end here. The nursery for many a long day is made attractive by pretty pictures of animals, flowers, &c. Then Willie began his lessons out of his new book, and Daisy amused herself with filling in a kettle-holder, which she had chosen from amongst my contents.

After the antimacassars, ornaments, and cushions, suitable for the drawing-room or verandah, had been greatly admired, and some of them bought, I was packed up again, till by and by I was wanted by others, who had seen the things I had brought. The money I was the means of raising by the sale of these things helped to support schools, in which many little heathen children were daily learning of the love of Jesus.

Where did you get all these things? you may ask. I will tell you. They were sent for me by many kind friends in England, whose hearts had been touched with sympathy when they heard how many little boys and girls, in that beautiful island, were being taught to worship idols of wood and stone. Many of these little ones are taken to a temple, which they regard as being very sacred, to offer flowers, &c., at a shrine, on which is placed a very beautiful casket, made of gold. Inside this are several smaller caskets; and what do you think the innermost one contains? A piece of bone, which looks very like a boar's tusk, but which their priests tell them was one of Bhudda's teeth! They are taught that by worshipping this tooth they will gain very great merit. Do you not wish that these little children could learn of the merit of our Lord Jesus Christ? Those kind friends I spoke of wished it, and it was on that account that they took so much trouble in working the pretty things I have told you about. I felt quite proud to have anything to do with them. But above all, I prized some gifts from my little black friends. At their weekly sewing meetings they made some balls, mats, and worked embroidery, &c. The dusters of which I spoke were hemmed by them, and sold for the Mission. So you see that even amongst the little black girls we had a

JUVENILE MISSIONARY WORKING PARTY.*

Ah! the poor Coolie's head often ached with my load (for he carried me on his head!), and glad enough was he when at some distant bungalow the burden was lightened for him, and some of my contents sold. During my long journeys I used to think how much happier my little friends in England would be, spending some of their time to supply me with pretty things; for they would feel they were working for others. I sighed inwardly for some light things, which would relieve the weight on my poor Coolie's head, for I really pitied him, as he rested, wiping the perspiration from his black face, and adjusting a cloth around his head, which served as a pad or cushion for me to rest on. At times I dreaded his head appearing amongst my pretty things; for I was only made of tin, which was in danger of giving way, on account of the constant rubbing, as the Coolie carried me jog-trot along over many a rugged path. So in time I was made head-proof, by having a strong board fitted beneath me to save such a disaster.

But I have not named the things I longed for. I took a great fancy to two doll milkmaids I once took to a sale at a bungalow. I had better tell you how they were attired. They wore blue dresses and white aprons, from each hand was suspended a reel of cotton for a milk-pail, at her side hung a small cushion, filled with pins, and a thimble was arranged as head-gear. Then there were some small flower-baskets, lined with red or blue llama, suitable for ladies' work; waggons of cotton, ready to be drawn, made from American cloth; pretty cases filled with pins and needles, babies' socks in great variety; also some wee shoes, made in soft leather or flannel, and bound with narrow ribbon; knitted vests and petticoats, and many pretty pinafores. I saw several pretty book-markers, mats, dolls, beds made from boxes, dolly sweetly asleep within the pretty curtains; pink and blue glazed calico, books filled with gay pictures for the little ones.

But I shall tire my young readers if I name any more of these nice things; yet when they had been sold, I longed for others like them, and my longing will not have been in vain if my young friends will at once set to work and make something to cheer me on my way, so that my load may always be replenished, and then the drenching rain or hot sun will never daunt my efforts for the happiness of others.

"Little hearts will happy be
If little eyes will always see
That little hands do work for Thee,
Our God and King.

"Little feet can swiftly go,
Little lips let others know
That all can love to Jesus show,
By work and prayer.

"Then hearts and hands together blend,
And never rest till we can send
The message of our Saviour Friend
To India's shore."

*Appoo is the name given to the chief servant.

*Are there any children whose hearts are touched with love and sympathy for their little Indian sisters? If willing to help, contributions of work or money will be thankfully received by Mrs. Cavalier, Emville, Herbert-road, Woolwich.

MR. J. M. SCROGGIE IN GLASGOW.

EVANGELISTIC work is progressing in Glasgow. Mr. Scroggie's meetings in the Buchanan Memorial Free Church, in the south-east of the city, have been successful in attracting the multitudes and in impressing them when attracted. Like Paul at Thessalonica, he reasoned out of the Scriptures on three successive Sabbaths and on the intervening week-day evenings, and the people manifested a remarkable willingness to come to hear. On Sabbath the large church was packed in every corner, and on week-days the area was full.

A new attraction was added to this series of meetings in the way of conducting the service of sacred song. It was arranged that of three of Glasgow's sweetest singers one should be present each night to lead the praise, and they were supported by a choir of about thirty voices. Sometimes these sweet singers sang the Gospel alone; sometimes they sang the hymn, while the choir and the audience joined in the chorus; and sometimes all united in one swell of praise. God's blessing was sought on the service of praise, and it was not denied. Frequently the handkerchief was brought out to wipe away the tears awakened by the Gospel truth brought home to the heart by the sweet singing of God's believing and praying children. Let the leaders of praise be converted men and women, and God will go with them in their singing.

At the after-meeting for dealing with anxious inquirers the numbers increased night after night. The closing meeting of the series was a testimony meeting. At the end, all those who either at that series of meetings, or on any previous occasion, had given the heart to the Lord, were asked to stand; fully four hundred responded to the call. It was an impressive sight. May the Shepherd of Israel keep them!

Mr. Scroggie is now carrying on the same work in Falkirk. Will those who read this brief notice of his work in the south-east of Glasgow breathe a prayer in his behalf, that "The spirit of power and of love and of a sound mind" may rest on him? And will they also breathe a prayer for the same blessed spirit to rest on him who writes this notice? A. C. FULLARTON.

MESSRS MOODY AND SANKEY.

THE WORK IN BELFAST.

THE short account I sent you of the opening of the mission of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in Belfast, on Sunday, 11th inst., was necessarily very hurried and imperfect. I now add a few jottings more in detail.

The deep impression made, in the services on the opening day, by the Truth, has not only continued, but become deep and spiritual, as far as man can judge. The town seems astonished—the most thoughtless asking what it means—such multitudes with eagerness crowding to the meetings, some two hours before the advertised time, and even some turning away from the overflow meetings, unable to gain admission.

First let me say, in general, that the effects of the former visit, now some eight years ago, have been large and deep and permanent. It is within the field of my own knowledge that many, then savingly converted to God, are occupying nearly every department of Christian usefulness. Some are now missionaries to the heathen; some are labouring in the colonies; some are ministers at home; a large number, engaged in commercial pursuits, are among the most active and honoured workers for God that could be named. All this is within the range of my individual experience.

I may further state, that all competent witnesses would willingly testify that the sea-level of the Christian's life and spiritual activity, specially as regards the duty and the privilege of working together with God for the inbringing of that kingdom which is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, has been greatly raised.

The Church of God is yet a long way from the grace of faithfulness in this. Multitudes, who have a Church connection, do nothing in the Andrew-like work of finding their brother and bringing him to Jesus; they rather, standing around Christ, bar the way of access, and hinder the depraved and the downcast from getting access to Him. The former visit of our brethren did much to expose the sin and self-deceit of this lazy life, and to urge all the Lord's people to "work, for the night is coming." We entertain the hope that this visit will be greatly blessed in the same direction.

Another blessed fruit of the former visit was to draw members of different Churches nearer to each other. Mr. Moody stands upon a vantage-ground for such a work. The friend of all, and yet unconnected with any of the British Churches, he can call upon all to regard Christ more than the Church, and the advance of his Kingdom more than the building up of one's own denomination.

Let me give your readers a view of the meetings as far as they have gone, as they appear to the eye of man. There are glories and sights observed only by Him who searches the heart, as He views the operation of his Spirit on multitudes of hearts—as He hears the cry for mercy, and with gladness accepts the submission of believing and contrite hearts. The Bible-readings, arranged for three o'clock, are crowded by half-past one, and overflow meetings gathered in the adjoining churches. Some three thousand people are waiting, engaged meanwhile in singing praises to God, an hour before the appointed time. The meeting is begun: Mr. Sankey, a sweet singer in Israel, voices one of his well-known hymns. As he sings he awakens memories of eight years ago: emotion is seen in many a heaving breast, it pours from many a moistened eye, and is witnessed by the upturned glance of many a thankful heart.

Mr. Moody gives his Bible-reading on some of his old subjects, which seem to be the pasture-ground on which his own soul has been nourished all these years. The subjects, some of them familiar from former years, are yet fresh. They have received a new setting, and not that exactly; rather, they are filled with new and fresh life. Nothing which the Spirit of God uses is old. A text, a verse, a hymn, which once may have been full of spiritual life to us, may many times afterwards to us have seemed to contain nothing, yet, when used by the Spirit, it becomes as fresh as if we had never heard it. A growing Christian's utterances are always fresh, for they have that which all God-taught men share, but cannot define, which we have agreed to call "unction." Mr. Moody's addresses have a virgin freshness, though, I doubt not, necessarily often given.

The meetings for women in Fisherwick-place have nightly increased in interest and power. Perhaps I may explain, that the want of a large hall in Belfast, with fair acoustic properties, has thrown upon both brethren a very large amount of additional labour. For this reason, chiefly, we have had to separate the sexes. The number of inquirers at the women's meetings has steadily increased. It is impossible yet to say how many profess to have accepted Jesus as their Saviour; but they may be reckoned by hundreds, and we have already abundant cause to praise God.

The meeting for men is held in St. Enoch Church, with the aid of an adjoining church for the overflow meetings. If I should say that between four and five thousand men every night crowd the meetings, I should be within the limits of accuracy. The meetings are attended by persons of all ranks, from the highest to the lowest; it is delightful to see intelligent mechanics, with their horny hands and iron-stained clothes—fresh from the yards—seeking the Saviour, in the meetings for the anxious, side by side with the more socially elevated and refined.

Mr. Moody in the second meeting subjected the inquirers to a very severe and searching test, specially severe to undemonstrative northern Presbyterians! He invited all who desired to be prayed for as seeking Jesus, to come to the front seats and kneel as penitents. To many accustomed to the penitent form it may seem a light thing, but to most of those to whom it was applied it was a heavy cross. About a hundred men each night have done so, while far larger numbers, deeply impressed, were spoken to in other ways.

No communication can convey the sense of the presence of God felt in all the meetings—the power with which the simple message of mercy fell upon the ears and sank into the hearts of thousands. Mr. Moody declared in one of his addresses that he does not think he has ever yet witnessed in all his experience such a desire to hear the Gospel as has been manifested in Belfast during the week. On Thursday night, at the close of the address to women, more than 200 rose in the meeting expressing a desire to be saved.

I have met already in the inquiry-rooms not a few who have come from long distances to hear the Gospel, and have been awakened and led to embrace the Saviour ere they left. As showing the depth and thoroughness of the work, I may also mention that cases have occurred of awakened ones seeking to make restitution to those whom they have wronged, and reconciliation with those with whom they had been at enmity.

In my next communication I shall give your readers some account of the farewell meetings, and of the results, so far as man can ascertain and tabulate them.

One notable feature, which I feel sure will result in much blessing, was the presence of many ministers of the Gospel from all parts of Ulster. Going back to their flocks, we believe they will carry with them an increased desire to labour more directly and earnestly for the salvation of men in this unhappy land.

H. M. Williamson.

FROM "THE BELFAST WITNESS."

The long-asked, long-looked-for visit of the eminent Evangelists, whose names have become household words throughout the three kingdoms, has come at last, and high as were the anticipations of the interest likely to be aroused by their coming, they have been far exceeded by the reality. It is over eight years since they were last here, and thousands look back with pleasure to that time. But whether it be that since then they have become better known, or that on this occasion the interest which was in 1874 spread over several weeks is concentrated into one, certain it is that their services are being much more sought after. On the former occasion, for example, Fisherwick Place Church was found to afford ample accommodation for the daily "Bible-reading." This week, after the experience of one day, it was found absolutely necessary to remove it to St. Enoch's, the largest church in town, and even there to commence it an hour before the time advertised. In 1874, again, one large evening meeting, with an "overflow," sufficed each day; now, two each night, with overflow after overflow from each, have been held. Another evidence of the increased interest taken in the proceedings of the evangelists is the length and prominence given to the reports of their meetings in the daily papers. When last here, the Witness was alone in giving extended reports. This time the other papers have followed our example.

Our readers will be anxious to know, first of all, about themselves. First, as to Mr. Moody—eight years have, of course, told upon him. He looks somewhat older than when last here, and much stouter. But he is as vigorous as ever, the old alertness and ready, business-like style of going about his work being as conspicuous as when last with us. He still carries the same old Bible, his example in using which has been so extensively followed since 1874. It has worn worse than its owner, being now, to tell the truth, shaky enough. And no wonder—it has seen wonderful service. Probably not a Bible in the world has been used so well.

Mr. Moody's style of speaking and working has undergone little change. Still he preaches the same doctrines with the same directness and simplicity, and unction, and power; still the wonder is, as one listens to him, "wherein his great strength lieth." . . . He tells "the old old story"—still insisting on the three R's of the old theology, and only turning aside from the old paths to gather fresh points for illustration and enforcement. There is only one explanation of his power. No doubt he has several natural gifts qualifying him admirably for the task he undertakes—a physical strength which seldom seems to flag, inimitable tact and nous, great readiness and quickness of wit, and knowledge of human nature and sympathy with men. But the secrets of his power seem to be the simplicity of the Gospel to which he adheres so closely, and the entire consecration of the man to the service of that Gospel—body, soul, and spirit.

MR. SANKEY

has aged more than his confrère. He looks balder and more worn, and his voice not perhaps just so sweet, but still marvellously sweet and telling. Mr. Moody without him would be without his right arm. He acknowledges this himself, and insists on Mr. Sankey being at all the services.

The present series of meetings is being held under the auspices of a committee of ministers and laymen of the town of various denominations. The members of this committee are distinguished by the wearing of a blue ribbon, bearing on it the words "United Services, 1883." They have delegated to Mr. Mullan, of the Young Men's Christian Association, the task—no easy one—of organising and directing a corps of ushers for the preservation of order, who are known by the wearing of a rose-coloured rosette, while the "Christian workers," who alone are authorised to deal with inquirers in the inquiry meetings, are provided with badges of a dark crimson. Accordingly, in any emergency, there is no difficulty in recognising an official of the kind required. The result of these various arrangements has been very satisfactory. After resting in the Imperial all Saturday—and he needed rest badly, for he crossed from Glasgow to Belfast during one of the severest of the many gales we have been having of late, and he is a very bad sailor—he opened his campaign on

SABBATH MORNING.

Eight o'clock was the hour advertised for the meeting, but before six groups of people were wending their way through the streets to Fisherwick. Shortly after seven the gates had to be locked, and, in the end, Linen Hall Street Church and Fisherwick Lecture Hall were both crammed. Seldom has there been such a crush in Belfast as in the church that morning. Reporters had to get in by windows, and were glad to get in at all. It is no small testimony to the hold these men have taken of Belfast that at such an hour such an immense gathering could be collected, and all with whom we have conversed who were there declare themselves amply repaid for their pains. The subsequent meetings on that day were held in the Ulster Hall. That first day's work was pretty heavy, even for him. He delivered five sermons, for at each service the Ulster Hall was emptied and filled again, such were the crowds seeking admittance.

Of the meetings during the week it is not necessary to speak one by one particularly. They have embraced a noon prayer-meeting, held each day in Donegal Square Methodist Church; Bible-readings, at which, more suo, Mr. Moody takes up a subject on which he brings light to bear from all parts of the sacred volume; a meeting for women in Fisherwick at seven, with "overflows" in neighbouring buildings; and a meeting for men in St. Enoch's, with similar "overflows."

On Thursday night a most

was witnessed in St. Enoch's. At the close of the service, when the usual after-meeting was announced, the numbers waiting were something unusual. No one seemed to want to go away. At length a move was made, and only inquirers and "workers" left. Then pew after pew was filled with anxious ones, until over 150 men were kneeling side by side there, while a large number of lads, whom we could not count, were drafted off to a separate room to be spoken to. It was a most solemn scene—not soon to be forgotten. After prayer, and the quoting of texts, the men still on their knees, they were taken in hand by ministers and others, and their difficulties dealt with.

Our Foreign Mission has been a gainer through the labours of these brethren. It was under Mr. Moody's preaching that our first Medical Missionary to India received the stimulus that ultimately led him to consecrate his life to the service of Christ among the heathen. Already that one man is coming in contact with 500 heathen a week, whose sickness he tends, and who hear the Word of Life from his lips. It may not be given to all who come under the American Evangelist's influence to go out personally as missionaries, but surely all who have got any good from his ministrations may well acknowledge it at next Sabbath's collection. Let each Presbyterian in the crowds of revival worshippers be zealous, lest his enthusiasm result in "nothing but leaves." We shall be indeed deeply grieved and disappointed if our noble Convener's appeal for two more missionaries is not responded to with overflowing measure.

ECHOES FROM BIRMINGHAM.

Several contributions reached us that we were unable to insert in our last issue. In one of these "A Worker" says:—

The Mission is over, and now our hearts are filled with joy as one testimony after another comes to hand of the blessing received, of the refreshment brought to God's own children, of the restoration of backsliders, and of those who a few weeks ago were "afar off," but are now "made nigh by the blood of Christ."

One already consecrated Christian writes thus: "Thursday was to me "the crowning day." of the past blessed and helpful time. I think our sojourn at Bingley Hall has revived our souls as sea-air refreshes our bodies. We were not dead before, but the fresh strong breeze of grace energises us anew. . . . How the Lord has proved to us His mighty power!"

A young lady who came here to a situation some time ago thus speaks in a letter. "I have often wondered why I ever came to Birmingham, but it was God who guided my footsteps; oh, how thankful I am I ever came. When you were speaking to me that first Sunday (after the meeting), the light flashed across me as it had never done before. I thought, of course, if I trusted to Christ to save me He could not possibly fail because he had promised, and I said to myself,

'Jesus I will trust Thee,
Trust Thee with my soul,
Guilty, weak, and helpless,
Thou wilt make me whole.'

From that time all has been so calm, and such peace. The next time I went to the meeting Mr. Moody gave out the hymn:—

'A long time I wandered in darkness and sin.'

and it did seem such bliss to me to be able then to join in the last verse, 'I know He is mine.'"

Our beloved friend, Mrs. Moody, was with us night after night, and many a prayer follows her that she may be made as great a blessing in other towns as the Lord has sent her to be here.

SHOP ASSISTANTS.

NOTWITHSTANDING the Christian fellowship and other advantages offered by the Y.M. and Y.W.C. Associations, there are still many young people who are engaged in establishments where they are expected to be out on the Sabbath afternoons, and because they go "nowhere," are in great danger of going astray. If friends in various parts of London would open their homes on the Sabbath afternoons to a limited number of these young people for a Bible-reading, and after it a tea, probably much good would be the result. If souls were saved by such means, what ample repayment would it be for the little extra trouble and expense.

The social and homely element in the arrangement would doubtless be a great attraction to many whose homes and friends are far away.

We are informed that one family in the neighbourhood of Highbury has decided to try the plan, and if any young friends who may read these lines would like an invitation to join such a little company on Sabbath afternoons for a Bible-reading, and after it to tea, the Secretary of The Strangers' Friend Society, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C., will be glad to give the necessary introduction. He will also be glad to hear from any friends who may be prompted to open their homes in the way suggested.

LIGHT IN THE VALLEY.—From the present number of the Piccolo Messaggere we take the following: A girl connected with the Evangelical school of the Italian Church, Rome, was lately taken ill. During her illness her great delight was to have some of us to read the Holy Scriptures to her. To many it was a strange thing to see her so joyful. And such was the impression her words made, that it was possible at any hour of the day to have an audience of 15 or 20 persons to listen to the truth. She died, saying as she went away, "I'm going to Jesus—here He is—I see Him—mamma, He is come to take me—Jesus." And her face wore the smile of an angel. An old man who had frequently been there was very much agitated at what he saw. "Tell me," he said, "how one is able to rejoice at a moment which all the world fears tremendously." He has since become a young disciple of Christ.

SATISFACTION.

"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again." JOHN iv. 14.

AH, what is Art's reward
For toil from day to day?
A little empty fame,
And then all fades away.

And what can Science yield?
A little knowledge won,
A brief day spent in toil,
And then a setting sun.

Though pleasure comes with work,
Completed, soon it palls;
And o'er each finished task
A shade of sadness falls.

We miss some cheering voice,
Some sympathising eye;
And, with a heavy heart,
We lay it sadly by.

But work for God alone
Brings joy unmixed with pain;
Accepted by the Lord,
It is not done in vain.

The few small barley loaves,
If we can give no more,
Placed in the Master's hand
May yield exhaustless store.

Ah, when a little child,
Tired out with childhood's play,
Runs to his mother's knee,
He is not sent away.

E'en thus my weary soul
Turns from thy gifts to Thee;
O rest me in thy love,
Then choose the work for me.

AWAKENING AT ALTON, HANTS.

THERE has been quite an awakening at Alton, Hants, chiefly through the labours of the Evangelisation Society. Night after night large crowds have been attending; night after night souls have been saved, as many, it is said, as twenty in a night.

Mr. Denham Smith, who had been preaching at Eveley, where for years a work of conversion has been going on, and many souls have been gathered into the fellowship of God's people, was pressed to visit Alton. The largest place in the town was secured—the Congregational Chapel. He addressed first the young converts, who heard with evident rapt delight a statement of the whole history, in this time and state, of a child of God, and of his glorious destiny as described in the Word.

Next, after quite a long time of joyous singing, the preacher poured forth, as from a soul filled with his loved theme, the good news of God who sent his Son to save sinners. In the one address, he spoke as if there was not an unsaved person present; in the other, as if there was not a saved one, "rightly dividing the word of truth."

It is sweet to witness such scenes, to behold souls won to Christ. In the after-meeting, whilst he was again speaking to the young converts, they could not repress audible laughter, and being reproved for it, he said, "Do not reprove them, for their laughter is the laughter of true joy, which all Christians have not got."

At the close of the first meeting, the pastor of the place begged Mr. Denham Smith (the whole congregation holding up their hands) to return again to Alton, which he has promised to do.

Will your readers pray for this work, that it may show itself more and more to be indeed of God, and that He would more and more bless the valued labours of the Evangelisation Society.

A THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY.—Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton intend shortly to issue, at convenient intervals, a series of small books on doctrines which recent debate has brought prominently before the public mind. These volumes will be condensed in expression, Biblical in doctrine, catholic in spirit, and by competent writers. No effort will be spared to make the series complete and effective. The price will be 3s. 6d. each.

Notes and Comments.

A BOOK of exceptional importance and interest has just been published by Mr. Francis Peek, entitled Social Wreckage (Isbister & Co. 3s. 6d.) The following six paragraphs are quoted from the preface.

"As regards the Poor-Laws, there is an almost universal concurrence of opinion among those who have studied the subject, that the influence of these laws in the past, and to a great extent in the present, even as now administered, is to foster pauperism and discourage providence."

"With respect to the Licensing Laws, there is no denying that these give undue facilities for indulgence in drunkenness, and throw unnecessary temptations in the way of the poorer classes; while the practical immunity from punishment of publicans who have justly incurred it by permitting drunkenness, and the lenient view magistrates often take of offences committed by persons under the influence of drink, tend to make the crime of drunkenness appear venial."

"As regards the administration of Justice, the perplexities of the law itself are most mischievous; the way in which witnesses are treated when giving evidence is often cruel; and our legal procedure is so dilatory and expensive that it offers facilities for a penniless adventurer to rob a rich man of his money, or for a wealthy scoundrel to ruin his poorer neighbour."

"There is the inhuman spirit which pervades the Criminal Law, and which is intensified by the unequal punishments inflicted by judges and magistrates, teaching that a man's person is far less sacred than his property, that the smallest theft is more criminal than the grossest cruelty, and this tends to brutalise the lawless classes."

"The laws relating to women are both immoral and unjust. They place a harlot in a better and safer position than the married woman. They strictly guard, up to twenty-one years of age, the persons of girls who have property, while they afford no protection, after the age of thirteen, to any females without property. Poor girls, though still mere children, may with impunity be robbed of their virtue and ruined for life, even though deception and fraud be used, which, if employed for the purpose of obtaining money, would be punished with stern severity."

"The punishments for serious crime are, for the most part, so unwisely inflicted, that they seldom, if ever, reclaim an habitual criminal; but, on the other hand, they generally ruin irrevocably those younger offenders who, under wiser regulations, might have been saved."

The Irish Branch of the Evangelical Alliance invite Christians throughout the world to set apart Saturday, March 17th (St. Patrick's Day), as a day of special and united prayer for Ireland. This concert of prayer has been observed for several years. The members, while recognising with satisfaction and hope the presence of many encouraging signs in the religious and social condition of the Irish people, feel there is much need for continued intercession and prayer.

Dr. Baedeker who hopes to return to England in March, writes a most interesting letter as to his work on the Continent, which will be given in our next. He asks, that as so many prayers have been offered in his behalf, praise may now be given for the answers. He also asks prayer for his visit to the North, hoping to meet Mr. George Müller at St. Petersburgh.

The extremely serious weather which has lasted so long should surely lead the nation to humiliation and earnest prayer. There have only been two good grain seasons since 1870, and multitudes of farmers have been brought to ruin during these disastrous years. We ought to hear the rod, and Him who has appointed it; to humble ourselves for our many sins; and to plead with God for a return of such weather as may be suitable for the sowing of the land.

Mr. Daniel Cooper, who has for so many years been the secretary and mainstay of the Rescue Society, is quite laid aside by illness, and is ordered by Dr. Kidd a long voyage to the Antipodes. He says, writing by an amenuensis: "How I do long for the prayers of the many friends among the readers of The Christian. The Society is absolutely without funds." Mr. Cooper has laboured gratuitously for an Orphan Home for fourteen years. This is a very opportune moment for liberal Christian help. Mr. Cooper is far too useful a worker for the Church and the world to afford to lose him.

The Times of Monday has an important leader on a recent legal decision, confirming the action of the justices at Over Darwen, in refusing to renew thirty-four out of seventy-two existing licenses. The article begins with, "Even in these days of temperance," and thus concludes, "Public-house property is just at present far from flourishing; in many places it is not at all what it was. The Blue Ribbon Army is a serious fact; and in other ways temperance makes silent but sure advances. There will be a new cause for decline in value if the renewal of licences is placed at the mercy of justices, who may be often moved by the impulses of the new crusade."

The preparations for the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Liverpool encourage the hope of a result no less cheering than in the other towns and cities recently visited. Mr. Alexander Balfour is Chairman, and Mr. D. M. Drysdale Vice-Chairman, of the Executive Committee, while the large and influential General Committee represents the Establishment and the various Nonconformist bodies. Hengler's Circus has been engaged for the afternoon Bible-readings and evening gatherings, and the Executive are seeking for other suitable buildings for the daily prayer-meeting and overflow-meetings. The circular issued by the Executive Committee asks for "the earnest and united prayers and hearty co-operation of all God's people, that there may be a large manifestation of his Holy Spirit, that the Committee may have Divine wisdom, and that the spirit of unity and love may prevail."

Lay preaching continues to be earnestly discussed in the Nonconformist and Independent, and some very homely truths are plainly stated. One writer says:—

The average preaching of to-day is terribly dull, and pitifully profitless. The average preacher of to-day is a very prosaic and commonplace individual. It may have been so in former times, but I cannot find, and I cannot believe, that at any period in the history of Dissent have there been so few able and eloquent men going about among the Churches; establishing them in the faith; imparting to them spiritual gifts; bringing sinners to repentance. The visits of our leading men are too much associated with one of two objects—politics or money raising. They go down to the country to lecture on the wrongs of Dissenters; or they attend anniversary services at which their presence is valued just in proportion to the collection that follows their sermons. And they take good care that a substantial fee rewards their exertions.

Until all this is changed, and until holy men, full of zeal and fire, go forth in the spirit and with something of the power of our great reformers, I can hope for no real and lasting revival. If there are no longer giants in our pulpits, we ought to make the best use we can of the most capable men we have.

The same writer also says that the ministers of the Gospel are primarily responsible for the prevailing neglect of religion, and to them we must chiefly look to revive a spirit of prayer and worship. This may be true; but, when the priesthood failed God raised up the child Samuel; and the prophets who followed were not called because they belonged to the priestly tribe. They might be princes like Daniel, or herdmen like Amos, or priests like Jeremiah and Ezekiel, or mountaineers like Elijah, or husbandmen like Elisha. They "were men of opportunity," whether priests or not.

"A Hearer" deplores the inefficiency especially of the younger men, and asks if there is anything in the training at our theological colleges to account for this. Is the great object of that training to make the students "mighty in the Scriptures," and to store their minds with the positive truths of God's Word?

It would be interesting to know what proportion of time each student gives to this great textbook, whether during his college course he goes through the whole Bible, and if not, what books of the Bible; also whether his study is principally critical or spiritual in its aim. If the Bible is not the principal object of his study, and if, on the contrary, the student's mind is stored with religious errors, from those of Buddhism to those of modern scepticism, in order that he may learn to refute them, the sermons will be essays containing little reference to Scripture; they will be generally on the defensive; and they will be hazy. These three faults we find in many modern sermons. I think there can be no question that an extensive and prayerful study of God's Word will best conduce to that heavenly wisdom for winning souls and building up saints which should be the characteristic of our ministers.

Immediately after the manifest work of God in Birmingham, the monthly meeting of the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of Warwickshire had, for the subject of their monthly conference, "Revivals and Rational Christianity." A paper was read by Rev. Thos. Pipe, of Lye Waste, in which he characterised revival meetings as religious fireworks.

The Rev. Dr. Crosskey read a paper on "Human Depravity." The story of the disobedience of Adam and Eve, he said, was characteristic of a childish stage of thought. Instead of a fall of man, he believed in the glorious story of a progress upward. He believed it would be doing a divine service to the community to substitute for the early childlike legend of the fall of man a faith in the boundless possibilities of human progress.

The Conference was held in "the Church of the Saviour" (that of the late Mr. George Dawson). But as that able but misguided lecturer did not represent the views of Protestant Dissenters, so neither, we are assured, did the heresies propounded at this monthly meeting. Other and totally different views were expressed by Dr. Laird Collier, and addresses were given by the Rev. J. Harrison (West Bromwich), on "The Consequences of Sin;" by the Rev. W. Lake (Warwick), on "Redemption by Blood;" and by the Rev. J. B. Gardner (Kidderminster), on "Christ's Own Gospel." These, however, are not reported. We trust they were such as their titles would lead us to expect. But where there is no fall there are no consequences of sin, no room for redemption by blood, no need of a Gospel. But how can men of such opposite views co-operate?

Miss Booth and Miss Charlesworth, as well as other officers of the Salvation Army, have been treated in a very arbitrary and cowardly way by the Council of State of the Canton of Geneva. The authorities of the city of Geneva closed their meetings; the Chief of Police publicly threatened to withdraw all protection from the violence of the mob; the office windows were broken, those leaving it savagely attacked and beaten, the police refusing protection; Mr. Clibborn and others were stoned through the principal streets, and the two ladies were summarily expelled the canton. Of course these shameful persecutions are indignantly condemned by all right-minded people. Fifty of the chief men met and drew up a petition appealing against the illegality of the action of the authorities.

The Countess de Gasparin has perhaps done more damage to the Army by a pamphlet which she has published, consisting of a translation into French of "General" Booth's "Orders and Regulations," in which, says the Times correspondent, "she impeaches the movement—its aims, methods, and proceedings—as hurtful to society and disgraceful to religion. We do not, however, with the correspondent of the Times, think that this attack will prove the death-blow of the Army on the Continent.

Almost as damaging as the persecution of the Council or the pamphlet of the Countess is an intemperate letter from Mrs. Booth in the War Cry, entitled "More Holiness Teaching Wanted," in which she says:—

We must do more in the way of teaching—not such as our opponents want, mere theorising about texts, but teaching the people what sin is, and what righteousaess is, and that one means hell, and the other Heaven! It is positively awful the extent to which the one-sided dirty Gospel of the "only-believe" creed has saturated the minds of the professors, and through them the whole of the more decent population. I commonly meet with professors who tell me of vile conduct on the part of people of their acquaintance—open undeniable facts—and yet conclude by hoping that these Judases are Christians! Christian liars! Christian adulterers! Christian cheats and extortioners! Christian drunkards, only they manage to walk straight! Christian deceivers and slanderers! Oh, it is enough to make one's heart burst to see the result of this "Gospel of dirt!" and I see more than ever that God means us to send it back to its own place, and to tear down these refuges of lies, and to proclaim through all the world that "All unrighteousness is sin," and "he that committeth sin is of the devil!"

We must be more plain and straight than ever in teaching our Officers how to deal with the consciences of the people.

Numbers don't know what a lie is. They have been brought up in lying until they cannot discriminate between falsehood and truth, and need to be taught how to do so. We must hunt down this devil's Gospel—that people can be believers while living in sin, except it be holding the truth in unrighteousness, which shows them to be tenfold more children of Satan than those who don't hold it at all. I am persuaded that we have been too much afraid on this point. What have we to do with consequences here any more than on other points? What does it matter who is offended, or what they say of us? God can and will defend us if we hold up his truth, his righteous hatred of all iniquity.

We cannot help who the cap may fit. Let us tell it out in every War Cry and in every lesson at the Training Homes, and in every Holiness Meeting, and in every address, that sin and salvation are as far apart as God and the devil! That "He that hateth his brother is a murderer," and that men cannot be right with God and doing wrong to man at the same time. The world may well laugh such Christianity to scorn. The poor heathen may well prefer their idols to the Christian's God, and reject both him and his vices at the same time. Oh, the Lord help us to set up again the standard of Jesus Christ, and to clear His name of the contempt and scandal which the lovers and abettors of iniquity have brought upon it.

It is difficult to understand to whom these indiscriminate denunciations are intended to apply, or who are the preachers of this "one-sided dirty Gospel of the 'only-believe' creed," which has "saturated . . . the whole of the more decent population!" The tone of the letter would seem to imply that this is the general character of the preaching throughout the country, and that God has raised up the Salvation Army to correct it. Many of the most zealous and active spirits are attracted out of the Churches to the Army and are doing good work, but we confess we are increasingly apprehensive of the action of "Headquarters." Despotic power is a fatal sceptre, which hurts those who wield it even more than those it governs, and its deterioration of the gentler is even more palpable than of the stronger sex.

Mrs. Booth is reported to have stated last week, at a meeting in Regent's Hall, that there had not been a word said or an act done by the Salvation Army in Switzerland which could reflect disparagingly upon any other community or organisation. It would be well if the same discretion were observed at home.

In Matt. xxiii., on which Mrs. Booth promises a series of addresses, the Lord, who "knew what was in man," definitely named the characters whom He denounced. The Galatians well knew the persons whom the Apostle Paul anathematised. The Churches at Pergamos and Thyatira were not in darkness as to the teachers symbolised by Balaam and Jezebel. It is essential that the persons alluded to should be able to be distinguished, lest we condemn the righteous with the wicked. "If thou take the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth." "And this I pray," says the Apostle, "that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; that ye may try things that differ; that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ; being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God."

There are times when we do well to be angry. In these days of universal and all-embracing toleration such times appear to come but seldom. "There is something to be said on both sides" of almost every public question nowadays; so we are told to be calm, and not let our zeal outrun our discretion. It is a sort of sad relief to an earnest, honest spirit, when he meets with a subject concerning which he is able to give utterance to some righteous wrath. Will any unprejudiced and disinterested person dare to assert that they who feel indignant and shame-stricken at the mere thought of the State "regulation" of vice, by a professedly Christian people, are "angry without a cause"? We trow not.

If this growing agitation for the abolition of an unhallowed system of Government patronage has not yet reached white heat, there are signs that it is approaching that stage. The truth is becoming known. Such a Godless and God-defying connivance at evil could only exist under the shelter of the darkness. When it is thoroughly made plain to the British people that these Acts exist for the sole purpose of enabling one part of the community to commit sin with impunity, and at the cost of all that is most precious to another part of the community, surely we shall soon see an end of them. The recent Christian Convention, and the meeting in London last week, which is briefly reported elsewhere, have done good service in this direction. There was, perhaps, no great display of outward feeling shown at the great meeting in St. James's Hall, on Tuesday week; but in every speech there was the true ring of unquenchable conviction, and a set purpose that goes forward to the mark.

Sir Wm. McArthur well said it was pre-eminently a woman's question, as woman was the greatest, indeed the only, sufferer. Shame on Britain's manhood that it should be so! Shame that we should deserve the taunt expressed by Sir Wilfrid Lawson that the degradation of woman was the attribute of the most uncivilised and savage peoples! It has too long been the lot of our poor English sisters to suffer and be silent. Let it now be the lot of Englishmen to lift up their voices with no uncertain sound, and say that such cruel wrong shall cease, and to make amends, as far as may be, for the heartless injustice of the past.

TRIALS AND TRIUMPHS IN SPAIN.

AN interesting letter recently received from Mrs. Blamire, tells of much encouragement in Gospel work in Spain, as well as much opposition. Early last year, she and her husband settled at Marin, a small seaport town about four and a half miles from Pontevedra, the capital of the province of that name. The priest of Marin had alienated the people by his evil life, and they were willing to receive the Gospel.

A meeting-place was found, and crowds of people came to hear the word from far and near. The Archbishop of Santiago, by a personal visit, endeavoured to prejudice the minds of the people, as he had previously done in other places; in Marin, however, he failed in his attempt, the populace receiving him with demonstrations of strong disapproval. All went on well for a time, and numbers were joining the ranks of the little Protestant company. But another priest, more Jesuitical than the former, if not so openly immoral, came and stirred up a fierce persecution, all kinds of insults and annoyances being offered to the evangelists. Notwithstanding, the work of the Lord prospers in Marin and the adjacent places; the Sunday and week-night meetings and classes being well attended. The hatred of the Popish enemies has been greatly aroused because of some of the converts having burnt their images and crucifixes and substituted wall texts. Mr. and Mrs. Blamire find a difficulty in supplying the converts with these texts, and it would be a great help if Christian friends in this country could meet that need. The texts could be sent by registered book-post, and should, of course, be in the Spanish language.

By the offer of an increased rent for a term of years, the papists have induced the landlord of Mr. Blamire's Local to decline granting its use after March 1. Mr. and Mrs. Blamire have cast this care also upon the Lord, trusting that some other place of meeting is in preparation for them. They ask for the earnest prayers of Christians in England, that bodily strength and spiritual vigour may be given them for the future sustenance of the work, and that the needed help, both workers and means, may be supplied in due season. Their address is Calle del Sol 10, Marin, Pontevedra, Spain.

GOD'S PLANS.

By Mrs. E. C. ELLSWORTH.

"MAKE room for the Lord, Mary. Don't crowd Him out with your plans," and the peaceful face of Robert Marks spoke of the near presence of the Master.

"But Charles has such a good place, with every prospect of promotion," pleaded the ambitious mother. "How can you consent that he should leave Ashton & Co., and enter upon an uncertain future, just because the boy thinks he should like to be a minister?"

"But if the Lord calls him to the work, we have no right to interfere," replied the father seriously.

"Have you no claim upon the wages of your only son when out of employment yourself?" asked the wife bitterly. "Several of his best years must be given for the preparation, a sacrifice which will be felt by us in our present circumstances, I'm thinking. Then what will he have in the future but a life of toil and the small compensation paid a country minister; for not one in ten who studies for the ministry is successful enough to draw a large salary?"

"Well, wife, if Jesus needs our boy we shall do well to trust our earthly interests in his hands. But as Charlie will not leave his present employment without our consent, considering this a test that he is called of God, with you rests the responsibility, for I shall not dare to stand in his way."

Mrs. Marks did not wish to assume such a responsibility, and the position did not please her. She thought of the time when, with a heart overflowing with gratitude for the gift of a child, she laid her first-born in the arms of Jesus, asking for his blessing upon her infant son.

She thought also of the many times she had prayed for his conversion, and of her joy when he came with the glad news of sins forgiven, expressing a desire to live for the glory of God. She could not forget that hour of keen anguish when death stood ready to claim her beloved child, and with a heart broken with sorrow she vowed to set aside every earthly consideration if her son could be spared to her. This remembrance so wrought upon her that she could not sleep. Again and again she lived over those hours of agony, following her only child down to the very gates of death, and then receiving him anew from God as a precious jewel to be kept for the Master's use.

Mrs. Marks could not forget the vow made to God in this hour of distress; but supposing she held her son lightly as regards earthly interests, she was astonished to find bitter opposition within her heart, now that God called for a fulfilment of this vow.

A few years earlier she would have looked forward to such a desire on the part of her son with complacency; but now her husband's failing health and want of employment made such a request a severe trial to her faith. God only knows how weak we are, and what painful removings will make our faith strong and effectual in its grasp upon his never-failing promise.

Bitter was the struggle, but Mrs. Marks arose from a sleepless couch to inform her son she would place no obstacle in his path if he wished to enter the Christian ministry. He had her free and full consent to enter upon his studies whenever the way was clear for him to do so.

"Thank God," was the reply; and then she learned that the night had been spent in prayer by her son, asking only that God's will might be known by the morning decision.

"I have no fear for the future," said he. "If God calls me to the work, He will provide for all my needs." Charlie's confidence was not misplaced. Friends were raised up who gave the needed assistance in obtaining an education.

The mother's faith was strengthened when constant employment brought again comfort to the family, independent of Charlie's wages.

She made room for God to walk between her and all earthly plans, and He proved a helper even in secular interests; for to-day Charlie preaches the Gospel, and by it he not only lives himself, but finds a home for a widowed mother and two dependent sisters.

IN THE SOUTH OF LONDON.

FOR some years past an interesting work has been carried on from three centres in connection with the pastorate of Rev. Dr. MacEwan. In Battersea, where Dr. MacEwan's congregation have erected commodious premises for the purpose, the work grows and deepens. The whole character of the neighbourhood has improved. The people themselves acknowledge the beneficial effect which this Mission has had on the district generally. Though the population has increased, one constable less is required to keep order, and one public-house has been shut up for want of customers.

At a recent series of special services Mr. Cameron, the evangelist for this Mission, had to report many anxious inquirers and signs of much blessing. A large mothers' meeting, with nearly 300 on the roll, is held every Monday, and a Sunday-school of about 600 overflows the place on Sunday afternoon, and all the other Sunday and week-day services are well attended —more than 200 people have been gathered in the Church fellowship. Whole families have been brought to Christ and led to a new life by this Mission who were formerly living in carelessness and irreligion.

Another centre of operation is "The Horns," Kennington-park. More than six years ago Dr. MacEwan engaged the large Assembly-hall of "The Horns" for evangelistic services on Sunday afternoons. Many thousands during these years have had the Gospel preached to them in connection with these services. With the help of his congregation in Clapham-road, the large hall was secured also for Sunday evening services, a small hall not far off was taken for week-day and Sunday-school work, and an evangelist employed to superintend the Mission.

During these years a work of grace has been begun in many hearts through this "Horns" Mission. One interesting feature of it is, that several members of the police force have been brought by it to a knowledge of the truth. A weekly prayer-meeting of constables has been established amongst themselves, and is steadily increasing. The earnestness of the men cannot be doubted. Dr. MacEwan invited fifty constables and their wives to tea in the Mission Hall the other evening. The invitation was cordially supported by the superintendent, and heartily responded to by the men. A most delightful and precious evening was spent, and earnest Gospel addresses delivered, the men expressing a desire that such meetings might be repeated.

The third centre of work is Verulam Church, in Kennington-road. This was formerly a Proprietary Church in connection with the Church of England, but, being offered for evangelistic effort, a generous member of Dr. MacEwan's Clapham-road Church took it at a yearly rent; and for the past three years he has not only paid the rent, but the whole expenses of the Mission. The Gospel during these years has been faithfully preached here, and no efforts spared to bring its blessings to the non-churchgoing population all round this locality. Much—very much —good has been done. The services on Sunday, the Sunday-school, with its 200 scholars, and the Mothers' Meeting on Monday, with upwards of 400 members, and its Provident Fund, all indicate blessed fruit as the result of the work. Bible-readings and cottage prayer-meetings are held every week. There have been many cases of true conversion to Christ. Here, too, through the kindness of friends, Dr. MacEwan has been able to have young women and other employés of the London theatres to tea, from time to time, when hymns have been sung and Gospel addresses delivered. These meetings have always been of a character likely to do good, and lodge truth in the heart, which may some day be greatly blessed.

It is deeply to be regretted that the friend who has hitherto supported this Verulam Mission at his sole expense is no longer able to do so. Dr. MacEwan's own congregation has too much on hand in the other Missions to which it is committed to take it up, and, consequently, unless friends are raised up to help him to carry forward this branch of his evangelistic effort, it will unhappily have to be dropped. The work deserves to be encouraged. This Mission costs about £300 a year, but, looking to the good that has been done, the money has been well spent.

COLAR MISSION.

DEAR SIRS,—Very many thanks for the kind help just received from the readers of The Christian for the Colar Mission. Friends who are not in the habit of receiving a copy of Miss Anstey's monthly letter may be interested in the news which came by this mail. Mark Salis, one of Miss Anstey's native helpers, has felt called by the Lord to go forth as an evangelist in the dark regions around the town of Colar. He went forth staff in hand, preceded and followed by the prayers of the little band of Christians at the Orphanage. He was encouraged by the reception he received, but felt the need of a companion to assist in his labours. Shortly after, a youth was sent from the Orphanage to join him.

Miss Anstey, in a recent circular, writes: "One of our orphans named Eve, who has for some time been under-nurse in the hospital, became suddenly unwell one evening. The next night she grew worse, and we expected to lose her. Her sickness was a kind of palsy. A vein had started in the neck, the poor head kept ceaselessly moving, and the tongue rattled between her teeth. On the evening of the third day her eye became glazed, and we gathered round her without a hope of her final recovery. In answer to an inquiry she said, 'I have no fears, for God is my Father, and Jesus Christ my Saviour; I shall be glad to go—I do not fear death at all.'

"We sat in silence a few minutes. During the day my mind had been exercised about healing by the Great Physician, and now I knew she must be healed in answer to the cry of faith or she must die. As we all know, healing faith is quite distinct from saving faith; it does not seem given to all of God's children, but the Lord has given it to me. I inquired of sister MacDonald, "Do you believe she will be healed by the prayer of faith?" The answer was, "If you have faith, anoint and pray for her." I prayed, and as I said "Lord, heal her, or faith in healing will become weak," those looking at the suffering girl saw a change pass over her countenance—a look of repose—and, closing her eyes, she was in a healing, natural slumber before the prayer was finished. She is now perfectly restored, and attending to her duties as under-nurse in the hospital. Pray that she may realise that the restored health is to be spent in the Lord's service."

Friends will rejoice to hear that a young missionary, named Redwood, who has been three years in the Harley House Institute (Mr. H. G. Guinness), has lately left England on his way to join the Colar Mission. Will they pray that he may prove a great help, and strengthen the hands of Miss Anstey and her faithful assistants, Miss Haines, Miss McDonald, and Kodenda Row.

Yours very truly,

131, Adelaide-road, N. W., Helen James.
Feb. 8.

YOUNG MEN AT EXETER HALL.

EXETER Hall has become famous for its young men's tea-parties, and the one on Friday night last, given by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tritton, will become historic, because it inaugurated a new principle of management by the governing body of Christian gentlemen "upstairs."

None of all the meetings it has been our privilege to attend in times past, could surpass this one for sound advice, manly exhortation, and heart-moving witnessing for Christ; nor for the manifest impression made upon the audience by the logical, forcible pleadings of some of the speakers.

The central thought of the address of the chairman, Mr. J. H. Tritton, was cohesion on the part of members of the Y.M.C.A. Speaking of the great opposing forces of good and evil awaiting the contest, Mr. Tritton said, "There is a pause, in order that young men who are determined to spend their lives for Christ, may come forward and fill the gap. We want 'grand young men.'"

Members of Y.M.C.A. were called upon in turn to give their views on "Association in Gospel Effort," "Educational Work," and "Recreation." Messrs. Graham, Kellaway, Whitwell, Bird, and A. C. P. Coote contributed practically to the subject under consideration. Mr. Bird especially emphasised the usefulness of gymnastic exercise as a preparation for out-door preaching.

Mr. Quintin Hogg said that this Exeter Hall should be a grand and thorough-going success. Was every member doing his utmost to make it so? He was reminded, by the vacant seats in the gallery of part of a verse of Scripture, "Now David's seat was empty." The members should strive to fill Exeter Hall from end to end every night. The speaker besought his hearers not to neglect their fellow-men, for the empty place down here meant the empty place up above.

Mr. J. G. Watson, with earnestness and peculiar force, showed how, for the work to be successful, every member must have a real interview with a living Person—God. It should be a fresh blessing from a fresh interview with Him who is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. There were many men and women dabbling outside with just a bit of religion, but with their backs against God. They never sought the interview and never obtained the blessing. The speaker did not want his listeners to study the Bible as if it were a geological treatise, but to search for the place they wanted and the special help they required: fix it in the heart and just follow the special direction.

Mr. Coote showed how five Cambridge 'Varsity men were ousted from the first boat in the local races because of their profession of Christ; but these five men met for prayer nightly in each other's rooms, and when the race day came they bent to their oars with prayer, and won the race. They trusted Christ in their recreations.

Madame Larcia sang the Gospel in the anthem, "Come unto Me, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light;" and in the exquisite little hymn, "There is a green hill far away."

Now for the important "departure" at which we have already hinted. The Chairman proposed to the members present that the principle of self-government should be started amongst the young men. There should be committees and hon. secretaries chosen from amongst themselves and by themselves, to carry out thoroughly every good and laudable work connected with the Y.M.C.A. in its three-fold aspect as a religious, educational, and recreational body. And it was intended that the members should select from amongst themselves two or three representatives to sit with the committee upstairs.

These proposals met with the heartiest acceptance, and we feel sure that if there be the true cohesion, the earnest prayer, and the willing service emphasised by the different speakers, results may spring from the new arrangement which shall be felt in every concourse of young men throughout the world.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

CARLISLE.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY'S work in Carlisle has been a grand success, nearly 4,000 new names having been added to the Temperance roll. Mr. Murphy commences a mission in Hawick this week.

CORNWALL.

At Mr. W. Forbes' closing meetings in Camborne hundreds were unable to gain admittance, although overflow meetings were held. In the seven days upwards of 2000 persons, including six ministers of the town, put on the blue ribbon. Mr. Forbes afterwards held large meetings at Truro and St. Columb, and hundreds donned the "bit of blue." He commences a mission at Chelsea Vestry Hall on the 26th.

BARNSLEY.

A very interesting work has been carried on here during the past week under the auspices of a united local committee. Meetings have been held every evening, and have been attended by from 800 to 1500 persons nightly. They have been addressed on every occasion by Mrs. Joseph Lucas, of Sunderland, who has been greatly blessed in her earnest and persuasive labours. The Mayors of Chesterfield, Rotherham, and Barnsley, with Mr. Thomas Harvey, of Leeds, Rev. C. Bennett, vicar of St. John's, and others, have also taken part. About 1000 new pledges have been registered, and more than double that number put on the blue ribbon. The friends of the cause are greatly encouraged by the results, and steps are to be taken to consolidate the work. C. B.

HOXTON HALL.

The fifth anniversary of the founding of the Blue Ribbon Army movement in England was celebrated at Hoxton Hall, Hoxton-street, on the 10th inst., Mr. W. J. Palmer, of Reading, presiding. During these five years 1830 meetings have been held in Hoxton Hall, and many thousands of persons have taken the pledge. Several persons narrated their experiences, stating the advantages they had derived from total abstinence. The Chairman recorded progress of the work at Reading, mentioning that on the days after Easter and Whit Monday and the Bank Holiday in August last year not one charge was brought before the magistrates. Revs. J. F. Williams, Septimus Buss, Messrs. W. Noble, Stringer, and Gould, Mrs. Sewell and others, also addressed the meeting.

NEWBURY.

The Gospel Temperance Mission lately conducted in this town by Mr. T. E. Murphy was successful beyond our highest expectations. Night after night, for twelve consecutive nights, the spacious Corn Exchange, capable of accommodating 2000 people, was increasingly crowded with men and women of all ranks, who came forward by hundreds to sign the pledge and don the blue. With 1000 or 1200 taken before this Mission began, there is now a total of over 4000 pledges, out of a population of under 11,000.

Amongst those who have allied themselves with the movement are the Baptist, Wesleyan, and Primitive Methodist ministers, one of the Aldermen, and six Town Councillors, including the Mayor (who, however, has been an abstainer for about forty-six years), the superintendents of all the Nonconformist Sunday-schools, and several of the leading members of the various Churches. Mr. Murphy quite won the hearts of the Newbury people, and we are looking forward with eager interest to the promised visit of himself and his father in about two months.

THE CROYDON MISSION.

This Mission concluded on Sunday, 18th, with over 5000 adult pledges. During the past week Canons Wilberforce and Barker, and Mrs. Evered Poole have delivered addresses, and the enormous crowds that gathered nightly were utterly unable to obtain even standing room in the Rink, which is computed to hold two thousand sitting and standing.

The Friday afternoon meeting held by Mrs. Poole was remarkable for the attendance, the Rink being completely filled, principally by ladies, a large number of whom, in response to her earnest words, donned the blue ribbon afterwards. Deep regret has been felt that in consequence of bad health, caused by overwork, Mrs. Evered Poole has been unable to take her usual active part in conducting the Mission and has been forbidden to assist in the forthcoming Missions announced for Oxford and Plymouth.

On Sunday a meeting was held for those inquirers who had professed to receive blessing during the Mission; it was attended by some 700, whose earnest, happy faces bore token to their new-found happiness. Major and Mrs. Poole both addressed heart-stirring words of counsel to the young converts, who afterwards crowded round them to express their love and gratitude. Many a tearful eye, and hand-grip testified to that which the lips of many of the working-men could not utter.

Six meetings were held on Sunday, all of which were most impressive. Only eternity will reveal the results of this Croydon Mission, which has been cradled and nurtured in prayer, and the success of which has cheered and delighted the hearts of all interested in spiritual work.

FEEDING THE HUNGRY CHILDREN.

IT is expected, under our new educational arrangements, that all the poor children in London should be sent to school. So far, so good; but we suspect few who read these lines are aware of the number of these young persons who have to pursue their mental studies on an empty stomach. One of the least known, perhaps, but one of the most important agencies sustained by the London Samaritan Society is that by which free meals are given to such school-children in the poorer districts of the Metropolis as are found to be in a destitute condition. They receive tickets, which enable them to get food, value three half-pence, at some eating-house near by, as may be arranged.

We have been greatly moved by the perusal of letters recently received by Mr. J. J. Jones, director of the Society, from various teachers in the South of London, expressing their thanks for the help rendered and describing the condition of the little ones under their tuition. One says: "We know that many frequently come to school without breakfast and remain the whole day without food, except that which is given them by the teachers." Another writes: "Our children come from the very poorest houses, and the tales I sometimes hear make my heart ache." A third says: "During the cold weather boys have asked me to allow them to remain in school during the dinner-hour by the fires; they would get no dinner if they went home, and preferred to stay in the warm." Another says: "It will be a great kindness to the many poor half-starved souls in this schools to have the amount of food with which the tickets will supply them."

From these sample extracts our readers will understand the pressing need that exists for this truly "Samaritan" and blessed work of feeding the hungry children. The smallness of the sum expended (three half-pence per child) prevents anything like deception; none but the hungriest of the hungry will apply for such a meagre meal, which is yet sufficient to keep the wolf from the door. During the last year over 50,000 of these tickets were distributed among poor children in the districts of Hackney, Tower Hamlets, and Finsbury. This year an endeavour is being made to render help in the borough of Southwark, from which district the letters come to which we have referred.

Such a work as this needs no advocacy; the simple facts, such as those we have given, will speak more eloquently to all who have "a heart to feel for others' woes," than any set appeal. According to the amount of help received by the Samaritan Society from the benevolent public will be the relief they are able to bestow, through the kind assistance of the teachers. The office of the Society is 98, High-street, Homerton, E.

AN INDIGNANT PROTEST.

THE Executive Committee of the Ladies' National Association for the Abolition of the State Regulation of Vice held their annual meetings in London this year for the first time, and the result has proved most successful. The first meeting, for women only, was held in the lower Exeter Hall on Monday week, and notwithstanding the rain, was well filled. Mrs. William Fowler presided, and was supported on the platform by Mrs. Tanner, Miss Priestman, Mrs. H. J. Wilson, Miss Tod, Mrs. Shearer. Mrs. C. McLaren, Mrs. Chant, Mrs. Partridge, Mrs. Stanton, Mrs. Sherard, Miss Bewicke, Mrs. Lucas, Mrs. Garston, and others. The addresses were listened to with marked attention, and resolutions in favour of repeal and the adoption of the report were carried unanimously. The speakers and delegates were much encouraged by the tone of earnestness and sympathy manifested by those present.

A large public meeting was held on Tuesday evening at St. James' Hall, Piccadilly. The proceedings were marked by a spirit of earnestness and confidence that augur well for the immediate future of this increasingly powerful movement.

In his few opening remarks, the Chairman, Sir W. McArthur, stigmatised the Acts as unjust, unconstitutional, and immoral. He regarded them as the grossest violation of the liberty of the subject ever proposed to the British Parliament. What could be more intolerable than that, on the mere alleged suspicion of a paid informer, a person might be arrested and punished, the burden of proof being thrown, not on the accuser, but on the accused? Every nation that has wilfully set at naught the law of God has been punished; for England, too, the day of retribution must come if she repent not and forsake her evil ways.

As one of the Select Committee of the House of Commons which has lately reported on the evidence submitted to it on this question, Mr. C. H. Hopwood moved a resolution of protest against the "Majority Report." He asserted that a large portion of the evidence had been utterly set aside in this Report, which was virtually a defence if not a eulogy of the accursed Acts. Born in fraud and stealth, proven to be a failure no less than a disgrace and a danger, we must not pause in this crusade till they are swept from the statute-book of the realm.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson, M.P., said he had never spoken in public on this question before; he felt, however, that a crisis in the agitation had now come, when every true friend of justice and morality must declare himself. With him it was not a matter of medical statistics, but one of right and wrong. He believed, with Edmund Burke, that what was morally wrong could never be politically right. He agreed with the present Prime Minister that it was the duty of the State to make the right easy and the wrong difficult. If any legislation ever sinned against that principle, it was the legislation against which they were now protesting. Professor Stuart, of Cambridge, said that even worse than the public exhibition of vice was the granting to it of the imprimatur of the State. In coming to terms with vice, the Government had made an agreement with hell and a covenant with death, which would yet be swept away, with other refuges of lies, by the hail of God's immutable justice and wrath. It is true that all these evils proceed from the evil heart of man, which needs to be set right; most of all, the heart of the rich needs to be set right in its thoughts and dealings with respect to the poor.

In a fervid and well-balanced speech, Miss Tod, of Belfast, made a strenuous appeal to the Christian Churches of the land to show the Government that the religious part of the community repudiates the "Majority Report." The greatest obstacle, she said, that has to be surmounted is the false idea that men are not expected to be as pure in life as women. Why should men claim for themselves the right to be viler and baser than the other sex? God commands both alike to be holy as He Himself is holy. Some rousing remarks followed from Rev. J. P. Gledstone, during which he referred with gratitude to the spiritual refreshment afforded by the recent Convention, and said the effect would ultimately be felt in the repeal of these abominable laws.

Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P. for Scarborough, was able to say as a Lancashire man sitting for a Yorkshire constituency, that the working men in both these counties meant business in their opposition to this legislation. There would certainly be a testing division upon it in the House of Commons this session, and he believed that division would surprise everybody, at the number and weight of the constituencies represented by those who oppose the Acts. He believed every minister in Scarborough joined in a memorial to their representatives to oppose the Acts; he could not understand any minister of the religion of Jesus Christ refusing, for one moment, to render his help on the side of God and righteousness in this great question. Mr. Walter James, M.P., having briefly and hopefully spoken on the issue of this contest between good and evil,

Mrs. Josephine Butler gave the concluding address. It was the thirteenth anniversary, she said, of the Ladies' National Association for the abolition of these Acts. So far from being discouraged at the present aspect of the agitation, she was full of wonder and thankfulness to God for what He had done. The battle was not yet won, but God had caused the great conspiracy of silence to be broken up, and the conscience of the people to be aroused. Many of the early workers were passing away, and she invited others to come to the help of those who were still in the fight; it would be to their advantage every way if they threw themselves into this holy crusade against evil.

Mrs. Butler then referred to a subject which she said was pressing heavily on her heart—the strange disappearance of so many girls at West Ham, in the east of London, a district inhabited by working people. Little girls, she said, from seven years of age and upwards have disappeared and never been heard of any more. We know what has become of some of them; they have been spirited away and have become the prey of vicious men on the Continent and elsewhere. The condition of these working fathers and mothers haunts me night and day; would that I could reveal to you the anguish of my heart on account of these little children. Month after month this horror goes on, yet nothing comes of it. These poor people have no means of expressing their feelings to the public, but they can suffer and they do suffer. How would it be if a young daughter of the Lord Chancellor or the Home Secretary or some other member of the Cabinet were to be spirited away to meet such a fate? Would they not find time to make some law that would prevent such a wholesale massacre of the innocents? The House of Lords' Committee recommended that the age of minors should be raised, and their proposal is now in some Government pigeon-hole getting covered with dust. Doubtless it will pass into oblivion like many other proposals, unless the people demand that it shall find expression in law. It is a crying evil, and, as a mother, I must speak out on behalf of the children. Let us deluge Parliament with petitions for the necessary protection of the young. Why do we find it so difficult to get such proposals passed? Because they involve a restriction on the evil doings of vicious men. If the Houses of Parliament have no time to look into and redress the wrongs of the poor, God has time! Do you think He will not avenge Himself of those who oppress his poor and needy ones? The Lord Jesus Christ is on our side, fighting our battle. I believe our victory is not far off, if we each do our utmost.

Petitions embodying the resolutions passed at the meeting were to be forwarded for presentation in both Houses of Parliament.

A correspondent sends us the following:—

You are probably aware that Mr. Hopwood, M.P., has obtained Tuesday, 27th inst., for a Motion of Resolution against the enforced medical examination of women for immoral purposes—the essence of the Contagious Diseases Acts. Would it not be well for you to give prominence to this announcement? No time is to be lost in sending in petitions; they may be signed by any number, however small. The should make no reference to the Resolution but only protest against the practice as de moralising and degrading, and conclude with prayer for such legislation as shall put a stop to i Still more important, perhaps, is it that ind vidual electors should write personally to the M.P.'s requesting them to support Mr Hopwood.

CHRISTIAN HOME FOR EMIGRANTS.

BLACKWALL STATION.

"I was a stranger, and ye took me in."

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me t draw the attention of your readers to an effor which is now being made to afford shelter an protection to large numbers of men, women and children, emigrants passing through Lon don, from the northern parts of Europe t America.

This emigration, which has been for years i operation, is steadily upon the increase; som 27,000 passed through the Port of London i 1881.

Hitherto there has been no proper resting place for these people during the days or week of their stay in London, pending the sailing o the ship from the Thames to the various American ports. Consequently, they have been obliged to submit to such wretched accommodation as is to be found in the low neighbourhoods along the river-side, where, subject to al manner of temptation and frequently of ill usage, they have been the prey of designing and profligate men and women. Indeed, the situation has been such as to reflect discredit not only upon Christians but upon our common humanity.

To remedy this crying evil, we have taken a large disused hotel at Blackwall, with a river front, near the railway-station, and are fitting it up with 300 beds. The expense of repairs, fitting up, and starting for the first year will involve an outlay of some £2000, towards which £800 has been subscribed, in amounts varying from £1 to £200.

We expect to open the Home by the 26th inst. The Committee consists at present of Lord Radstock, Messrs. R. Paton, Edward Trotter, E. Clifford, G. Hamilton, and—Yours faithfully,

T. A. Denny.

"THY WILL, NOT MINE."

"As Thou wilt:" oh, choose for me,
Joy or grief, as pleases Thee,
Piercing thorns, or fragrant flowers,
Days of care, or sunny hours;
Loving smile, or chast'ning rod,
"What Thou wilt," my Saviour God.

"When Thou wilt," e'en if to-day
Called to quit this house of clay;
Jesus, I my will resign,
Make me henceforth wholly Thine;
Saved by Thee from fear and guilt,
Take me, Saviour, "when Thou wilt."

THE FLOODS IN GERMANY.—Pastor Scheve has been visiting the people in the mountains of Westphalia, where an open door is given for the preaching of the Gospel. He has already visited parts of the inundated districts, and convinced himself personally of the temporal and spiritual poverty of the people.

REFORMED CATHOLIC CHURCH, BROOKLYN.—Writing to the New York Witness, Rev. J. F. McNamee, Pastor of the Reformed Catholic Church, Brooklyn, says, the past year will long be remembered as a fruitful one in conversions to the Reformed faith. There are at present many inquirers who would openly declare themselves, were it not for the dread of persecution from the Romanists they have left.

EVANGELISATION IN NORTH DEVON.

DEAR SIR,—The readers of The Christian will rejoice to hear of special blessing in the West of England. I was lately staying at Bideford, and found a striking work of grace going on at the Wesleyan Chapel, under the excellent leadership of the two ministers stationed here. Afternoon Bible-readings and special evening Gospel meetings were being held; and on the Sunday evening I was there large numbers remained to the prayer-meeting, of whom some went into the vestry to be spoken with. Rev. John Gibson writes of that Sunday evening service: "In the evening prayer-meeting several decided for Christ." He reports of the following meetings: "The mid-day meetings of last week were much used of the Lord to build up his people. Night after night anxious ones went into the inquiry-room. On Saturday night we had a meeting for testimony, and many spoke with joy of the blessing they had received. At Clovelly, too, the Lord is graciously reviving his work."

At Ilfracombe also I was delighted to find that there was a great awakening. Special Gospel meetings were being held at the Wesleyan Chapel, together with much open-air work. I am assured by Mr. Carlyon, the minister who has carried on this work, that a goodly number of all classes have professed to be saved during the special meetings of the past three weeks. Several outlying hamlets have shared in the blessing, and many have been added unto the Lord.

During the past two Sundays I have been at the meetings of the Salvation Army at Ilfracombe; they have been remarkable for the absence of everything like irreverence or absurdity. The large building has been crowded with people of all kinds, especially sailors and young men. The testimonies of the converts were simple, clear and weighty, and at the after-meetings numbers of persons have remained, some of whom were truly seeking the Lord. Last Sunday evening Major Luxmoore and myself gave addresses, feeling that the way the work was being carried on called for the practical co-operation of Christians not connected with the Army. I found from independent testimony that numbers of well known bad characters in Ilfracombe had become new creatures in Christ through this instrumentality. —Yours faithfully, Arthur F. Gurney.

LONDONDERRY. — An Institute was lately opened for the benefit of the working men of Londonderry. A Bible-class, and, it is hoped, other departments of Christian work, will be included in the programme.

DIED.—We have to record the passing away, at the ripe age of eighty-six years, of our beloved brother, Mr. R. Clarke, who has laboured for the last thirty years with the most blessed results in the village of West Tarring.

WORKING MEN'S MISSION, COLLINGWOOD-STREET.—About 200 working men, the greater number being out of employment, were present at a tea given at the above Mission on Thursday evening, 8th inst. Messrs. T. Young, Ned Wright, and several working men gave short addresses. At the close a large number of men signed the temperance pledge, and many professed to be spiritually benefited. It is intended to continue these tea meetings as friends will help, inviting working men who are out of employment. Mr. Young's address is 16, Queen-street, Blackfriars.

EAST LONDON TRACT SOCIETY.—The annual public meeting of the above society was lately held at Cotton-street Chapel, Poplar. Mr. G. Fuller, superintendent of the Mission, read the report, from which it appeared that thirty streets in Poplar, Bromley, and Millwall are regularly visited; tracts are distributed on ships leaving the docks; and 300 letters were written last year with tracts enclosed. Public-houses as well as hospitals have been visited, and 145,000 tracts distributed during the year. Messrs. Harwood and Gillies, and Rev. B. Preece, gave addresses referring to the value of the work. Mr. Fuller's address is 34, Cawdor-street, Bromley-by-Bow, E., and he will be glad to receive grants of tracts.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

STAFFORD ROOMS, W.

MR. HENRY THORNE has held an eight days' Mission to young men at Stafford-rooms, Titchborne-street, London, W. Many remained at the close of each service for private conversation and prayer. The fruit gathered from this Mission, and from the Mission recently conducted in the same place by Mr. Henry Varley, cannot fail to still further increase the usefulness of this well-known branch of the Y.M.C.A.

BUSHEY, HERTS.

The anniversary of the Bushey Hall branch of the Evangelistic Mission was held on Tuesday, 13th inst., when a full company assembled for tea. A deeply interesting meeting was subsequently held, and addressed by Messrs. Ashton, Russell Hurditch, Stuart Thorpe, and Ned Wright. The work is steadily progressing, and there is expectation of much increased blessing. The Gospel meetings are well attended, and there is a flourishing Sunday-school.

BRAY, CO. WICKLOW.

During the past week the Lord has been wonderfully owning the effort put forth in the Turkish Baths (used by the members of the Society of Friends), through Thomas Houstin, the blind evangelist, who has been every night preaching the Gospel to crowded assemblies. Mr. Houstin preaches with wonderful simplicity and power; nor does his want of temporal sight prevent him from going among the anxious, for whom he seems specially gifted. Your readers' prayers are asked for the meetings, which are to be continued. J. L. D.

CHURCH ARMY.

Gospel work has now been carried on by this Association for nearly a month at Portcullis Hall, Regency-street, Westminster. There was at first some opposition to the outside work, by the publicans and their friends, but after a few days all disturbance ceased. Since then, three of the leaders of the opposing band have become faithful and zealous members of the Church Army. More than a hundred names of inquirers are on the roll. The great feature of these meetings is that all who are on the Lord's side are encouraged to take some part in the meetings. By this means a band of Christian workers is being educated for future service.

SOUTH LONDON MISSION.

A fourteen days' Mission has been conducted by Mr. R. E. Ashton, superintendent of this Mission, assisted by Messrs. Sutton, Bellamy, Berry, Mitchell, Stunt, and others. The services have been attended by thousands, including many of the roughest and most degraded characters in the south of London. Nearly 100 people have professed conversion.

Services are being held in Pelican-hall, Cross-street, Blackfriars, where many souls have also been blessed. Prayer is requested for continued blessing on this work, and also for the restoration to health of Mrs. Ashton, who has given many years of her life to this work.

WORK AMONG GLASGOW CHILDREN.

A series of meetings for the young have been held in Dowanvale Free Church, Partick, by Mr. Alexander Mackeith. The church was filled each night, the number never being less than 1100, and the hearers were deeply impressed. Mr. Mackeith explains the scenes from "The Pilgrim's Progress," Mr. Pratt takes charge of the lanterns and views, and Mr. Steel acts as general manager, preventing all crowding and discomfort. There are always after-meetings. As early as possible in the course a separate meeting is held for the further instruction from Scripture of the young converts.

Our brethren were well supported by a staff of earnest Christian workers, who night after night engaged in conversation with the awakened and the anxious. It was very remarkable to see the deep earnestness and soul experience of even very young children. At the close of the series 369 passed from the church to the hall below, professing to be saved, and having the knowledge of it from God's word. These received valuable counsel as to keeping in the way of life, and on work for Jesus, suited to their years.

BADEN, GERMANY.

The little town of Müllheim, in Baden, has just been visited by a gracious revival. After the great things the Lord has been, and is still, doing at Bâle, the German brethren felt led to pray that the blessing might be extended to Germany also. A blessed work was begun in this neighbourhood two years ago by Mrs. Michael Baxter, the fruits of which were now to be gathered in an abundant harvest.

At the invitation of a Christian family, whose house has long been a centre of quiet religious work in this neighbourhood, Pastor Stockmayer and Mr. Thumm began a series of meetings on Sunday, January 30. The country-people flocked in from great distances, so that the spacious hall, capable of holding some 500 people, was often crammed to the utmost of its capacity.

On the very first evening fifteen remained behind to be spoken with. Their numbers increased night after night; and on the second Sunday nearly 100 anxious souls remained for the after-meeting. When on the 10th and last day Pastor Stockmayer invited those who had found peace to remain behind, about 100 responded to the invitation, and on all sides voices were raised in praise and thanksgiving for blessings received.

In two cases whole families are rejoicing in a new-found Saviour. There are open doors all around. I have been asked to follow up the work in the villages, which I hope to do, till we are able to visit some large centre.

Müllheim, Feb. 10. Marie Rommele.

Mr. William Nobbs has decided, in view of the many calls at home, not to visit Canada at present. He has recently been labouring at Hereford, Ludlow, and Leaminster, and in some villages in Herefordshire. Crowded meetings; some souls led to trust in Christ, others awakened. He is now preaching in the Hall of the Evangelistic Mission at Swindon.

Mr. MacAll has opened another of the series of large halls in which preaching of a different order, and conducted by ministers of high repute, is given. This time it is on the south side of the Seine that the locale is fixed. The Gaité Hall is the building used, which M. de Pressensé opened on January 26 by an address on "The Existence of God." It is necessary to ventilate these apologetic subjects if the masses so impregnated with Freethought principles are to be reached. The Echo de la Verité has a dialogue upon the same subject in its latest issue.

PALMER-STREET, BIRMINGHAM.—During the past year meetings have been held on Sundays and week-nights continuously. Outdoor addresses have been given frequently, and the people visited at their homes. About 10,000 persons are believed to have been brought under serious impression, and 3000 have taken the pledge. A special interest is taken in the children. Active voluntary helpers are much needed. If possible, a tent will be purchased for summer work. Mr. John Stead, St. Andrew's-road, Birmingham, superintends the Mission.

THE BIBLE IN SPAIN.—Writing from 42, Calle Encarnacion, Gracia, Barcelona, Spain, Mr. J. C. Pundsack states that Mr. Geo. Lawrence's edition of the large reference Bible in Spanish has been printed and is now in process of binding. Help is needed towards this in order to have the edition of 5000 copies circulated among the people. It is to be sold at the low price of one dollar a copy, and will be the cheapest Bible of the kind ever sold in Spain. Mr. Pundsack says that in his business travels up and down the country he finds many opportunities of putting the Word of God into the hands of those who have never seen it before. The children gathered by Miss Lawrence during her late residence in Gracia are now cared for by Mr. Lund, who holds a meeting for them and their parents. The present address of Mr. Lawrence, we may add, is 16, High-street, Leominster, Herefordshire.

Letters to the Editor.

BIBLE-CLASS INSTRUCTION.

Dear Sir,—Will any readers of The Christian kindly give me a few hints and suggestions as to the best mode of conducting a Bible-class for the young? The class to which I refer is attended by seventy to eighty young people, whose ages range from eight to sixteen years. Most of the members are girls, and a large number are Christians. The class was instituted for the benefit of young converts. Trusting I may derive some help through this medium, I am, &c., R. F. H.

REFUGES IN LONDON.

Sir,—When Mr. Horsley says "there should be a dozen refuges (for the falen) in London, and there are not six," he is in error. The Female Mission Committee of the Reformatory and Refuge Union have eight such of their own; three of which, in Chelsea, Notting Hill, and Westbourne districts, are quite close to Kensington. When we remember the "open all-night refuge," under Mr. Thomas, the Bridge of Hope, the Kerby-street Refuge, the Great College-street Refuges we name "the dozen" at once; and there are several others with the names of which I need not occupy your space. A WORD TO ENGLISHWOMEN.

My Dear Sisters,—You rejoice in great privileges—honour, courteous consideration, thoughtful deference to wish and will, and this in virtue of the very womanhood which brings upon our sisters in India insult, contempt, and cruel disdain. What has made so great a difference? The Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Oh, that that Gospel were carried to every home in India to make free from superstitious thoughts and cruel wrong the wives and mothers and daughters of India's zenanas. They lead aimless, hopeless lives, and yet they have hearts as warm as your own to feel the yearning for sympathy.

Where are the Marys, who, having seen and heard the Risen Christ, and having called Him "Master," in the full surrender of themselves, are willing to carry to their weak, sorrowful, despised sisters the message of his resurrection and life? You cannot all leave England's homes for those of India, but if you cannot go yourself, my sister, you can help to send someone else. To show you what can be done by one willing and anxious to help, I ask you to read the letter given below,—Yours,

Stepney, E. Isabel Reaney.

Dear Mrs. Reaney,—Two years ago, when in Reading, I heard you speak about Zenana Missions in Trinity Schoolroom, and you asked if there was nothing we could deny ourselves for the sake of the women of India. I could only think of one thing—to have a silver watch instead of a gold one, and give the surplus money to that, and I promised God that I would. After that I tried to forget it, and it was not at all a pleasant thought that I could not have a gold watch like my sisters; but last summer God blessed me very much, and since then it has been no trial to think of it, and now I send you the money very joyfully. —Yours very sincerely, E. A. M.

MEDICAL MISSIONS TO MOHAMMEDANS.

Dear Sir,—I read with deep satisfaction the letter of Mr. J. E. Mathieson, on this subject, in your issue of January 25. I am led by what has passed under my observation to confirm all that he says as to the importance of this kind of missionary enterprise. I have to do with two separate and distinct works of this kind in the East. The one is carried on by means of a number of schools at various points on the Lebanon, presided over by a medical missionary, Dr. Carslaw. True, the field there is but partially Moslem. The people are chiefly of the Greek Church, Greek Catholic, Maronites, and Druses. But the effect of education on a religious basis, and Medical Mission work among these, is very marked. The advancement in truthfulness and morality and deep religious earnestness is becoming, year by year, more abundantly apparent.

The other branch of work I refer to is carried on by a lady, Miss Taylor, amongst the very poorest of the Moslems in Beyrout, in teaching the girls, and otherwise ministering to them. For sixteen years this work has gone on, and we can to-day point to many of these girls, who were the veriest waifs of the poorest class, occupying good situations as teachers, or settled down as the heads of families, and these latter have introduced into their native homes not only tidiness and habits of cleanliness, but the daily reading of God's Word and prayer, with the singing of Christian hymns. They are also teaching their children what they themselves learned of the pure Gospel, as taught in this school. This Christian influence also extends beyond the children—for grown up men and women, native Mohammedans, may be seen every Sunday and Thursday listening to Bible-teaching in a special meeting for the purpose held in the school.

There is no measurable limit to this work, except that imposed by the amount of money available to carry it on. Miss Taylor works without salary, and the Lebanon schools are conducted upon the most economical scale. I represent both and will be truly thankful for any help to increase the work, and I will gladly send reports to any who wish them and will send me their addresses. —Yours truly, Wm. Ferguson, of Kinmundy.

HEALING BY FAITH.

Dear Sir,—The circumstance stated in The Christian of to-day by Joseph Fisher, D.D., reminds me of a precisely similar case which happened to me more than two years since. I had been much pressed to go to a man who they said was dying; but I had steadily refused, being influenced by an indefinable feeling that I must not, yet; but after a few days I felt just as strongly that I must go.

I did so, and on entering the room was told that death had begun its work, and that, as the poor say, he was dying upwards, for the feet and legs were stone-cold and fixed in death, as it seemed, up to the knees.

I felt the solemnity of the scene, and stood for some minutes silently looking at the man, who, apparently, was departing unsaved. I asked him no questions, but merely said a few words as to his awful condition, so that the tears came into his eyes. Then I said, "Let us pray;" and as I stood waiting for words a great shaking seized me, so that I had to lean on the bed for support. The purport of my prayer I cannot recall, but that we can imagine, only the words were few.

Then in silence we shook hands and I came downstairs, and entered into conversation with a Christian woman below. Then suddenly I heard the wife calling to me urgently. Her words were, as nearly as I can remember them, these: "He says he is better; something came into his heart whilst you prayed." And so it turned out. The man is still living, though, as he was before, a confirmed invalid.

I add nothing of my own to this statement, which surely speaks for itself, and shows that prayer is no vain thing, and that where man is content to die to his own will, and to follow the leadings of the Holy Spirit, his prayer will be honoured and himself blessed.—I am, yours faithfully, H. W. Foster.

6, Duchess-road, Clifton, near Bristol, Feb. 15.

P.S.—I ought to add that the doctor had given his patient up, and that as I entered I found the women watching and waiting for the end.

LAY PREACHING.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 24th of January last there was a reference to this most important subject, which suggested some thoughts to my mind; by your kind permission I beg to submit these to your readers. Let me first explain that I understand the expression, "lay preacher," to refer to any believer in Christ who, out of love to the Saviour, proclaims his gospel, notwithstanding the fact that he is not the ordained or recognised minister of any particular denomination. In the great majority of instances the lay preachers of this generation have been men raised up by God's grace and mercy, apart from human choice, and, in a sense, inspired, to go forth as evangelists to proclaim the grand, though simple, Gospel of Christ to their perishing fellow-men.

It is being constantly repeated in my hearing that the world has hopelessly degenerated, and I do not wish to controvert the statement. It must be borne in mind, however, that the greater evangelistic spirit of the age has brought evils to the light that existed half a century ago, but were unknown simply because of the want of that Christian missionary earnestness which characterises the present day. Even forty years ago the most earnest and advanced Christian worker could not have anticipated the opening of the thousands of halls, theatres, concert-rooms, town-halls, and open-air stations that are now occupied week after week by faithful men of God holding forth the Word of life. For a layman, not further back than forty years, to occupy the pulpit of a place of worship, except in the Wesleyan bodies, would have been indeed a wonder; but, blessed be God, this generation has witnessed the raising up of a noble band of able and earnest preachers among so-called laymen.

One of the lessons taught by my experience is this, that even now, both in the Metropolis and the provinces, the fields are "white already to harvest," and that the words of the apostle Paul may be consistently quoted, at least in this particular, viz, the Lord has opened to his people a great and effectual door for the preaching of his glorious Gospel; and further, that He is ready to bless in abundant measure that same Gospel. The labours of evangelists, such as Thomas Cranfield and David Nasmyth in the past, as well as the eminent brethren of our own day, who are too well known to require naming, have stirred up the hearts of the millions of our fellow-countrymen and inaugurated a noble work in which The Christian, under the title of The Revival, was one of the early pioneers.

Many may say, "What can we do?" The direction is at hand, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Let this be followed by an obedient advance to whatever He may clearly point the way. Personally I have a strong desire to make known the Gospel of Christ. With me the sands of time are fast running out, but having found much encouragement in preaching the Gospel as a "layman" and evangelist, I am intensely anxious that others should come forward and help in work for the Master, especially in country districts. It needs but a little self-denial and small expenditure of money; among the immediate returns will be willing listeners, the formation of Christian friendships, and, above all, the great joy of winning souls for Christ.

I earnestly appeal to every reader of this journal to ask himself in solemn earnestness and faithfulness before God, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" To those who are willing and anxious, divine guidance will soon be granted. I may add, that there are brethren ready now to introduce willing workers to spheres of Christian labour in many parts of rural England where the need is greatest. —Yours very truly, W.

London.

PRAYER FOR FUNDS.

Dear Sir,—The canvassing of the principles affecting this subject and topics kindred to it, will no doubt be beneficial to many of us.

I have ventured in my preceding remarks to exhort your readers (to put my observations in a tabular form) as follows:—

(1) Let us pray much, and more.
(2) We are not taught to pray only.
(3) Let us be diligent in the use of means.
(4) But as to our works, let us seek to know the will of God.
(5) And as to the means to effect them, let them be such as we can ask God to bless.
(6) It is a good thing, and appropriate to the truth of the unity of the one body of Christ, to cultivate mutual sympathy by giving information rather than expecting it by impressions.

Other points may be taken by degrees. For the present, let us consider one which arises from a letter in your pages of the 15th inst., in which the writer says:—

"Let us be satisfied for the Lord to use us or not as He pleases; and not lean to our own understanding."

The latter clause is scripturally true. But does the former part contain the form of sound words?

For my part, I see it right to hold for myself, and to exhort my fellow-Christians, that we should never remain satisfied if we are not used of the Lord.

One may be a Sunday-school teacher, and see no fruit. Another a leading member of a Young Men's Christian Association, and see no good of all his labour. Another a preacher, and find a good singing congregation, and see no souls converted. Another a pastor, and see no disciples training to become like their Lord in character, grace, and service. Another a City Missionary, and feel barren. There may be all sorts of other works coming to little. There may be idleness in ourselves, however outwardly busy, living in spiritual inactivity. Or we may be prone to self-glory, therefore the Holy Spirit does not use us. Or we may have given place to other things, best known to each individually, which war against the soul; we are inwardly asleep, while outwardly active, and are dull of conscience and prostrate.

I must, therefore, say: If we are not used of the Lord, let us be dissatisfied at not being used. Let us search our own hearts, and seek in prayer to discover why this is so. So far as my experience of some years goes, every warm-hearted, diligent, prayerful man, woman, and child is used of the Lord in some degree. And I fear our great enemy would soon trip some of us up if we held that we may remain satisfied for the Lord not to use us. It cannot possibly be that there is any unwillingness on the Lord's part to use us, if we are wholehearted for Him, if we really wish to be vessels, fitted for the Master's use, prepared unto every good work.

I would, therefore, add to the above six exhortations this also:—

(7) If we are not used of the Lord, let us search our hearts and ways and works and spirit and desires, and then lay our case before the Lord in earnest supplication. But let no single member in the vast body of the universal Church of God be satisfied to be unused.

It is indeed already done; yet let earnest preachers and exhorters more and more urge it, especially upon the young life of the Church—the duty, the privilege, the joy, the ramifications of good, of serving the Lord, and of pressing on and on, fully assured of his gracious willingness to use us, and craving earnestly to be used of him more and more, both to adorn this doctrine and to spread his name. J. V. S.

CONVALESCENT COTTAGE, EPPING.—Two hundred and nine patients, of ages from a few months to eighty years, have been during the past year under the care of the superintendent of this home. The stay at the cottage is limited to a fortnight, but, short as the time is, the benefit, spiritually as well as physically, has far exceeded expectations. Many have been led to make choice of heavenly service, and in one instance, in a home in the East-end of London, daily family reading of the Bible has been a regular occurrence since the father was a patient in the cottage. The annual sale of work will be held in April next, and articles will be received at the home by the hon. secretary, Mary J. Catlin. In the coming year some outlay for repairs in the house will have to be made. Mr. A. T. Alexander, Bedford Institute, Spitalfields E., is treasurer.

Notices of Books, &c.

The National Temperance Publication Depôt haf recently sent forth new editions of two series o Mr. J. B. Gough's Orations, neatly and attractively bound.

Press Manual for 1883. May & Co., 73, Gracechurch-street, E.C. 6d. The sixth yearly issue of this valuable work of reference seems more comprehensive and complete than ever.

The Englishwoman's Year Book for 1883. By L. M. H 1s. 6d. paper; 2s. 6d. cloth. Hatchards. A directory to all institutions existing for the benefit of women and children. The information given is apparently complete.

The Biblical Treasury, Part XIX. 4d. Sunday-school Union. The present number of this expository and illustrative companion to the Bible takes the reader as far as the Epistles to the Ephesians and Philippians.

The Philosophy of Advertising. 1s. H. Sell. This work will be found of practical benefit to those who have frequently to advertise their wares. A newspaper register for 1883 and an advertiser's map of the British Isles are appended.

Botany. By Mr. G. T. Bettany. 6d. Physical Geography. By Professor P. M. Duncan. 6d. Ward, Lock & Co. These cheap "Science Primers for the People" contain much scientific information, conveyed in an attractive and simple style. The illustrations are abundant.

History of Julius Cæsar. By Jacob Abbott. 1s. 4d. T. Woolmer. A clear and connected narrative of the career of the famous Roman Emperor, couched in a simple style. Many useful lessons are drawn from the events described and the characters delineated.

We have received from The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, The Official Year Book of the Church of England. 3s.; cloth, 4s. It contains nearly 800 closely filled pages of information supplied by the different dioceses. The same firm publishes The Book of Common Prayer, with Commentary.

We have received from The Book Society specimens of a new railway-ticket Gospel text-card, issued at 6d. per 100. Also No. 1 Bible Gem series of Sunday-school reward tickets, 6d. per packet of 192 Scripture texts. We commend them to the attention of tract distributors and Sunday-school teachers of junior classes.

Our Pledge Book (1s., Hodder & Stoughton), used in connection with Mr. William Noble's Mission, contains over fifty pledge-cards of the Blue Ribbon Army, with counterfoil. The cards are very tastefully designed, and will serve as a permanent record of the date of joining the Gospel Temperance movement.

The Scripture Painting-Book for Children. Designed by W. Gunston. 1s.; cloth, 2s. Book Society. An admirably got-up volume, containing a number of outline pictures, illustrative of Bible story. While the youthful artist is filling up the pictures, he will also become familiarised with many of the most interesting scenes described in holy writ.

God's Arithmetic. By Mrs. F. West. S. W. Partridge & Co. This little book is uniform with a series being issued by these publishers, similar to "Birdie and Her Dog." The teaching is illustrative of the additions to faith mentioned in 2 Peter i. 5-7. It is simple, and well suited to children. The series would be a valuable addition to a Sunday-school library.

The Temptations of Job, and other Poems. By Ellen Palmer. George Philip & Son. The Bible story of the patriarch's trials and temptations is here simply and effectively given in poetry, with occasional parenthesis, telling the supposed effect on the angelic hosts of Job's alternations of faith and unbelief. Many of the other poems are very pleasant and readable.

Those of our readers who took an interest in the remarkable life-work of Pastor John Bost, founder of the La Force Asylums, will be glad to possess the very interesting biographical sketch of the Pastor published by Messrs. J. Nisbet & Co. It has been translated from the French of Professor A. Bouvier Monod, and gives, within brief compass, an admirable view of the man and his noble mission.

Through the Khyber Pass. By the Rev. J. Gelson Gregson. Elliot Stock. The author is well known for his successful labours in the Temperance cause in India. He accompanied the soldiers in the late Afghan War through the Khyber Pass to Cabul, sharing their dangers and trials. We have here a graphic account of his experiences, with an important bearing on the question of total abstinence.

Abide in Christ; Thoughts on the Blessed Life of Fellowship with the Son of God By A. M. Nisbet & Co. This octavo volume contains meditations on Scriptures relating to abiding in Christ, arranged for each day of the month. It breathes a spirit of devout trust in Christ and his promises, and is likely to be very helpful to the young believer. The book was originally published in the Dutch language, and is said to have been much blessed in Holland.

Life Through the Living One. By Dr. J. H. Brookes, of St. Louis. 1s. Hodder & Stoughton. This book is small in bulk but big in sterling worth. Every page sparkles with Gospel gems of purest ray serene. Every chapter is a Kohinoor of saving truth. The sin-stricken wayfarer, though the veriest fool in a purely intellectual sense, could scarcely err in the understanding of the how and wherefore of salvation if he follows the teaching of this skilful expositor. The twenty-one "Stumbling Blocks Removed" are framed to meet almost every conceivable soul difficulty. In a word, we have here the evangelical Gospel in a few nutshells.

Thoughts on Prayer, Selected Chiefly from Modern Writers. By W. E. Winks. (Religious Tract Society.) This is a very useful compilation, containing extracts from the writings of some of the foremost Christian men of modern times on "The Authority, the Nature, the Difficulties, the Methods, and the Results of Prayer." The names, from amongst many others, of the Duke of Argyll, Trench, Guthrie, Arnold, M'Cosh, Bushnell, Chalmers, Power, Maurice, Edward Irving, Daniel Moore, and Binney, will show that the selection is from writers of various schools of thought, and many valuable answers will be found in it to the sceptical and scientific, though often shallow, objections to prayer so often raised in the present day.

Scenes and Adventures in Great Namaqualand. By Rev. B. Ridsdale. T. Woolmer. A very graphic account of missionary experiences and labours in the interior of South Africa. The perusal of such a record as this, while dispelling somewhat the halo of romance that clings around the missionary's calling, greatly increases our admiration for the self-sacrifice it often entails. Mr. Ridsdale's pen flows freely, and we feel much indebted to him for these fascinating sketches of the countries and the peoples among whom he laboured in the Gospel so zealously and so successfully. Young men and women who have at any time been moved by a desire to give their lives to foreign Mission work will find that desire stimulated by these pleasant pages.

Matthew Henry's Commentary. Part I. 3s.6d. Hodder & Stoughton. An excellent opportunity is afforded by this re-issue, of possessing a Standard Commentary. The work will be completed in nine parts. It is almost superfluous to say anything in praise of the work. The fact that it has been nearly 200 years before the public and is at the present day regarded as one of the most reliable of its kind, is sufficient recommendation. There are a number of illustrations. The value of the work is further enhanced by the addition of original notes, critical, historical, and geographical. Mr. Spurgeon thus sums up his opinion of this book: "It is a poor man's Commentary, the old Christian's companion, suitable to everybody, instructive to all." We heartily commend the endeavour to bring such a work within the reach of the multitude.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN IN GLASGOW.—Mr. Quarrier (318, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow) writes in a recent issue of the Daily Mail: "We have been as busy as ever taking in destitute children, and helping other needy ones day by day. We have now nearly 450 children in the Homes, and it takes about £25 a day for their maintenance, independent of money for buildings, &c. The time for sending our annual band of children to Canada is drawing near, and in addition to the money we have already in hand for that purpose, we shall need about £1000 more."

CANADIAN HOMES FOR POOR CHILDREN.—At a meeting lately held at the Orphan Home Hall, Glasgow, Miss Bilbrough, from Belleville, Canada, gave an interesting account of the Canada Homes, and of the children sent over to her care by Mr. Quarrier. In not a few cases, she said, orphans have been adopted into families. Some of the elder lads are now farmers or tradesmen on their own account, and prospering as well as could be desired. Mr. Quarrier mentioned that a band of boys would be sent to Canada about the end of March, and a band of girls in May. All the experience he had been able to gather in connection with similar institutions convinced him that children could be helped in no way so well, and at so small a cost, as by emigration.

Mission and other Appeals.

DOCK LABOURERS' MISSION.—Work has been very scarce in the Docks during the past two months, and many of the poor casual labourers have been near starvation point. I have relieved so many with food and lodging that my funds are quite exhausted.—C. COLEMAN, 26, Chamber-street, London Docks, E.

MADEIRA "STRANGERS' REST."—We are greatly in need of more beds; £7 will get two beds complete. Lady Ashtown has just given us two and Colonel Gascoigne two. Will any of your readers help to keep the sailors of the Channel Fleet, expected here on March 13th, from going astray to the haunts of vice by giving us money for beds. We require twenty-four more.—WM. GEO. SMART, 73, Rua das Pretas, Funchal, Madeira.

PROTESTANT SCHOOLS IN MADEIRA.—It is feared that some of these schools must be closed, for want of support. The teachers are working for small salaries, and economy is not overlooked. Very little aid, however, can be obtained in the island, many of the resident English declining to subscribe, lest they should offend the natives. Will readers of THE CHRISTIAN come "to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Help will be thankfully received by Major REEVE, Funchal, Madeira.

WALDENSIAN CHURCH MISSIONS IN ITALY.—The Italian Mission of the Waldensian Church was established in 1848; it has now 41 settled congregations, 36 missionary stations, and 152 localities visited by its evangelists. There are nearly 5000 communicants, while 1860 scholars attend the Sunday-school. A college has been founded at Florence for training ministers and evangelists. The cost of supporting these is £11,000 per annum. The Waldenses support the churches and schools in their own valleys, but ask for help for their missions in other parts of Italy. Major M. Frobisher, 118, Pall Mall, London, S.W., is secretary.

SEVEN DIALS CHURCH MISSION.—This Mission was commenced about twenty-five years ago in a chandler's shop. The room held ninety people, and soon there was hardly room to accommodate the number who wished to attend. A missionary was appointed to the district. In course of time a church was built, which is now open every day for meetings. More voluntary helpers are urgently needed. A Scripture-reader and an extra Mission woman are also required, but the workers have not funds sufficient at present to engage them. The hon. treasurer is Mr. R. RUTHVEN PYM, Coutts' Bank, 59, Strand, London, W.C.

COLOGNE.—For some time past a number of Christian workers have been holding meetings every evening at Cologne with much blessing. They distribute tracts inviting the people to come to the service. There seems to be a hungering after the Word of God, and there is every reason to believe that many have been savingly converted. The room where services are held only accommodates 200 persons, and is far too small for the number who wish to attend. The local Christians have collected £450 for the support of the work, and they now appeal for help to friends at a distance. They require a hall to seat about 2000 people. The work is well known to Dr. Laseron, Deaconesses' Institute, Tottenham, London, by whom subscriptions will be received.

STEAM LAUNCH FOR MALTA HARBOUR.—Since the opening of the Suez Canal, Malta has become one of the most important ports of call for vessels eastward-bound. Numbers of sailors are constantly in the harbour. It is greatly desired to carry on evangelistic work among them, but this can only be effectually done by the help of a steam launch that will go from vessel to vessel. Every Sunday a free tea has been given by Captain Stephens, harbour missionary, to nearly one hundred seamen, many of whom are found to be in needy circumstances. A launch has been purchased, and in a few weeks will be ready to sail. A reader of THE CHRISTIAN sent jewellery to the value of £20, and Sir J. Tyler gave £265. About £100 is still required, and help will be thankfully received by Rev. E. W. Matthews, British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Shadwell, London, E.

Christian Abstinence.

An Extract from an Address.

By HUGH M. MATHESON, Esq.

Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN.

"I have to mingle with a very large number of young men in connection with Young Men's Christian Associations and other movements; and it is exceedingly important to be able to lead on right lines, of which they will never be ashamed, the younger members of the community who are to take our places when we are gone. And while we cannot guarantee the stability of any one, there is a very clear and distinct plan to avoid falling into habits of intemperance; and that is—to take NO ALCOHOLIC DRINK."—Extract.

Spiritual Power FOR Missionary Work,

By REV. GRIFFITH JOHN,

Missionary to China.

With Preface by Rev. HENRY SIMON, of Westminster Chapel.

"The need of the Spirit of God in all missionary work, and of Christian work of every kind, is the burden of this pamphlet. He is to the Church the Source of all spiritual illumination—of all holiness—of all spiritual unity—of all spiritual joy—of all that influence in the the Church and in ministry of a man that gives him special capability for dealing with human souls. He is the Inspirer of all true prayer; indeed, every element of spiritual power is of Him. That is what Mr. JOHN presses home, and we wish his pamphlet was sown broadcast in our churches."

By D. L. MOODY.

Neatly printed on tinted paper, suitable for enclosing in letters.

"There are a great many of God's professed children who live in continual bondage, in the constant fear of death. I believe this is dishonouring to God. I believe that it is not His will to have one of His children live in fear for one moment. If you know the truth in Jesus, there need be no fear, there need be no dread, because death will only hasten you on to glory; and your names are already written in heaven."—Extract.

THE WHITE FIELDS OF ENGLAND.

An Entreaty to Communicants.

By REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? And who that reflects can fail to observe that the gross state of our large towns arises very much from their being grossly neglected by us communicants. Their sad state is patent to every observing foreigner whom business brings into the midst of us, and he naturally looks with contempt and abhorrence on what he styles our "Christianity."—Extract.

THIRD SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of MR. C. E. TODD (Secretary to the Theatrical Mission, 21, King-st., Covent-garden).

N.B.—This excellent Mission, which is worthy of support, by Christians of all denominations, is carried on by a Committee of earnest Christian gentlemen, with an Association of Ladies also, and has been eminently useful to Theatrical employes.

Mr. Courthope E. Todd visited Coombe Lodge in May and June of last year. A tendency to disease had been manifested in two cases of his family. Exposure and wet had first, in his case, produced cough with expectoration, and pains in both sides of the sternum. This patient was decidedly weak at the chest, and on the verge of Consumption.

He got well, and writing me in September relative to the cases of two young women rescued from the stage and engaged in business, whom he desired to place under my treatment, he says:—

"I know not how to express to you my boundless thanks for the very successful treatment which I received at your hands. I feel perfectly well, and have no trouble now in throat or chest. The marvellously rapid cure of my cough has induced me, wherever I go, to recommend your medicine. I have given it to our young women who have been suffering, and not a few have reaped benefit."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. Boyd, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. Robert Boyd, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By Alexander Dickson. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. Moody. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."
The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. Daniel Baker. With Preface by D. L. Moody. Tinted Covers, 1s. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." Author's Preface.

"AN ISRAELITE INDEED."

"Joe C—was a dear young friend of ours; one, it might be said, as of Nathanael of old, in whom was 'no guile.' But though he had naturally this guileless spirit, it could not be said of him, until he was seventeen years old, that he was 'an Israelite indeed.' His conversion was so simple. It was just through his sister saying to him one day, 'Are you a Christian, Joe?' She was a Christian herself, and she longed for her brother to decide for Christ. He could not say 'yes,' so he was silent; but he could not rest until he knew that he was a Christian too. A few days after, when the subject was renewed, and the same question asked again, it was answered this time with an emphatic 'Yes!'"

To the Readers of The Christian.

Dear Friends,

I want to make an earnest appeal to you for help. As Secretary to the RESCUE SOCIETY, I have often had to ask your assistance. Much of that assistance has been rendered anonymously. I thank you most heartily for the aid you have extended to the Society through me for the long period of thirty years. The Society, with its many Homes full of inmates, is now in great need—in fact, absolutely without Funds. We have never yet been under the necessity of sending any of our inmates away, and I do trust in God we never shall.

I have been laid aside by illness for many weeks, and am now, under medical advice, compelled for a time to relinquish the labours in which I have so much delighted. I am ordered to take a long voyage—to New Zealand—and that without delay. How grateful I shall be to you if under these circumstances you should be led to send us assistance! Arrangements have been made by which the Society's work may, with God's blessing, go on as before. Applications, therefore, from you on behalf of any poor girl will receive every consideration.

Yours faithfully,

85, Queen Street, Cheapside, London. DANIEL COOPER.

THE LIFE OF GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

By J. R. ANDREWS,

Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

LOCOMOTION IN WHITEFIELD'S TIME.

"It is remarkable how well Whitefield succeeded in travelling from place to place in the short time he did, especially when the state of the roads a hundred years ago is taken into consideration; and when travelling on horseback through the narrow muddy lanes, or sailing in the slow clumsy vessels of those days, were the only means of locomotion. Late in July he is in Cork; the first week in August at Wednesbury, in Staffordshire; on the 26th of the same month he is in London; a month later at Exeter; four days later in Bristol; and, after another brief interval of five days, he is in London again. This, be it remembered, was only a part of his summer labours, extending over England, Scotland, and Ireland. Of Plymouth he speaks in warm acknowledgments. 'Blessed be God, I can send good news of Plymouth. The scene was like that of Bristol, only more extraordinary to see officers, soldiers, sailors, and dockmen attending with the utmost solemnity upon the word preached. If the weather should alter, I may be in town: if not, I may range farther. This spiritual hunting is delightful sport, when the heart is in the work. How soon does the summer fly away!'" Special Services for the Destitute.

RAGGED CHURCH AND CHAPEL UNION. Office—4, Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross. Patron—The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury.—Rule I. The object of this Association is to raise Funds to assist in providing buildings for Places of Worship for the sole and exclusive use of the Destitute Poor of the Metropolis. Funds are Urgently Needed to meet the many Pressing Appeals made to the Committee. The number of Places of Worship connected with the Union is 100. Were that number multiplied tenfold there would be room for them. The Committee feel that they cannot too earnestly press upon all who are interested in Christ's work, that the class whom they seek to evangelise will not trouble themselves to seek after the Gospel. The Gospel must be carried to their very doors; they must be "compelled" to come in; and this can be accomplished only by establishing places for meeting to which they can resort without trouble and without form or ceremony. Such places can be maintained at a small expense or cost. Contributions will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Arthur Sperling, Esq., J.P.; Secretary, Mr. W. A. Blake, 4, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or by the Bankers, Messrs. Smith, Payne, & Smiths, 1, Lombard-street, E.C.

HOME OF REST, Walton-on-Naze.—Mrs. Moon begs to thank the anonymous subscribers to this charity. Kensington, £2; Pentonville, £1. Subscriptions are earnestly asked for to carry on this work.

THE COMMITTEE of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for contributions in aid of the poorer patients and their families. The smallest gifts in money and clothing will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee.

Restoration to Health:

HOW IS IT TO BE OBTAINED?

What saith the Scripture?

THE word medicine occurs only four times in Scripture, but the word healing, either in its physical or spiritual significance, runs like a silver thread interwoven with all the fabric of Scripture truth.

This healing is from Him, and through the means which He has provided who has said, "I am the Lord that healeth thee" (Exod. xv. 26). And it is in this double sense that we are to understand much of Scripture truth, and are to receive the blessing promised.

It is believed by many sincere Christians, that the man who has been disappointed in the use of means is most likely to get the blessing of healing by faith, because he has not sought extraordinary interference on his behalf without first trying the ordinary means of helping himself. It needs scarcely that one be a Christian to know that this self-help is the common law of our existence. Instead of restoration to health and the full enjoyment of life, the answer to our prayer may be, "My grace is sufficient for thee;" therefore, if the prayer of faith and the legitimate means of striving do not succeed, the real disciple has been led to feel, even in his disappointment, that God has had some better thing in reserve for him. One thing is fairly certain, that we cannot dishonour the Giver of all good by using the means which he has provided. We say this reverently, because no man has any proprietorship in God's gifts of pure air, water, sunlight, magnetism, or oil, as prescribed in James v. 14, but may as markedly develop and apply their healing properties as the hydropath has already done with respect to the health-giving virtues of water. We do not make these statements as mere theorists or experimentalists, but we appeal to the thinking portion of the community, who surely can discern the essential difference between the practice of medicine and the art of healing. Medicine is only corrective. The idea of cure comes with all completeness when the patient is healed.

There are multitudes of chronic sufferers who cannot be aided either by medical or surgical skill; moreover, the complicated difficulties in the practice of medicine are well known to both patient and practitioner. To what extent these difficulties prevail in the treatment of chronic ailments, as compared with acute affections, needs no comment.

Mr. Garratt's views on medicine, as expressed in the published essays, are based on some knowledge and experience of the sanatory effect of natural and uncompounded remedies.

The law of Magnetism, as applied to the art of healing, gives the latest and best illustration of what Science and Art, in combination with natural law, can effect. This is increasingly manifested in the experiences of his patients. See the list of 850 names of those who by Magnetic Treatment have recovered from various chronic maladies. These will show that in devoting his energies to the perfecting of such a remedy he has not laboured in vain.

He specially calls the attention of readers to his recent tractate "Healing by the Prayer of Faith, or by Faith and Works?"* and also to the published essays explanatory of the principles on which his Magnetic treatment is based.

He will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.

HOW TO BEGIN.

A TRUE NARRATIVE.

MANY people would gladly undertake personal work among the poor, if they only knew how to begin. They read their Bibles, and the words are clear: "Ye have the poor always with you, and whensoever ye will, ye may do them good." The question arises, "How shall we do this good?" To avoid pauperising, encouraging imposture, neglecting the really needy, or giving to those who are already provided for, is no such easy matter. At the same time, it cannot but be wrong to let our Lord's words lie disregarded, and for fear of doing harm, refrain from attempting to do good.

These difficulties I carried to the Saviour, and asked Him how I could rightly obey the spirit of His words. The answer soon came. It was a pouring wet afternoon of a November day; I was holding a baby child up to the window, that he might watch the splashing of the heavy rain-drops, when my attention was attracted by a little girl in the deserted streets. She limped slowly along, a wretched little figure, the water streaming from her miserable rags, and evidently drenching her to the skin. She crawled down the area-steps of the house next our own, then re-appearing, she went to our back-door, and after a moment's pause, came up again.

I had called a friend to look, and she was filled with pity: "Do, do stop her; do give her some pennies: here, I have some in my pocket!" At first I refused, thinking it useless to try and help such misery, but my heart rebuked me. "If you do not go now," said the inner voice, "you will never have another chance, and you will always feel a reproach whenever you think of that child; do not let her pass without a word." So I ran to the front door and called. The child came slowly towards me with her crutch, and nearly stumbled over the low doorstep; then I saw that she was almost blind.

"No father, mother very ill, no brothers or sisters, no friends; only a crust in her bag from next door, and a penny our maid had just given her. Would I buy one of her two match-boxes? Yes, she was very wet; she did not mind that; she had come two miles or more, feeling her way along the railings. Yes, she was hungry." The gentle little voice and manner, the quiet white face with its darkened eyes, touched me keenly. I gave her some food, and pence, and taking her name and address, bade her go straight home.

Next day we went to seek her out, and found the pitiful story all too true. Since the father's death, some months before, the mother had barely managed to struggle on, and was now utterly broken down by want and illness. She was forced to send the child begging for daily food. We gave what immediate help we could, and soon after took the little girl to a West-end hospital, where the surgeon pronounced her eyes curable, if she could immediately be sent for some months to the sea-side, and have abundance of fresh air, nourishing food, and good care; otherwise she must inevitably become totally blind for life before long.

With the kind help of friends, we were able in a few days to place the little one in a Convalescent Home for some weeks, having first provided her with a tidy outfit; we next sent her to a Cottage Home for some months, where she gained ground in a wonderful way. It was then found advisable to place her in a regular Home, to be trained for service, and when she came to see us on her way thither, we could scarcely recognise her. The miserable little creature of eight months back had changed into a bright rosy girl, who ran to meet us—her lameness gone, and her pretty, clear, blue eyes taking intelligent note of all around. The change seemed little short of miraculous.

I need only add that it has so far proved a a lasting cure. The little maiden is doing thoroughly well in her new life, and we trust that, both soul and body rescued, she may become a happy, useful woman, when sent out into the world. At the least, she has been granted the blessing of restored sight, which was so fast slipping from her, for ever.

For the mother, not much could be done by us. Clothing was given, and money-help, and a time in a Convalescent Home, but she proved too sunken for our hands to raise her. Drink and vagrancy were too strong for us. She is constantly in hospital or infirmary, and we are the more thankful when we see from what utter misery and degradation her child has been rescued by Him who sent her to our door that rainy afternoon.

PROBA.

PENTECOSTAL DAYS IN SYRIA.

DEAR SIR,—I send you a copy of a letter sent by Mr. Christie, of Adana (near Tarsus), to the American Board of Missions in Constantinople. It refers to a great revival in the neighbourhood of the region where believers were first called Christians, and I send it you in order that the brethren may rejoice, and join in supplication that the work be continued and extended.—Yours truly,

J. R. VAN MILLINGEN.

Constantinople, July 16.

Adana, Turkey, Jan. 26, 1883.

DEAR BRETHREN,—Rejoice with us, for the Holy Spirit is working mightily in Adana. In October last, a young man, from the Marash Theological Seminary, began to preach here. Under God he has been the main instrument in effecting the great and glorious change which now gladdens all hearts. His prayers, his stirring sermons, and his earnest efforts with individuals can never be forgotten in Adana.

The Week of Prayer was observed with daily meetings that were full of promise. On the Sabbath following that, there were unmistakable signs of the Holy Spirit's presence. Monday, January 22, was kept as a day of fasting and prayer. In the crowded meeting at sunrise that morning, while the young preacher was beginning his remarks, an overpowering influence from the Spirit seized upon him, and instantly swept through the congregation; the people's heads were suddenly bowed down, as when a strong wind passes over a grain field. The preacher was obliged to stop his sermon; the loud sobbing of the people was heard all over the house. Then followed the penitential confessions and prayers of Church members and others, all pervaded by a deep and genuine feeling. The meeting lasted three hours; the day was given to prayer, visiting from house to house, reconciling of old enemies. The meeting in the evening was full of the power of the Spirit; it was carried on for three and a half hours, the people not permitting us to dismiss them. The confessions of backsliders and hitherto untouched sinners were most affecting.

From that time to the present day the revival has gone on with wonderfully accelerating power. Our small place of worship has become entirely inadequate to seat the people. The night before last, 800, by actual count, were present. We are compelled to hold two or three meetings at the same time in different (but contiguous) rooms. The new church is to be ready for us in a week, but even that will be filled to overflowing. The work of building has occupied eight years, and the Lord is bringing it to completion just in time.

Some of the results up to date: A marvellous change in the spirit of Christians; old sores are now healed, or in process of healing; a delightful spirit of love pervades all hearts. There is a new consecration to Christ, a new zeal in the work of saving souls, a new joy shining from every face. The number of those now seeking salvation is beyond a hundred; many of these are already rejoicing in a new-found peace, and are labouring for their companions; others are weeping and groaning under deep conviction of sin. The meetings for the men, for the women, for the pupils in our schools, are full of daily increasing power. Many are the interesting incidents that mark the Spirit's presence. A prominent infidel and opposer of our work is among our converts. Many Armenians and Greeks have joined themselves to the Lord, some of them having never before been in a Protestant meeting. The family altar has been set up in scores of homes. Several drunkards have come to repentance. Wives, mothers, sisters, daughters, tell us with tears of joy that their homes have become a heaven upon earth, through the conversion of husband, son, brother, or father. Some of the most impressive confessions in the meetings have been those of men acknowledging their harsh treatment of wives and daughters. Exclamations of wonder, joy, and praise to God, and prayer for other towns and cities, are heard on every side.

Mrs. Christie and Miss Tucker testify to a universal awakening among the women. There has been a great deepening and extension of the Spirit's work.

The Lord's Day, January 28.—We met for the first time in the new church. The heavy winter rains stopped till evening, so that the day was bright and sunshiny, a blessing heartily appreciated, since there are no windows in the church as yet. In the morning a sermon was preached on Revivals, to which 800 people listened. In the afternoon a sermon from the text, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." 1200 people, by count, filled every inch of floor and gallery. Both after this service and part of the morning we were compelled to hold little gatherings for prayer in the corners of the audience-room, to help men smitten to the heart by the Sword of the Spirit. Some of these cases were exceedingly interesting, but I have no time to describe them. Thus God filled the new temple; on the first day it was occupied with the glory of his Presence.

In the evening 500 were present in spite of the rain. Public confessions were made by those we had talked and prayed with during the day, one of them a thief and gambler. An influential man in the community was reconciled with six others who had wronged him seven years ago, he having stood aloof from the church all that time in consequence; after the meeting we went to his house and urged him now to make his peace with God also.

Monday.—Rain all day: we went about seeing as many of the inquirers as we could: joyful news from the influential man mentioned above; he could not rest last night, thinking of his sins against God and his need of reconciliation with Him; he seems now to have made the great decision, and i s one of the happiest men I ever saw; other interesting cases found by us that day, showing the secret work of the Spirit in places and ways beyond all our expectation.

Wednesday.—The fall of a prominent member of the Church brings godly sorrow and fear upon every soul. He was detected a few days ago in an attempt at gross deception in business; was tried to-day by the Church Committee, his offices were taken from him, and he was put under discipline for an indefinite period; the sentence was confirmed by the whole Church this evening. God is with us in this also; the incident has made a deep and salutary impression in all quarters.

A long letter to-day from a man ashamed to confess in any other way. He tells us the hideous secrets of a life of sin, and asks if forgiveness is possible. The poor wretch has been seen and talked with; he is suffering already some of the torments of hell. May God have mercy on him.

Thursday.—The greatest of all days for the work among the women. Two hundred and fifty women present at noon-meeting; sermon on sin, with explanation of each of the ten commandments. The truth of God struck home, and the prayer-meeting that succeeded was one of extraordinary power. Thirty-six women took part, most of them under hearty conviction of sin. It was a scene never to be forgotten. For many days we have been burdened with a desire for the salvation of these poor souls, and now the answer of God has come in such a manner as to turn all our sorrow into joy.

In the evening a meeting of Christians, to organise for the work; after prayers and earnest addresses—the best of them from some of the new converts—some seventy-five persons offered themselves as workers, and were divided up into companies of three, four, or five, to each of which a special work will be assigned.

It is with hearts full of wonder and joy that we see the progress of this great movement. A thousand testimonies prove to us that it is indeed from God; to Him be all the praise. Two of us hope next week to go to Tarsus, and see if the Lord is not ready to pour out a like blessing on that place also. Will you not pray for a signal manifestation of the Divine power in Tarsus?—Yours in the good cause, T. D. Christie.

A NORTHERN HOME OF HOPE.

Dear Sir,—A small "Home of Hope" was opened in Barnsley about two years ago, for the training, as servants, of young girls who have been early led into a life of sin, but who are really wishful to redeem their character. The lady superintendent is peculiarly fitted for this work; she trains the girls with the firm but loving discipline of a real home, and God has greatly blessed her labours. Hitherto nearly all those who have been sent out to service have given satisfaction and kept their situations.

The population of the town, though large, is composed chiefly of the working classes; and, in the present depressed state of both the linen and the coal trades, we cannot raise all the money needed for working the home without appealing to those outside. The blessing of God has so manifestly rested on this Home that we feel we must not curtail its usefulness until we have put forth every effort. It is the only Refuge in the town, and the temptations to the young are here peculiarly strong. The girls who have been admitted are nearly all under twenty—some as young as fifteen. Can we dare to shut the door of hope on such mere children?—Yours faithfully, Frances S. Hallowes, Hon. Sec.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES.

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

Chap. IX.—(Concluded.)

And again, if religious economy be properly dwelt upon, there will be

AN AVOIDANCE OF WASTE.

This is not sufficiently regarded in our counsels and arrangements. As soon as business men get out of the sphere of the secular into that of the religious, they are often perceived to have left their business faculty outside. Many of these successful traders have reached their table-land of prosperity by a diligent watching against waste of time and expense. Would that they were equally careful when they take part in ecclesiastical councils! The Church would be a great gainer if her unseemly extravagance were brought to an end.

Some Christians are like the people in the Galilean city, who wished Jesus to stay always with them, as a sort of living specific against all bodily disorders. No matter what the diseased in other cities suffered, if they were only kept all right. And modern believers disclose an equal selfishness. They ask for sermons which shall "build them up;" and as to the unregenerate, well, they must be content with what crumbs of energy remain after the saints are served. A religion which is always crying out after being "built up" is, self-confessed, a poor tumble-down affair. At the same time we must expend a good deal of our available capital in the conservation of results already gained. We are somewhat pent up and put upon the defensive. Our children and converts are solicited on every side. Satan's pet agencies are employed to plunder us of our precious possessions. It will never do to neglect what we have in order to secure what we have not. While we are storming some citadel of Satan, he may take advantage of our withdrawal and storm one of ours. And so institutions which do little more than conserve, may rightly claim a wide and deep outflow of Christian effort. Yet should there be a large reserve of strength, money, and inventiveness, which shall be consecrated entirely to extension. Enviable indeed is the Church which has learned the art of dividing rightly between conservatism and aggression its manifold riches! But how rare the spectacle! By most the energies are frittered away; duties are performed half-heartedly and therefore wastefully, and other duties are gone through awkwardly. Altogether we are forced into a belief that the waste of labour in the Church all but equals the waste of money in the nation. More precious than the world's stores of jewels and gold is its wealth of Christian love, and there is no waste so calamitous and inexcusable as that of the products of such love.

And while the squandering of our realised resources is guarded against, equal care must be shown in the discovery and utilisation of those as yet unrealised. Every Church ought to take an inventory of its goods with a view to utilising them. Then will it waken up to the great quantity and high quality at its disposal. It will be amazed at the extent of the surplus beyond what has hitherto been seized and dedicated. Every type of disposition and every species of knowledge can be made in some way useful. Doubtless "Every one doing his duty" belongs to an ideal Church rather than to a real one, but each Church is to work toward that. Fertility in devising methods by which each willing soul can be employed is a valuable faculty either in person or community. The reproach flung at early Christianity was the best praise that could have been given to it; it was said that "this new religion was promulgated chiefly by women and children." Every disciple turned propagandist. According as a modern Church approaches that point does it become a model Church.

It pays, then, to advise Christians, even the timid and young among the rest, to tax their own ingenuity in the finding out of

NEW METHODS OF INFLUENCING AND WINNING SOULS.

Many schemes will thus be inaugurated, most of which will fail. But the lessons from failure will not be lost, and there will be a "survival of the fittest" among these schemes. Those which contain in themselves the elements of success will be taken up by other workers also. The great apostle understood this well. He had joy in directing others, but he always liked to leave them, to some extent, to their own discretion. He advised, "Fulfil my wish in having a weekly subscription for the Judean poor, but use your own powers in making choice of the persons by whom you will send the money." But it must be perceived that most believers who wish to work, and are even greedy after chances of self-sacrifice, have not sufficient resolution or knowledge to discover the widest and wisest channels. They will stand close to an open door and will either not see that it is open, or will be afraid to enter it. They would gladly place themselves under the orders of some born leader of men—of some well-informed and God-anointed nature.

NOT TOO MANY SPEAKERS.

"What general directions shall we give to the lay missionary employed by us?" Tell him candidly that he is not to throw away his evenings at a number of small meetings, either in cottages or elsewhere. If he goes at the right time into the houses of the labouring classes, there is no telling what gems he may discover, and what jewels he may aid in polishing. Only a few weeks ago I found in a humble home a child of seven, pale, stunted in his growth, and blind, but literally all music. Not a lesson has he had, and yet he can imitate on the piano the tuning of fiddles and the peculiar tones of hand organs, he can bring a tune out of a potato-scale, and can play difficult compositions after hearing them just once. Who can overdraw the possibilities of usefulness in the consecrated future of that boy? This is only a specimen of many treasures which undoubtedly exist in the meaner localities, and which, by economic arrangements, may be readily laid at Jesus' feet.

"How many speakers shall we ask for our annual gathering?" Don't ask a large number of men who, if not at your meeting, would be usefully engaged elsewhere. Each speaker can only have a short time given to him, and in that time can neither do justice to his audience, his theme, nor himself. As a rule, a multiplicity of speakers is resorted to, just for the sake of making the circular or poster attractive and powerful. They are deluded or drawn into giving a promise, and thus are withheld from other soul-saving work which would pay well the kingdom of Christ.

How much are we to spend on certain neighbourhoods and individuals, when, for some time, we have had no signs of success, and we might, seemingly, be better employed in some other quarter? That depends. Natures hard to be won prove sometimes more than worth all the trouble; and so it is with localities; when the breaking-up does come, it is thorough indeed. Better stay too long than give up too soon. The nations of Northern Europe at first repelled Christianity with ferocity. Her missionaries, for some scores of years, had to walk over the martyred bodies of their predecessors. Yet those nations once gained, how great that gain was!

THERE IS WORK FOR ALL.

"What shall I do?" says a delicate girl. You can visit the poor. No minister's face will be as grateful to their sight as yours, for your simplicity and sincerity will carry with them a special charm, and you will be free from the professionalism which too frequently clings to a minister, in spite of himself.

"And what shall I do?" asks a youth, who, though he will never sparkle, may yet keep up a steady shining. You may give up something more for Jesus. Perhaps it is tobacco. "Oh, but that does me no harm!" No, but it may do harm to Christ's little ones; and surely we ought not to grudge what we give up for our Saviour. And then you may be able to collect some middle-aged men who cannot read, and teach them the art, and make the Bible a living book to them.

Asks a sturdy worker, "How shall I reach this Papist population? They won't take my tracts." I knew of one who "caught them with guile." They had refused his tracts with scorn, but he used the thorns as pins, and left the messengers of grace and truth on the hedges, until, actuated by curiosity, and ignorant of the device, the unwary Papists took them down and read them. He who would be wise is often halfway to wisdom, and the Omniscient Spirit will teach that one new ways of affecting the deceived souls.

"How shall I gain these young people in my class?" interjects a teacher. Don't choke your feelings when you talk with them, but, on occasion, let your feelings choke you. And say to one in whose life ugly signs are disclosing themselves, "I should like to sit with you to-night. I'll meet you at the door, and we'll be together during the service. Will that do?" Most likely it will.

"What bold thing can I do?" Well! some acquaintances of my own have gone into the public-houses on Saturday evenings, and have plunged in among the rabble rout of Sabbath-breakers, and, by firm bearing, courteous demeanour, and kind words have got a fair hearing, and after shaking hands all round, have retired without a single insult having been offered.

A godly merchant presents his question. He may be told that there are men like himself who are going to Mission-rooms and are talking in a straightforward way to the mixed congregations there.

"I shrink from notice, and love the background." Then glean after the reapers. They leave plenty of profitable work behind them. Some ears of corn which have escaped the notice of others may lie across your path.

"I have a good voice, and that is all." And a very blessed "all" it is. Sing for the sick and aged, and you will find that the truths which comfort one sometimes arouse another, and by caring for the ailing you will haply ensnare the healthy and the young.

If we thus try to utilise all our resources, we shall not long have to complain of leanness and barrenness. The very children will prove efficient home missionaries, and will lead their elders to the Friend of sinners. The atmosphere of God's house will be steeped in odours as pleasant to the higher sense as, to the physical sense, are those of a bean-field in flower. No more shall we have sanctuaries built in poor neighbourhoods in which at least 25 per cent. is spent beyond what is necessary, and which money might have been devoted to purposes purely evangelistic, but we shall rather have each member trying to lift the average of thoughtful liberality, of holiness and power. So shall the principles of religious economy be handsomely acknowledged and obeyed, and the saints shall realise that those who perform common duties get *un*common blessings, in like manner with the Bethlehem shepherds, who, while dutifully watching against thieves, obtained a vision of angels.

VALE OF LEVEN, DUMBARTONSHIRE.

THE work here is still most encouraging. The interest awakened by Mr. Moody's visit nine months ago has gone on increasing; the people are more eager to hear the Word preached, and most willing to remain till the after-meeting.

One very delightful feature is the large number of young men who have been brought to Christ, and their willingness to take a part, however humble, in helping forward the good work. As an instance of this, I may mention that at my weekly prayer-meeting last night, several rose and gave testimony to blessing they had received during the past week.

One young man told how strangely he had been led into the meeting, and, when spoken to at the close, "treated the whole thing as a joke;" but the Spirit applied the truth, and that night he decided for Christ. He then resolved not to attend a ball that was to take place during the week, and, on making this known to his lady friend, was greatly astonished to find that she, too, had got blessing, and had been praying that something would happen to prevent them going to it.

Another, for whose conversion we have been long praying, told of the "hard, hard struggle he had, and how peace had come at last." Several others gave remarkable and most delightful testimonies.

At the close of the meeting, a young man, who has been very much given to drink, told me that three nights ago he left home to spend his evening, as usual, in the public-house. On his way there he went into the meeting, and, at the close, was spoken to by one of the workers; that night he decided for Christ. Such cases could easily be multiplied. T. Collins.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—Mr. Jno. H. L. Christien has been holding Missions to the fallen in Plymouth, Devonport, Truro, Falmouth, and Bristol, assisted by many Christian friends. Day and night visitation in the streets, public-houses, and dwellings, and meetings morning, evening, and night, have been sensibly appreciated by those who were being sought. Many cases of real good are reported as the result of the labours of former years. Mr. Christien will be glad to hear from any friends who desire special Missions in their neighbourhood. The office of the Society is 8A, Red Lion-square, London, W.C.

THE SPEZIA MISSION.—In a communication dated Spezia, 15th February, Mr. J. S. Anderson says: During the last ten days I have been engaged in visiting the Venetian stations of the "Spezia Mission for Italy." The centres of this work are the ancient cities (mentioned by Pliny) of Treviso, Pordenone and Belluno. My visit has more than confirmed the brightest hopes I had previously of God's work in the Venetian provinces. As the result of faithful Gospel preaching, true and noble Christian life is being developed at the stations. Even in the many converts I have known in England, I have never witnessed greater self-sacrifice, deeper love, more fervid unction, and more determined perseverance than in the Church at Pordenone, where our Y.M.C.A., and now a Young Women's C.A., are adding their strength with zeal to "the help of the Lord against the mighty."

JOY.

WHEREFORE weeping, O my sister,
On life's battle-field?
Squander not thy strength in mourning
Lest the strength should yield.

Many wounds it costs to conquer,
Many wounds to slay;
Thou wilt need all joy unclouded,
For the fight to-day.

Tears can nerve no heart for effort,
Smiles will win the hour,
For the cheerful warrior warreth
With exceeding power.

He who made the saints to triumph,
(Though they wept awhile,)
Guides, sustains thee, cheers and strengthens;
Therefore, thou must smile.

Change thine attitude despondent,
War is not for long;
Valiant meet thy ghostly foemen,
And with sacred song.

Joy is praise, and praise is power,
Love made bold by faith.;
Joy, and praise, and love, and courage,
Triumph over death.

HOME OF INDUSTRY, SPITALFIELDS.

ON Wednesday, February 21st, the usual monthly meeting of Christian workers was held in the Home of Industry, Commercial-street, Mr. Henry Maude presiding. Miss Macpherson, the moving spirit, was absent in Rome, and was greatly missed. After tea, brief addresses were given by Mr. Stevens, about to sail for China in connection with the China Inland Mission, and by Mr. Broomhall. Then followed inquiry and prayer.

The announced address on the "Seven-fold view of the Christian Worker," was given by Mr. G. Kirkham, Secretary of the Open-air Mission. It was founded on the seven titles of the Christian given in 2 Timothy ii., a son (ver. 1), a soldier (ver. 3), a wrestler (ver. 5), a husbandman (ver. 6), a workman (ver. 15), a vessel (ver. 21), and finally a servant (ver. 24).

Mr. George Holland, of George-yard, Whitechapel, followed with a deeply interesting account of the work the Lord had committed to him among the destitute; and a few words from Mr. Ballantyne, the well-known writer of books for boys, and Mr. Miles, designer of "The Coloured Teacher," brought the meeting to a close.

MOHAMMEDANS IN OROOMIAH, PERSIA.

ON the 19th inst. a meeting of those interested in Pastor Jacob's work was held in the Y.M.C.A., Manchester, to hear an address from the pastor's son Joseph, who is at present studying in Manchester, with a view to his engaging in the work among the Mohammedans with his father as a medical missionary. The address, which was short and judicious, delivered in simple language and in very fair English, was listened to with deep interest.

The Chairman, Mr. Jeremiah Garnett, one of the original supporters of the pastor and his work, explained the present interesting position of the Mission; and Mr. Vannan, Britannia College, Manchester, bore strong testimony to Joseph's capacity and Christian character, remarking that he was decidedly of opinion that the committee had got hold of a most suitable and excellent young man for their object.

Mr. Walter Brown invited those who might feel sufficient interest in this unobtrusive work for Christ to assist by their contributions. The treasurer of the Mission is Mr. W. Murray Fraser, manager, Joint-Stock Bank, Manchester. About £250 a year is required for the present needs of the Mission, which embraces the salary of Pastor Jacob, the education of Joseph, and, if funds admit of it, the opening of a school for Mohammedan children under a Christian teacher.

PREACHING "THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

II.

LET us next trace how, while the words "the Kingdom of God" are not narrated as having been spoken in the discourses already alluded to, it was nevertheless preached or proclaimed. I will refer to three of them; one to Jews, another to Latins, and the third to Greeks.

Observe first, Peter's preaching, in Acts ii. After stating the facts, and connecting them with the prophecy in the 16th Psalm, he declared not simply a Saviour, but that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified both "Lord" and "Christ"—words which to the audience then assembled would express far more than to Gentile hearers. The word "Lord" would bring before a Jew the 110th Psalm, with its wonderful contents—the word of Jehovah—David's Lord—the dignity of Adonai's seat—enemies to be placed at his feet—his rod of power—out of Sion—ruler in the midst of enemies—the day of thy power—the people—their offering with worship—the oath——the priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek, a new order, &c. &c. Imperfectly entered into yet by the Jew, but enough when he heard that he had crucified "Him," to pierce him to the heart.

"Christ" would bring the 2nd Psalm before a Jewish hearer. The state of things at Jerusalem had been exactly foretold in his own Scriptures. The authorities, Roman and Jewish, had taken counsel together; and this now proves to be against Jehovah and His Anointed, the Lord's Christ. But He that dwelleth in heaven had set him upon his holy hill of Sion—"my King"—"my Son"—yet were they mercifully invited to the kiss of reconciliation, warned if they resisted, promised blessing if they submitted.

The Kingdom throughout: yet they had crucified the Lord of the Kingdom, "the Lord of Glory." No wonder they cried, "What shall we do?" In these days some would perhaps have replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." All true—yet not all the truth. The Apostles were not always saying, "Believe" and "Believe," though that was included. Used or not, it is not narrated in this model sermon that the word "believe" was used at all. The stirring answer is, "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." "Be baptized." Fully accepting the ordinance of baptism in water, yet these words should not be limited to the sign, but should embrace the thing signified. It means, in substance, "Become the disciples and adherents of Christ." Baptism in its elementary signification (having also a far deeper one) is the outward expression of discipleship.

They were, then, to repent, and become disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ; and that with reference to obtaining a twofold blessing, for we need both, the remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit.

This second blessing corresponds with, and in its order agrees with, the nineteenth chapter of the Acts. There were at Ephesus certain disciples, who proved to be not yet disciples of Christ, but of John; persons, therefore, who desired to flee from the wrath to come, who were in a repentant state of mind, and were leading a corresponding life. So far, well; but they did not receive the Holy Spirit when they believed. They had, indeed, believed John's doctrine; but they were to trust in Him of whom John was the forerunner, to whom he had pointed as the One coming after him, mightier than he, who would baptize them with the Holy Spirit. Hearing this, they were baptized in water into the name of the "Lord Jesus." They were ready to become, and did now become, his disciples and followers. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, although blessed before through the Holy Spirit's convicting power, yet being contrite sinners and now also disciples of Christ, the Holy Spirit came on them.

Consider Peter's preaching to Cornelius and his friends. They were residing in Cesarea, and were acquainted to some extent with recent events. Peter then touches on the facts already known, and supplies further information. He speaks of God preaching peace by Jesus Christ, adding, He is "Lord of all." Words which a Roman centurion, even if he had not yet seen the Old Testament Scriptures, yet, living in the days of Rome's despotic emperors, would understand, perhaps better than we ourselves, who are living in days when the principle of rule by the people, as well as for the people (the body resting on feet part of iron and part of clay, therefore partly strong and partly brittle), is rising on all sides.

Peter further opens his commission: that the Apostles were charged to preach, and to testify, that this is He which is ordained of God, the Judge of quick and dead; and that to Him bear all the prophets witness that through his name every one that believeth on Him shall receive remission of sins. The ideas in the word "Judge" in its full meaning, I will refer to later. For the present I only point attention to this, that Peter's discourse was not limited to preaching peace, but that it embraced at least these truths that Christ is "Lord of all," and will be "Judge" of all the inhabitants of the earth, whether they have died, or whether they are alive, with all that such words include.

To the same effect, though not in the same words, for the audience was different, is the account of Paul's preaching at Athens: God now commandeth men that they should all, everywhere, whether Jews or Gentiles, repent. Why—because we ought to do so? Doubtless. But because of this also—"inasmuch as He hath appointed a day in which He will judge the inhabited earth in righteousness by the man whom He hath ordained." "Judge the world," and "in righteousness." Was Paul speaking of judging as regards life or death only, or in a fuller sense, though including that? Does not "judging the world," and "in righteousness," include investigating, adjudicating, rewarding, overthrowing, punishing, ruling, governing with perfect rectitude, tending as a shepherd, reigning, as well as deciding on the final state? Does not the "world," the inhabited earth, include all who have lived upon and all things that have taken place upon the earth? And will not "in righteousness" place in one of the scales of justice the consideration of inherited contaminations of soul and body, and all the influences beyond our personal control from birth to death, and all the oppressions of mortal man in all ages domineering over the conscience of his fellow-man, and coming between the sinner and the Saviour?

I understand Paul's statement of this truth in this and other kindred passages to be in substance this: that the invisible God who once overlooked (having his own reasons) the times of ignorance, while He left our race to seek Him, if haply they might feel after Him, with the view to their finding Him (through searching, and not by revelation), He never really being far from each one, is about to act in human affairs directly. Not by angels, nor invisibly; but by the one visible Mediator, the one who has glorified Him on the earth, by a life of love, faith, obedience, and atonement; by Him to save all who have repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ; by Him to punish all obstinate evil-doers, and those who have neglected the great salvation; by Him to regulate, administer, and control all the affairs of man natural and man spiritual, even by means of Him whom every tongue shall confess as "Lord," and who will truly rule, and reign, and bless, to the glory of God the Father.

I note in passing, that, throughout these discourses, as recorded, and throughout the Acts of the Apostles, "the blood of Jesus Christ" was never proclaimed in public. The Apostles always said, "suffer," or "suffered." Until a person has made some progress in understanding the Old Testament sacrifices, he cannot perceive what is meant by the shedding and sprinkling of blood, and may view it in a carnal way. It is a great thing to speak to persons after the pattern of Christ and his Apostles, "as they are able to hear it."

In a third and concluding paper, I propose to consider the subject of Practical Repentance, as affected by the truth of "The kingdom of God."

VILLAGE WORK IN INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—Last year you published an admirable letter by Major Conran, on "The Aborigines and Outcasts of India," which strongly appealed to myself as a missionary. I entirely agree with his remark, that the slow progress hitherto made by the Gospel in some parts of India is to be partly attributed to the neglect of the masses.

Here, in Madras, we have no fewer than thirty-five men engaged in preaching the Gospel to the Christian population. We have some twenty European missionaries engaged in teaching in Mission Schools and Colleges. Besides all these, we have a number of catechists, some of whom assist the native pastors, and a few of whom engage in evangelistic work among the heathen. So far as I know, I am the only European missionary in Madras engaged in vernacular preaching to the Hindus at the present time. When I remind your readers that Madras is almost equal to Manchester in population, they will see how much need there is that some men should be sent here for evangelistic work.

With regard to the Aborigines and outcasts of whom Major Conran writes, Mission work is only beginning amongst these. He speaks chiefly of the hill tribes, but on the plains they are also to be found in millions. In the district extending some forty miles outside of Madras, there are hundreds of villages containing this class alone. Nearly half of my time is spent among these villages, and the work is most hopeful. To many of these villages no missionary visits were made before my own—at least, the people remember none; but in them all "the old, old story" is welcome. I have put down six evangelists in this district, and given to each a circle of villages, and if I could put down five more, the whole district would be fairly well occupied. But this will cost £50, and I cannot see where the money will come from. Some villagers brought me six palmyra leaves the other day containing a list of persons waiting for instruction, that they might become Christians. It pains me that I cannot send them an evangelist at once.

One of the most effectual methods of teaching them, and impressing the Gospel on the hearts of these villagers is the use of the magic lantern, for very few are able to read. Already about two hundred Christians are formed into small churches in this moral wilderness, so that the work is begun. May I beseech our Christian friends to pray for us?

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

RICHARD WEAVER.

WE regret to learn that our brother, Richard Weaver, who is now evangelising in Dundee, is in very poor health. His arduous labours in Cardiff appear to have told upon him. Will our readers bear him up in their intercessions at the mercy seat, asking God, if it should so please Him, to grant restored strength and vigour?

NOTTINGHAM.

A mission was held in Wilford parish from February 3 to 13, conducted by the Rev. William and Mrs. Haslam. I shall never forget good Mr. Haslam's valuable and helpful teaching at the morning services. Our Christian people felt it quite a privilege to be present. Mrs. Haslam's kind and sympathising manner quite won the hearts of the women, and soon our afternoon and evening services were attended by crowds of eager, anxious hearers. Many openly testified to the blessings they had received, and are now asking what they can do for the Saviour who has done so much for them.—Very faithfully yours,

EDW. DAVIES (Rector).

MR. SCROGGIE IN FALKIRK.

The Christians in Falkirk have been quickened, the recent converts confirmed, and many brought to Christ through the labours of Mr. J. M. Scroggie. During the three Sabbaths he was with us large congregations were gathered to hear, filling from floor to ceiling our Town Hall, capable of holding over 2000 people. Still, hundreds had to go away the first Sunday for want of accommodation. During the week-nights that intervened the meetings were well attended, precious souls were saved, and Christians greatly delighted.

The Service of Song was complete. One of Glasgow's sweetest singers—Miss Reid—assisted as soloist, and was supported by a choir on Sunday nights of over 120 voices. Mr. Scroggie is at present in Grangemouth. He afterwards joins Messrs. Moody and Sankey in England.

BUCKS EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

Services have been held at Aylesbury and the neighbourhood of late with great blessing from the Lord. The two fishermen from the North have been here for eight days, and great numbers have come out to all the meetings. Large open-air meetings were held.

On the market-day at noon, when hundreds of farmers come from the neighbourhood, a large banner, with the following cut out in large letters, "Prayer about the Weather," was put in the centre of the market. For an hour we had hundreds of people gathered round while we sang, and prayed, and spoke. Ever since we have had the sunshine, so much needed in this part of the country. There is a grand work going on in this neighbourhood, and we expect even greater things. We have a large band of workers, but the fields are many and ripe for the harvest. J. E. TAYLOR.

MR. OPIE RODWAY,

an evangelist well known in the West of England, has during the past twenty years and more been remarkably owned of God in leading sinners to Christ. His three great ideas are the efficacy of prayer, the operation of the Holy Spirit, and the influence of human sympathy. Mr. Rodway is a man of business in Stroud. He has always paid his own travelling expenses, and for fifteen years has maintained a Convalescent Home for the most necessitous cases, in which during last year there were 160 inmates. He is this week holding meetings at Westbourne Baptist Chapel, Bournemouth. On Sunday night, from a congregation of under 200 there were more than twenty really anxious inquirers, most of whom were made free by the truth lovingly pressed upon them in prayerful dependence upon the Holy Spirit. They included grey-haired and middle-aged men and women, two married couples, boys and girls in their teens, and young children.

KILSYTH, N.B.

This place, where William Burns spent his early days, and where the great awakening took place through his preaching in 1839, is now being visited with a time of wonderful blessing. No one who sees the sights to be witnessed here every night, and who knows anything of the Lord's working, can doubt for a moment the reality and depth and extent of this work of grace.

About four weeks ago Mr. W. D. Dunn, evangelist, came to Kilsyth at the invitation of a number of gentlemen belonging to the different churches. The meetings have been held in the Free, Independent, Methodist and U.P. Churches. The numbers attending have been large, and have gone on increasing. Last night the U.P. Church was crowded, and at the request of Mr Dunn many stood up to testify that they had received blessing. Many deeply anxious ones have remained night after night to be spoken with, and have gone away trusting in Jesus. The change wrought in their hearts and homes is manifest.

The work is still going on, and is likely to continue. Many are coming in from the neighbourhood around and are being blessed. Will those who read this kindly remember Kilsyth in prayer. G. W.

Kilsyth, Feb. 23.

WESTBOURNE HALL, BAYSWATER.

A Mission, which commenced on February 10, was conducted here by Mr. W. Spencer Walton, with the co-operation of Rev. J. A. Jacob, minister of St. Thomas's, Westbourne-grove. The weather for the three first days was most unfavourable, but did not eventually hinder a most remarkable awakening of spiritual life, and a deepening of the work of grace in those already saved.

The afternoon consecration meetings were attended with much blessing, but it was at the evening meetings, when the people of the neighbourhood crowded into the Hall, that the message of salvation made a very profound impression. Large numbers came forward to seek deliverance from sin, and are now blessing God for pardon and peace.

The Mission was followed up by two meetings, at which Mr. Walton addressed the young persons engaged in the large shops in the neighbourhood, when the Hall was crowded, and many gave themselves to the Lord. It is hoped and believed that the Mission will prove to have been an important epoch in the spiritual history of this neighbourhood.

Mr. J. Gale, of Newport, is holding special meetings in the Gospel Hall at Gloucester for a fortnight.

Rev. E. P. Hammond has lately been conducting services at Fair Haven, Connecticut, with much success. Christians of all denominations and several of the students of the Theological Seminary have heartily joined in the work.

Mr. Charles Inglis has been holding Gospel meetings during the last two months in Grimsby, Cardiff, and Kent. Large numbers have come out to hear the words of life, and many have professed conversion. He is now holding nightly meetings in Manchester, and begins special work in Dublin next month.

Ned Wright recently spoke to a congregation of 200 men in the New Cut. Among a lot of "rogues and vagabonds" he recognised several whom he had known twenty years ago as young men who had made up their minds to get their living by thieving. Now, though none of them were over forty, they were prematurely decrepit and old, proving that "the way of transgressors is hard."

Mr. Wm. Nobbs, of Gloucester, commenced a series of meetings at the Central Hall, Swindon, on Saturday, 10th inst., which have been continued every night since. On the Sunday evenings hundreds have gone away unable to get in, and the week-night meetings have been well attended. The Lord has given much refreshing to believers by the Word; several have professed faith in Christ, and others are anxious.

REV. W. HASLAM'S ENGAGEMENTS are as follows:—March 3, Old Radford, Nottingham; March 17, Ratcliffe-on-Trent.

REV. W. H. AITKEN'S ENGAGEMENTS.—March 4 to 19, Weymouth; March 31 to April 16, Wareham; April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

MR. HENRY THORNE'S ENGAGEMENTS.—March 6, Leeds; March 7, Carlisle; March 10 to 19, Londonderry; March 14 to April 2, Belfast.

MR. T. E. MURPHY'S ENGAGEMENTS.—March 7 to 10, Kendal; March 12 to 22, Lancaster; March 23 to 31, Whitworth; April 1 to 6, Manchester; April 8 to 22, Belfast.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY'S ENGAGEMENTS ARE: Feb. 21 to March 2, Hawick, N.B.; March 11 to 23, Swansea; April 1 to 15, Manchester. Applications for Mr. Francis Murphy and Mr. Thomas E. Murphy's services should be made to "The Secretary," 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.—Mr. E. Arrowsmith at Public Hall, South Norwood, Feb. 28; Mr. Banaster at Salisbury, March 4 to 11; at Dorking, from March 12.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES IN THEATRES, &c.

A MEETING of friends interested in the work of conducting evangelistic services in theatres, halls, and mission rooms, was held last Saturday at New College, Finchley-road. Bishop Perry occupied the chair. Rev. T. C. Udall said it could be shown that in some parts of London no less a proportion than ninety-eight per cent. of the working-classes absented themselves from places of worship. The good that had been done by their movement justified its formation twenty-five years ago; services are now conducted on Sundays in four theatres, several large halls, and 172 mission rooms.

The Earl of Shaftesbury said they had reason to rejoice at the marvellous success of these services. Vast numbers of people who would not go to any recognised place of worship would go to these theatres and mission halls. Christian sympathy is the only means of reaching the people and meeting their condition. If the Gospel is preached in an earnest and peaceful way it will be listened to by thousands without opposition.

Revs. Burman Cassin, Dr. Monro Gibson, and other gentlemen spoke warmly in favour of the movement.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending March 10: March 4, Mark ix. 33-50; March 5, Mark x. 13-22; March 6, Mark x. 23-34; March 7, Mark x. 35-45; March 8, Mark x. 46-52; March 9, Mark xi. 1-17; March 10, Mark xi. 18-33.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.—In connection with this Mission, the Bethel smack Ensign has done good service amongst the North Sea fishermen employed by Messrs. Hewett & Co. The medicine chest placed on board has been thoroughly appreciated by the men, and through its means many of the most careless have been led to listen to the Gospel message. It is, therefore, cheering to know that a second vessel is about to be purchased, and placed at the disposal of the Thames Church Mission for evangelistic service on the North Sea. Over 11,000 men and boys are employed in connection with the numerous fishing fleets in these waters; hence there is abundant scope, not only for two, but for many such Mission vessels, should they be provided. The Secretary, Mr. E. J. Mather, 31, New Bridge-street, E.C., will gladly afford any information desired.

A QUIET DAY IN PARIS.—Dear Sir,—We are all greatly indebted to the Rev. F. C. Moran, Chaplain of the Rue d'Aguesseau Church, for "a feast of fat things." Rev. Dr. Pigou, Vicar of Halifax, happens to be staying for a few weeks in Paris. Clergymen and Ministers of various denominations, and Christian workers without distinction of sect or nationality, were invited by Mr. Moran to a "Quiet Day" at the American Episcopal Church in the Rue Bayard, on Tuesday last. The phrase "Quiet Day" had an indescribable charm for us, for workers in Paris have no "quiet days." All is push and hurry. We were eager, therefore, to accept the invitation. And a blessed "Quiet Day" it was to about twenty-five of us who assembled in the church for an address from Dr. Pigou. The address was in Dr. Pigou's best style, and was full of home-strokes and useful advice to ministers. The Lord was with us indeed in "the breaking of bread." At the afternoon meeting, also held in the American Episcopal Church, Dr. Pigou delivered an excellent address on "Missions." All went away feeling that it had been "good to be there."—Yours truly, W. GIBSON.

For the Young.

STRAYED.

TWO little children, of about four and six years of age, were one day looking eagerly out of the window of a very dingy room in a poor, dirty street in London. They heard some music, and someone told them a show was coming by with an elephant and some other animals they had not often, if ever, seen. As they passed, the children begged their mother to let them go to the top of the street so they might see the wonderful elephant once more. They promised they would not go a step beyond the corner, so telling them not to be long, Mrs. M—— let them go, and off they ran, well pleased to be out.

But the show was so grand, and the music so pretty, that the little ones quite forgot their promise, and followed the elephant and the crowd, up one street and down another, round corners and over crossings, until they quite lost their way. At last, when they turned to go home, they had not the least idea which road to take. They were lost!

Of course, they began to cry, poor little things, and wandered about, very much frightened, hand in hand, until a policeman spoke to them. Finding they were lost, he took them to the station until someone should call for them. All this time their father had been trying to find them, and their mother, anxious and unhappy, was crying at home. It had begun to rain, and they had no hats or jackets on. How cold and wet they must be!

At last they were found. How glad the father was, when, after long, weary hours of searching he found them, safe, though tired and hungry, in the police-station at King's Cross, where they had been taken, and how glad they were to see him again. Poor little mites! I don't think they would want to stray away from home any more, after that miserable afternoon, to follow a show or any thing else: they would only be too glad to be safe under shelter again.

I could not help thinking, when I heard about these children, how much we are like them. Do we not all, by nature, forsake God to run after the pleasures and attractions of the world? Oh, how very far from Him do they not lead us? They may seem pleasant and bright enough for a time, but when trouble comes, sickness or sorrow, and we would turn to Christ for help, then we find out that we have forsaken Him and wandered such a long way from home that it seems as if we never should get back. And we never should if our Father were not seeking us; but He calls us to Him, and invites us to return in many different ways; and when we do, what rejoicing! what free forgiveness, and how gladly does He receive us back!

If we are still straying from Him, still running after the various shows the world offers us, let us now return to Him, and keep Him waiting no longer. Then, as it was with the lost sheep in the parable, He will bear his wandering child upon his shoulder, and carry him home.

Emily M. Fox.

RAILWAY TEMPERANCE UNION.—By the invitation of Mr. S. Morley, M.P., nearly 400 men employed at the railways in the vicinity of Spitalfields met last week at tea in St. Stephen's schoolroom, Spitalfields. Mr. R. Haskett explained the object of the meeting, which was to form a branch of the Railway Temperance Union for that district. A large number of blue ribbons were pinned on the breasts of the men by Mr. Morley.

PASSOVER WINES.

THIS subject was dealt with in a lecture by Dr. Norman Kerr, delivered in London last week. A considerable portion of the lecture was in the shape of a spirited and successful reply to the criticisms of a Church Quarterly reviewer. This critic, as we recently stated, had found fault with many of Dr. Kerr's statements made in his lecture on "Wines Scriptural and Ecclesiastic" given last year at the Chapter House, St. Paul's, and since published in book form (Temperance Publication Depôt, 337, Strand). That lecture was practically an appeal to the Episcopalian bishops and clergy to adopt unfermented wine for use at the Communion, for the sake of those to whom the use of intoxicating wine might prove a source of temptation and danger. This appeal, as Dr. Kerr informs us, was well responded to, but its success seems to have roused the antagonism of certain clerics who, for some reason or reasons best known to themselves, do not approve of using the harmless liquid at the memorial feast. These objections culminated in the anonymous article in the pages of the Church Quarterly Review.

Dr. Kerr's reply, as we have remarked, appears to be in all respects successful and conclusive. The critic, without seeking to rebut his arguments by counter evidence, had made a number of minor charges, mainly of inaccurate quotation. We have not space to enumerate all the points touched on, but would repeat that the Doctor has more than exonerated himself, as far as we can judge. Indeed, he has turned the tables on his accuser, whom he shows by implication to be not only a shallow but an incompetent critic on this question.

One point we may refer to. The reviewer, revealing his ecclesiastical stand-point, had asserted that "sacramental grace" would protect a man from the physical effects of alcoholic drink. This assertion Dr. Kerr strenuously denies. He pertinently says: "As grace did not restore a head which had been cut off by the sword, or cut short the operation of the enteric poison in typhoid fever, so it will not protect a man from being injured in brain and mind by alcohol. Physical evils require physical remedies, and the physical evil wrought by alcohol can be remedied by a physical remedy alone. The heredity of alcohol is an unalterable law of nature, and is to be seen by the skilled observer operating on a large scale."

We are less concerned, however, with the thoroughness of Dr. Kerr's self-vindication, than with the interesting and important facts he adduced in his lecture last week with respect to Passover wines. The reluctance shown by many Christian congregations in adopting the use of unfermented and non-alcoholic wine at the Lord's Supper is no doubt due to the idea, honestly cherished, that such wine was not lawful or in common use at the Passover feast. Dr. Kerr states, as the result of an elaborate investigation into this subject, that he finds much conflict of opinion among the most ancient literary authorities. No dogmatic conclusion on the matter, as it refers to our Lord's time, can, he thinks, be reached. Failing this he has sought to ascertain the facts as to Jewish custom and law at the present day. He has found that some Jews use unfermented wine only, others use fermented though not intoxicating wine, others again use intoxicating wine. This applies equally to members of the Orthodox and the Reform Sects. He attended Jewish families where the wine was made in the house from raisins, and was unfermented. This is a common practice among the poorer brethren, but is by no means confined to these. He knows well-to-do Jews who always follow this plan. It is a pretty general custom to dispense with the home preparation, and purchase the Passover wine, duly stamped by an official appointed for the purpose, from persons authorised to sell it for use at the Passover. Fermented and unfermented wine are both so authorised. These facts were authenticated by the testimony of Dr. Adler, the Chief Rabbi, and Professor Marks, of the London University.

It may appear to some that this leaves the question where it was, and that nothing has been gained for the contention of the abstainer. But Dr. Kerr shows that these facts indicate a decided gain. While it may not be proved that fermented wine was unlawful, on the other hand it cannot be proved that the unfermented juice of the grape was unlawful or in disuse. We do not personally attach much intrinsic importance to the discussion, but we imagine this is all that is needed to justify any Christian company of believers in discarding the alcoholic beverage as a Communion element. There can henceforth be no doubt that such a course is lawful; we have never seriously heard it argued that it is anything but expedient; if it is both lawful and expedient, it seems to us that controversy must be at an end, except in the case of those who have such peculiar views of "sacramental grace" as the writer in the Church Quarterly Review.

The lecturer hoped that he had successfully met all the objections that a close acquaintance with this special object taught him might be brought against unfermented wine as an element of communion. Why should anyone object to the unadulterated juice of the grape at the sacrament? The "blood of the grape" was a fit—altered by vinous fermentation to a liquid containing a narcotic poison in intoxicating or poisoning proportions it could not be so fit—symbol of the precious blood of Jesus, the Saviour of men. The unchallenged evidence proved that unfermented and fermented grape and palm juice had always been used and called wine; that the chief use of grapes in the East was not to make fermented wine; that grapes could be kept fresh all the year round so that new unfermented wine could always be had; that it was a risk for reformed drunkards to taste intoxicating wines in any circumstances; and that at almost every period of ecclesiastical history unintoxicating wine prepared from fresh grapes or raisins had been recognised as a lawful sacramental element. He once more appealed on behalf of the rescued inebriate, and the unfallen inheritor of the drink taint. Let those who are responsible for the ritual and ceremonial of the churches see to it that the most holy rite of their religion is made safe and comforting to the souls of the very weakest of those for whom, as for all, the Lord of Glory died.

ITALIAN WORKMEN IN NICE.

A KIND correspondent has acquainted the readers of The Christian with a new field of Mission work in the sunny town of Nice. Perhaps some further details will interest them. A few months ago very little was done for the thousands of Italian workmen; they were left to themselves in sceptical and ignorant indifference. We now see a great number of them gathered together in a large meeting-room, three times a week, to hear the Gospel preached in their native tongue. The interest of the numerous hearers increases, showing that they are influenced not merely by curiosity, but by the enlightening truth.

A night school is held in the same room three times a week, when reading, writing, arithmetic, and French are taught. Members of the Y.M.C.A. assist as teachers to about sixty-six pupils. The Word of God is much valued by them. For instance, a young man, who walks an hour and a half to attend the meetings, came one evening with five francs, asking for a Bible. It was a large sum for a poor mason to spare.

We shall be very glad if any who read this short account are led to share in the work, and enable us to sow the seed still more liberally, while we have such a large field open to us.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE MEETINGS were held in Paddock Wood, Kent, under the presidency of the vicar, Rev. E. Pope, on Monday, February 19th, and the three following nights. Upwards of 150, or one-tenth of the population, put on the blue ribbon.

MR. G. C. NEEDHAM IN DUBLIN.

IN the beginning of January, when Messrs. Moody and Sankey were well under way, Mr. Needham arrived in Dublin. Merrion Hall gave him a hearty welcome, after sixteen years' absence in America, he having paid but one visit during the interval, seven years ago. It is now nearly twenty years since, in company with Mr. Grattan Guinness, Mr. Needham's voice was first heard within the walls of the building where for now nearly two months he has been addressing large and deeply interested audiences.

A GOODLY SIGHT.

During the past few months it has been a refreshing and encouraging sight to witness the crowds pouring into the large hall, and with breathless interest listening to "the old, old story." Situated in rather an aristocratic part of the city, it is not an agency so much for the lapsed masses as for the upper and frequently more neglected circles. It is no uncommon occurrence for members of the nobility and persons of high social position to attend the preaching of the Word in Merrion Hall. Yet also persons of all grades and religions are found there seeking Jesus. There have been special services for soldiers and policemen, who came out in great numbers, in addition to services for parents, children, young men, converts, and Christian workers.

THE FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE

has also been opened to Mr. Needham, and there afternoon Bible readings and early Sunday morning services for workers have been held. We have noticed present on these occasions clergymen and pastors, evangelists and Mission workers, merchants and their families, provided with Bible and note-book, earnestly pursuing the study of that wondrous volume. And even now we hear the sound of abundance of rain as the young men go out among the people in halls and school houses, to lift up Jesus, the Crucified.

The writer hopes that this notice will call out prayer from many readers of THE CHRISTIAN for Dublin, and for all Ireland. May the day of Mercy's visitation soon dawn upon us.

DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to draw the attention of your readers to the fearful distress prevailing in County Donegal, Ireland? Hundreds of poor children are existing on sea weed, sprinkled over with meal; many are literally starving, and cannot leave their mud huts, as they have not a rag to cover them.

Efforts are being made to relieve somewhat this distress. Bags of old clothing are being made up to send out to these sufferers. The veriest rags will be acceptable, old rugs and blankets. Parcels may be sent to "Ayrfield," Bournemouth. Those who cannot help with clothing would perhaps give a trifle towards the fund for providing the children with one meal of bread and milk per day.

THE CHANNEL FLEET.—During March, April and May, the Channel Fleet will be cruising off the coasts of Spain and Africa. As none of the ships of the fleet carry a Scripture reader, and we cannot all get ashore at different ports, I plead for some tracts on behalf of my shipmates. They are always received very heartily by my shipmates along the mess deck. It is no uncommon thing when issuing tracts, &c., to hear such remarks as "God bless you," "Good luck to you, chummy," "Why, you're the only person that ever brings us anything good," &c. Before leaving England I received a supply of tracts from a friend in Plymouth; these, together with what I bought myself, are nearly all issued. Would some of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN kindly give a helping hand to the Lord's work that is being carried on on board this vessel.—Yours obediently,

JOHN NEWNHAM.

MESSRS. MOODY & SANKEY'S LONDON MEETINGS.

DEAR MR. MOODY,—When our Committee had the pleasure of meeting you in December, and urging you to promise definitely that you would come, with Mr. Sankey, and spend some months in the Metropolis, you pointed out certain difficulties in the way of a successful visit here; the first arising from the acknowledged necessity of avoiding the use of denominational buildings, and from the almost entire absence of Halls large enough to hold the meetings; and the second, the difficulty of securing fresh audiences, there being such a disposition on the part of many to follow the meetings from one district to another. The Committee have since then very carefully considered the whole subject, and while finding, as they expected, few halls that would be available, they have ascertained that they can, at a moderate cost, secure the construction of iron buildings suited to our requirements, which can be easily moved from place to place, and they have already heard of several vacant sites on which such buildings might be erected.

The plan of operations the committee propose to adopt will be as follows: they will, first and foremost, fix upon a district easily reached from the centre of the city; they will then call a meeting in that district of all the clergy and ministers in sympathy with the work, and through them seek to organise some effective means of reaching the residents within a certain distance of the temporary building, by urging them to come, not only to your meetings, but also to other meetings to be conducted by workers in full sympathy with your effort, which we hope may be arranged for in the churches and chapels, while your meetings are going on, or, at all events, after the temporary building has been closed.

The committee think that with two moveable halls, and the few permanent ones that can be hired, it will not be desirable to hold more than two or three weeks' meetings in any one district. While the services are in progress in Hall No. 1, Hall No. 2 would be erected somewhere in the suburbs, so as to be ready when the time came to leave No. 1, and so on, until practically the whole of London may be overtaken.

The Committee have watched with the deepest interest the work for God you have been permitted to accomplish in the many towns in the provinces you have visited with Mr. Sankey, and they are full of expectation that God, the Holy Ghost, may continue to bless in the future yet more abundantly than in the past; and, inasmuch as we are enjoined to "Wait upon the Lord" for his blessing, the Committee will seek to foster the spirit of prayer by instituting meetings, and otherwise keeping before the minds of the people, that it is God alone who can revive and quicken his Church, and gather into his kingdom such as shall be saved.—We are, yours very sincerely,

H. M. MATHESON, Chairman.
ROBERT PATON, Hon. Sec.

186, Aldersgate-street, London, Feb. 2.

To the Members of the London Committee.

MY DEAR FRIENDS,—I have to thank you on behalf of myself and Mr. Sankey for your letter of the 22nd ult., embodying your views as to the manner in which you purpose dealing with the difficulties in the way of proposed meetings in London during the coming winter and spring. I need hardly again remind you that if it were possible, I should prefer to work inside of the Church in London, as I did in Scotland, rather than outside; but, inasmuch as the buildings of the Church of England are still closed to such efforts as ours, I see no other way of meeting the difficulty than the one you have suggested, viz.: the erection of easily-moved halls of a more temporary character than were erected for last visit, and I am glad you do not propose to make room for more than 5000 in each.

The other difficulty, that of securing fresh audiences, can, I believe, be overcome in the way you propose, by the hearty co-operation of local committees of the clergy, ministers and others in the different Churches, who would make known through their congregations that the meetings were intended to reach the people resident in the district; tickets might also be distributed to insure their admission, and in other ways that will suggest themselves, local interest excited.

During the time Mr. Sankey and I can give to London (we do not see our way to a prolonged visit), we cannot hope to have more than a fraction of the population within our halls, so we look to you to carry out arrangements for special services in the Churches and Chapels in sympathy with the movement, with a view of reaching many more.

Under God, the success of the work will depend upon the united efforts of all who desire to extend the Kingdom of Christ. Our hearts have been greatly cheered and encouraged in the towns we have visited, by being permitted to witness what the Lord can do in a very few days when Christians are united; hence our desire to urge you to promote the meetings for prayer you suggest, that the Holy Spirit may work yet more mightily and many be prepared for blessing.

While remembering with gratitude the past, may we be privileged to see much more abundant fruit in the future. May God work a work in our days that shall bring great glory to his holy name, and fill our hearts with rejoicing.

Yours very faithfully,

Birmingham, Feb. 7. D. L. MOODY.

OUR YOUNG WOMEN.

DEEPLY interesting services were held at the various branches of the Y.W.C.A. in London during the recent Week of Prayer for young women. Accounts received from the various institutes show that it has been a time of real blessing to the members as well as a means of bringing strangers under the influence of the Association. Suitable addresses were given by various ladies, both to the workers and to those who were still undecided for Christ.

Special meetings were held at the Christian Institute and other places in Glasgow. The addresses given at the Institute by Revs. Dr. A. A. Bonar, Jas. Wells, David Russell, and Dr. Elder Cumming were most practical and suggestive. The Glasgow Y.W.C.A. has at present some 600 members, and it is hoped this special effort will extend its usefulness. Meetings were held at Brighton and Barrow-in-Furness, the addresses being given by Miss E. Lockhart and Mrs. Legg respectively.

Perhaps the most noteworthy event of the past week in connection with Christian work among our young women, was the opening, by the Earl of Aberdeen, of a new lecture hall attached to the Liverpool Young Women's Christian Institute. This hall, which is part of a larger scheme, combining an Institute and Boarding House, has been erected at a cost of £500, subscribed or collected by the young women themselves. The entire building, which will provide accommodation for fifty or sixty boarders is estimated to cost £4500, of which £1000 remains to be subscribed.

TEMPERANCE IN PARLIAMENT.—The Temperance party are very active this Session. No fewer than eight Sunday Closing Bills have already been introduced. Mr. Carbutt has charge of a Bill for closing public-houses on days when elections take place. This Bill will be pressed forward simultaneously with the Corrupt Practices Bill. On Wednesday last Mr. Lewis Fry was to move the second reading of the Intoxicating Liquors (Off Licences) Bill. The object of this measure is to place the licences for the sale of wines and spirits under the same conditions as the sale of beer. Mr. Maurice Brooks, acting in the interest of the grocers, will move the rejection of the Bill. It is, however, expected to receive the support both of the licensed victuallers and of the Temperance party.

Notes and Comments.

WE regret to announce that Rev. William Cuff, the pastor of Shoreditch Tabernacle, is suffering from over-taxation of his strength, and has been obliged to give up work for awhile. It will be some weeks before he is able to resume his post.

Dr. Barnardo sends us a letter, for which we have not space this week, announcing the contemplated retirement, in June next, of Mr. Geo. Soltau from the superintendence of the Ilford Homes, in consequence of the ill-health of Mrs. Soltau.

On a preceding page will be found the correspondence between the London Evangelistic Committee and Mr. Moody, with respect to the meetings in London next winter and spring. At a meeting of the Committee held last week it was decided that the neighbourhood of Highbury would be a suitable one in which to commence the campaign. It was agreed to make the necessary arrangements as to the erection of a moveable structure. We trust the earnest Christians of all denominations in the various districts of the Metropolis will rally together, so as to secure that unity of spirit and purpose which God delights to honour.

In the midst of all that is horrible and distressing in the recent revelations of the Phœnix Park and other murders, there comes, like a ray of light, a letter from Lady Frederick Cavendish, which will shine for ever on the page of English history. The Rev. S. Lloyd had written to ask her ladyship's permission to dedicate to her a sermon he is about to publish on the late Chief Secretary for Ireland. Her ladyship replies:—

> The Dublin disclosures do indeed teach the awful lesson contained in the last verse of the third chapter of Samuel ["The Lord shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness"]. You will, I am sure, forgive me, if I beg you, before sending the MS. to the printers, to look through it first, with the special view of seeing if there is any word that could be turned into a desire for vengeance. You will readily understand how I must shrink from any such feeling. I would rather, as far as I reverently may, adopt the Lord's prayer on the cross ("Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"). The law, I know, must take its course, for the sake of the unhappy country itself. I pray that neither the unspeakable greatness of my sorrow nor the terrible wickedness of those men may ever blind either myself or any of the English people to the duty of patience, justice, and sympathy, in our thoughts, words, and deeds with regard to Ireland and its people at large. Believe me, dear sir, yours truly, —
> Lucy Frederick Cavendish.

Since its appearance Mr. Lloyd has written that the letter was not intended by Lady Frederick Cavendish for publication. We can, however, only be thankful for the mistake.

The spirit of patient suffering, of loving forgiveness, which breathes through these lines, is indeed the spirit of Christ. We believe that no people would be more amenable to that spirit than those of Ireland; and if we all as Christians habitually cultivated such a condition of heart and such a tone of speech, not only as regards Ireland but in all our public and private affairs, it would surely commend the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and win those whom harsh words too often repel.

The world has attached the term "cant" to religion: but there is at least as much cant apart from religion as connected with it. How often with insincere cant is the truism repeated that "it is not possible to make men virtuous by Act of Parliament." No: but it is quite possible to make them the reverse of virtuous by Act of Parliament; and it is equally possible to abstain from vitiating them by Act of Parliament.

"The influence of a nation's laws on its moral character" is a subject ably treated by Mr. Francis Peek in the book, "Social Wreckage," which we mentioned in our last. Its first illustration is the Poor Law, and incontestable evidence is adduced to prove that the law itself tends to create recklessness and improvidence, so that on January 1, 1881, the yearly report of the Local Government Board showed 809,341 paupers in England, out of a population of 25,000,000—every thirty-first person a pauper!

"The law of the land speedily becomes the law of the conscience, and what the law forbids is crime; what the law allows is not dishonourable." There is sufficient of painful proof that this applies generally, and not only to "the uneducated classes."

We cease to wonder that the decent poor suffer any hardship rather than go into the workhouse, when we are told that while it is "in its conception half penal, half charitable, it is in its result wholly demoralising. Life within its walls is detrimental to all; but no place except the prison can be worse for the infant and the half-grown child." A flood of sorrowful reflection flows in upon us as we read of a lady, who, having adopted a workhouse child of eighteen months old, said that what struck her as the most melancholy feature in connection with the poor little orphan was that it actually did not know how to kiss!

Mr. Peek's chapter on "The Orphan's Wrong" is touching in the extreme. Take the following illustration:—

> In many cases attempts are made to ameliorate the lot of these children by exceptional kindness on the part of the matrons, and by the visits of tender-hearted ladies, who seek them out in their gloomy abodes. But so utterly bad and unsuitable is the workhouse system, that it is open to question whether even this amelioration is not in its results a cruelty, as may be illustrated by the following narrative of "a very good little orphan girl."
> She was about thirteen years of age, and had been in the workhouse some few years, when she was sent out for a month upon trial as servant in a respectable house in a small town. At the end of three weeks she ran away from her place and returned to the workhouse.
> The matron, who was deservedly beloved for her kindness of heart, went to see her, and said kindly that she had not expected such conduct from her, as she had always been such a good, obedient child. "I could not stay, ma'am; oh, I could not stay! They scorned me so." "Who scorned you so?" said the matron. "Oh, the children of the town," was the answer of the poor child. From that time she began to droop, and a few weeks afterwards she died, "of a broken heart," as the matron said, "because they scorned her so."
> In ten thousand bright English homes there were mothers rejoicing over their happy children, rejoicing, it may be, with trembling, if the thought passed through their minds how sad it would be for these if death should deprive them in infancy of a mother's care and affection. From ten thousand devout church-goers the prayer was each Sunday ascending to God that He would have mercy on all fatherless children; yet a destitute, desolate orphan, amidst all this, was breaking her young heart, "scorned to death."

Is there not here a wide field for Christian love and influence and usefulness? Ought not Christian opinion, Christian experience, Christian activity, to take knowledge of a system which if not rotten at the core bears very bitter fruit? Perhaps if Christians brought genuine practical Christianity to bear upon these legislative and social wrongs, and spent less time and strength upon theological disquisition and scientific theorising, the world would again be turned upside down as in the days of old. And is there not here a strong incentive to support the various Orphan Homes which are often pleaded for in our columns?

A lady writes us concerning our old friend W. J. Lewis, of the Spitalfields Gospel Hall, that "a lady who has given him his Bible-woman's salary for many years died in January, and that he has lost nearly half of his old supporters by death within the last few years. But the Lord liveth." It is the experience of many of the Lord's servants, both as regards the loss of earthly friends and the faithfulness of God.

We deeply regret to mark the departure from our midst of another veteran in the service of Christ, through the death of Mr. James Harvey, of Gresham-street and of Hampstead. Through a long course of faithful devotion to the claims of God and truth, he displayed traits of character worthy of imitation by all Christian men. His fidelity to conscientious conviction, combined with large-hearted catholicity of spirit, marked him out as one in whom true charity abounded. It has been well said of him, that "though a conscientious Baptist, he was ever first an evangelical Christian."

His zeal and liberality in the cause of Home and Foreign Missions, his self-denying efforts on behalf of the poor, and in connection with the endeavour to reach the masses of his fellow-citizens who are living in spiritual and temporal destitution; his whole-hearted energy, combined with sound judgment and practical kindness of heart, made him a man who will be long missed, and long remembered with affectionate regard and loving regret by those who knew him best. The loss of such men from the ranks of the Church militant may well elicit the prayer of the Psalmist, "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth."

The American Churches have sustained a similar loss in the sudden decease of the well-known Hon. W. E. Dodge, of New York, which took place on February 9.

We are among those who entertain a very high respect and regard for Mr. Gladstone. Under his administration, however, two very mischievous pieces of legislation have been enacted—the Grocers' Licence and the so-called Contagious Diseases Acts, both of which we hope soon to see repealed. We are threatened with a third more disastrous than either—an Affirmation Bill, for the purpose of admitting into Parliament men who deny God by whom kings reign and princes decree justice. We earnestly hope that the "grand old man," of whom England is and may well be proud, will not sully his closing years by undermining the foundations of her greatness. If the people are the source of power, the electors of Northampton may be represented by whom they please. But if God be the source of power, they have no right to defy Him and to insult the nation by sending to Parliament one who denies the being of God. We hope that our readers will do whatever may lie in their power to save our country from this shame. Israel's sun was setting when the prophet said: "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know Me, My people doth not consider Me."

In one of his latest Boston Monday lectures, Rev. Joseph Cook lifted a warning note, as he put it, against trying to fly the temperance cause with one wing. His countrymen, he asserted, were fanning the air with the legal wing of the temperance reform, but they seemed to have forgotten the moral wing to a large degree. "Let us make every feather of the moral wing and of the legal wing of the temperance reform broad and strong. Let the two smite the air side by side, and so support each other, and carry this majestic cause proudly through the vexed atmosphere of history."

British temperance reformers are just at present "fanning the air" with both wings pretty vigorously. The moral wing received a considerable impetus, let us hope, by the remarkable meeting at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, on the evening of Tuesday week, under the presidency of the veteran Samuel Bowly. A large company listened to excellent addresses by the Dean of Canterbury, Revs. Charles Garrett, Dr. Macfadyen, and J. P. Chown, as representing four of the leading sections of the Christian Church. The National Temperance League, which convened the meeting, are to be congratulated on the idea so happily carried out.

The following day the legal wing was set in motion by two important gatherings, in support of Sunday closing, held at Exeter Hall. Such representative men as the Earl of Shaftesbury, Sir W. McArthur, Revs. Dr. Donald Fraser, H. W. Webb Peploe, Canons Fleming, Barker, and Stowell, Newman Hall, Hon. and Rev. E. Carr Glyn, Mr. Arthur Pease, M.P., and others, united in deploring the evils of the traffic, and in demanding that these evils shall be stopped at their source for one day in seven at least. Let us keep in mind the injunction of Mr. Cook, and we may hope ere long to see not only Sunday closing throughout the British Isles, but the complete control of the traffic placed where it ought to be, in the hands of the people.

At the moment when evangelical Christendom is looking for great things in Central Africa, through the navigation of the Congo, it is not pleasant to hear of fresh and unlooked for political complications. A correspondent of The Times, who is apparently well informed, referring to the Stanley-De Brazza difficulty, says:—

While the latter has been occupied at Paris, Henry Stanley has returned to the Congo, and we shall soon see the very pretty complication caused by the collision of the American citizen in the employ of the King of the Belgians, and in alliance with English missionaries, holding the fort against the Franco-Italian intruder.

But worse than that remains to be told. It appears that the mouths of the Congo river were discovered in 1841 by the Portuguese, who "have ever claimed sovereignty as far as five degrees twelve minutes south latitude, which includes the estuary of the grand river." Hitherto the English Government have disputed this claim, but, according to The Times correspondent, it is now rumoured that the claim is admitted. He says:—

It is urged that every precaution has been taken to secure by treaty religious toleration and commercial freedom, but anyone who has studied the debased system of government both at Mozambique, on the east coast, where the great river Zambesi is lost to commerce from the neglect of its nominal rulers, and at Loanda, on the west coast, must feel that a great mistake has been made, the consequences of which will be severely felt in the future. The Portuguese officials in their African colonies are notoriously ill-paid, inefficient, and, it is feared, corrupt. Those who ought to know assure us that the subject was well considered from every point of view by the Foreign Office, and the parties interested consulted, and yet it is rumoured that so secret and rapid were the transactions which eventuated in a treaty that the attempt to get a clause securing liberty of worship failed. We all know within what narrow limits toleration of religion exists in the States of Southern Europe; how liberty of worship is restricted, how permissions have to be taken out to do what comes as a natural right in England or the United States. As to the commercial provisions nothing is known.

We can but hope that matters are not so black as they are painted. The British Government will not be readily forgiven if they have endorsed arrangements that will impede the progress of those civilising and Christianising agencies that are beginning to dispel the darkness of Central Africa.

We learn with much regret that Mrs. Evered Poole is suffering from extreme physical prostration, brought on by her devotion to the work of Gospel Temperance. We need scarcely bespeak for her the prayerful remembrances of our readers, that she may be restored to her wonted vigour and usefulness.

We see with the deepest regret that the Rev. W. H. M. H. Aitken has publicly committed himself, to some extent at least, to the questioning of eternal punishment. We know of more than one evangelist whose usefulness has been hindered, if not destroyed, by the views connected with the theory which has latterly assumed the name of "Conditional Immortality," but we do not know any teacher of these views who appears to be greatly used of God as a winner of souls. We fervently hope that one who has been so successful a preacher of Christ's Gospel may reconsider his position, lest he be laid aside from the work to which he was evidently called of God.

"A Mother" commends a friend of hers for not allowing her sons—boys in their teens—to read a newspaper containing "polluting details of a current Court of Session case." A correspondent, under the signature of "Educator," replies, as the result of an experience and observation of more than half a century as a minister and head of a family, that she ought to have had her sons so instructed and trained before entering "their teens" that such details would awaken in their minds only disgust and abhorrence. "Educator" adds:—

There could be nothing more foolish than the attempt to keep young people in ignorance on certain subjects. They will come by the knowledge one day, and in one way or another, but in no way and at no time so safely as by receiving it, while their own passions are yet dormant, in wise, guarded, delicate, and solemn words spoken by a parent's lips. If the parents shrink from this duty, they virtually bid their children go and seek the information from the foul and prurient conversation of the vulgar and the vicious.

Perhaps many parents shrink from this duty because they are not wise enough, delicate enough, pure enough, for its fulfilment. But if the needed grace be sought, the Heavenly Father will give it freely.

The Boston Journal says:—

While we talk of corruption in politics we are closing our eyes to the tendency of the American novel. It is not national, because it is not permeated with the spirit of hopefulness and courage that animates the American people. It is, instead, European, and French European, in its immorality. Are the magizines to be blamed for publishing, are our authors culpable for writing them? Is not, instead, the great American public at fault in demanding them till it exhausts itself in the perusal? Let the public demand a different class of literature, and the authors will create while the magazines will furnish the supply.

But the supply creates the demand, as well as the demand the supply. It is more profitable, in an earthly sense, to deal in intoxicants than in food, mental as well as physical. But it requires even a higher moral tone to wage a war against alcoholic novels than against alcoholic drink. The heroines of the whiskey war have a no less deadly enemy, working not less stealthily, not less perniciously, in the very bosom of their own families. And what is true of America is true of England also.

The first London Diocesan Conference was lately held at King's College, under the Presidency of the Bishop of London. Earl Cairns and many other leading men, both clergymen and laymen, took part in the discussions which arose. We are glad to see that, on the motion of Canon Farrar, committees were appointed to "Inquire into and report upon the best means of promoting, whether by new or existing agencies, the welfare of young men and of young women engaged in business, and in workshops in the metropolis." Too much cannot be done to counteract the fearful amount of temptation to which the young of both sexes are exposed in connection with city life. It would be well if all sections of the Christian Church were to give to this subject an increasing amount of attention. Our Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. are doing noble work in their various centres, but there is room for far wider operations, and much more strenuous effort than these can possibly put forth. A survey of statistics on the matter, such as our Church of England friends propose to collect, will, we are sure, reveal the fact that in this department of Christian work "there remaineth yet very much land to be possessed."

At the same Conference the President remarked that "what particularly struck him, and what he was greatly thankful for, was the increasing number of men occupied in the work of Christ and religion. The Lay Helpers' Association had enrolled 3500 members and 180 lay readers, and outside these associations there were many who were assisting. If the Diocesan Conferences could succeed in still further promoting this object they would be doing a great work." It is a hopeful sign that this spirit of willingness for general engagement in Christian work is on the increase. Too much has been left to ministers and office-bearers, while the rank and file of the army have stood still and looked on. The great need of to-day is personal effort and concern on the part of all who are known as servants of Christ.

When the Son of Man left his house to take his far journey, "He gave authority to his servants, AND TO EVERY MAN HIS WORK." Had this been remembered, and its binding force recognised and acted upon by all believers, how much more would have been accomplished in lessening the world's weary weight of sin and sorrow, and stemming the torrent of vice and iniquity which has been rushing on with ever-increasing rapidity and strength. Well may we say with Moses of old, "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them."

The following extracts from a speech delivered during the week at the same place suggests an inquiry of very solemn and urgent weight for all thoughtful Christian minds. The speaker had been calling attention to the enormous increase of our population, and the inadequacy of means as yet provided to overtake its moral and religious training. In summing up his remarks he said:

The powers of good and evil are ever pressing onwards, and if the powers of good relax their efforts, the powers of evil will occupy the whole field of action. The policy of jealous religionists has severed from public elementary education the religious instruction which is its very life; and we have in our midst thousands of immortal beings, their intelligence quickened and their minds prepared for the reception of knowledge—but what knowledge? The field is vast, and the seed plot is yearning for the sower. Which is to occupy? The Good Husbandman or the Enemy? Never was the enemy Unbelief more daring and more aggressive. Shall, then, the neglect or the rivalries of Christians leave the rising generation to have their morals perverted and their faith destroyed by the corrupting influences which surround them, and which, unless worthily pre-occupied, they hardly can escape? So audacious is unbelief in its defiance of the law, that it assails the Legislature itself with mendacious invective, and challenges submission to its menaces. Abroad and at home the lessons of history are being confirmed. Of all tyrannies, unbelief is the most intolerant and ruthless, and if we would avert its crushing despotism and preserve for our country its civilisation, its order, and its religious liberty, we must be ready and resolute in the discharge of our duties as members of a Christian State.

There is much in these words to awaken concern and stimulate action, at a time when on every hand the powers of darkness may be seen redoubling their vigour, and extending the sphere of their operations into the Christian camp as well as in the outlying world.

In reference to a proposal made at the Conference to start a Church Mission in 1884, the following extracts from a speech delivered by Capt. Seton Churchill will, we trust, commend themselves sufficiently to those in high places to lead to action on the lines proposed:—

It must be known to many members of this Conference that Messrs. Moody and Sankey intend making an evangelistic tour through London next year. Now, how shall we treat these gentlemen? I think it would not only be an act of courtesy, but a true act of Christian charity, for us to authorise our chief pastor, the Lord Bishop, to offer them in our name the right-hand of fellowship. Nor would I limit this act of courtesy to these gentlemen alone, but would suggest that his Lordship should also inform the heads of the leading Nonconformists in this country that we intend to hold a Mission, and invite their co-operation, so that it may not be a mere Church Mission, but a grand crusade of Christianity against the mass of heathenism and Godlessness of this country.

I trust, my Lord Bishop, that I am not untrue to the principles of our Church in making this suggestion, but it seems to me that if our Church is to be a truly National Church, it must be a large-hearted, catholic-spirited one. It is awful to think that we Christians are so divided among ourselves that we cannot make a great crusade against the fearful mass of evil which exists in Christian England. I repudiate the charge that I am a Dissenter because I am advocating a measure which is I know among Churchmen very unpopular. Our Prayer-book says, "The kingdom of Heaven is open to all believers"—whether they belong to our communion or not. Who are we, to limit the number of God's people? There is a deep fundamental principle I believe at stake in my proposition.

There can be no doubt of the soundness of these outspoken utterances, and we are convinced that the Church of England would lose nothing but gain much in spiritual power and influence if their principle was recognised and acted upon by all her members and friends. Those who deprecate and oppose such united action in the spirit and on the lines laid down by our Lord himself, are not by any means the wisest and truest of her adherents.

We note that Rev. W. Booth had an interview, on the 19th inst., with Lord Granville, in order to lay before him a memorial asking Government interference with regard to the recent expulsion of the Salvation Army from the Canton of Geneva. The memorial asks that the Government should in some way make such a declaration as should convince authorities abroad that the Salvation Army is a "movement which ought to command the respect and sympathy of every reasonable man." This is urged on the ground that those who are its directors have "no aim but to make those who are now disorderly and vicious into good subjects."

Everybody will admit that it is not a question as to the motive of the army which at present so seriously divides, not only public, but Christian feeling and opinion concerning the work of Mr. Booth and his friends, but rather of the methods adopted to further the ends aimed at. No reasonable person can doubt the desirableness of bringing the power of the Gospel to bear upon the profligate and debased of any and every land. Whether this will be done by means calculated to arouse passion, and to awaken war-like opposition by war-like demonstrations, is a point on which many will unhesitatingly pronounce against the course taken. At the same time we deplore the fact that there should be anything like the spirit of persecution displayed on ground so nobly connected with the cause of religious liberty as Geneva has been in the days that are past.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE IN THE WEST.

THE Mission at Oxford by Major Evered Poole commenced on Monday, the 19th. The Corn Exchange was full the first night; each day afterwards the numbers increased, until crowds could not gain admission, and overflow meetings were held in the Town Hall. Major Evered Poole conducted the Mission for the first four days, giving addresses every afternoon and evening. On Tuesday afternoon he addressed a large number of ladies and gentlemen in the Wycliffe Hall, on the work in the Army through the agency of the Scripture readers, and each afternoon after that in the Corn Exchange, specially to women, on Gospel Temperance.

On Thursday night it was to men only, and the Hall was packed, none being allowed in under 18 years of age. Hundreds of the undergraduates attended. It was a grand sight to see so many (upwards of 2000) men present, and still more so to see the deep interest evinced, and the evident impression made on the minds of those present.

Major Evered Poole regretted very much his being obliged to leave Oxford on the 23rd, but he was due to commence a Mission at Plymouth on the 24th. The three towns—Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport—have united in this Gospel Temperance Mission. The large Drill Hall will be used at Plymouth, accommodating 5000 persons, and the Hall at Devonport in addition, the second week of the Mission, holding 3000. The prayers of Christians are asked for a great blessing on this work. The Mission is to be continued until the 12th March.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

THE Geneva correspondent of the Daily News states that the Salvation Army have received permission to hold services in the Canton of Vaud.

A meeting of the Salvation Army, convened by "Colonel" Clibborn, was held on Sunday evening, 18th, near Ferney, and close to the Swiss frontier. Most of the Genevan Salvationists were present, and although the population of the neighbourhood is almost exclusively Catholic, the assembly was not interfered with, either by the people or by the authorities. It is intended to hold a series of similar meetings just outside the frontier, on both sides of the Lake.

The Geneva correspondent of the Times has written, under the title "A Lamb among Wolves," a report of an interview with Miss Maud Charlesworth, in which she describes her examination before the Chief of Police at the Hotel de Ville, and of her and Miss Booth's expulsion from the city and Canton of Geneva. The correspondent says "the narrative is both interesting in itself and valuable for the vivid light which it throws on the ways of Genevan justice—to foreigners."

In a later letter, dated February 20, he says: "It is of great importance to British subjects living in this country that their position in relation to the police should be exactly defined, for if the expulsion of Miss Booth and Miss Charlesworth can be justified, nobody is safe from one day to another." Simultaneously a letter appeared in the Times, which is thus summarised by the Pall Mall Gazette:—

The Rev. Samuel Charlesworth writes to the Times to explain that his daughter, Miss Charlesworth, who was recently expelled from Geneva with Miss Booth, was in that city without his permission and against his will. Mr. Charlesworth states that about two years ago his daughter, then in her sixteenth year, was taken to some of the Salvation Army meetings, and, being of "a very impressible and somewhat excitable nature," was fascinated by the novelty and the charm of the meetings and the work. Her father's remonstrances with Mr. Booth's family met with no responsive sympathy, and fearing that to remove his child from the work of the Army might injure both her happiness and her health, he took her to Paris, to help Miss Booth in her work among the poor in that city, "expressly stipulating that she was only to be regarded as a young friend and visitor, and that she should not become an officer of the Army or wear their uniform." Shortly afterwards Miss Booth went to Geneva, and took Miss Charlesworth with her, in direct contravention of her father's express stipulations. "I fear," Mr. Charlesworth says, "that the Army influence has a direct tendency to wean the converts from home associations and interests, under the idea that its work is paramount in importance to all other pursuits and obligations, and even to the known wishes of parents."

On the following day Mr. Booth replied, giving the following quotation from a letter of Mr. Charlesworth dated Jan. 31, "written after Miss Charlesworth was in Switzerland, and after repeated reports had shown clearly what her position in the Army was":—

Dear Miss Booth,—I will leave entirely to your judgment and the convenience of your arrangements whether my child remains at Geneva or at Paris during your absence in England. Let her be where she will be most helpful to you and most useful in the Lord's service. If you intend to return to Geneva, her remaining there will save both the fatigue and expense of a long double journey. I can quite trust to your arrangements for my child. I know you will counsel her and enforce rules for her guidance in your absence.

The correspondence was continued on Saturday by Mr. Charlesworth, and by Mr. Booth on Monday. We have not space for these communications. We think if Mr. Charlesworth had acted with more determination it would have been better for himself and for his child.

Mr. Charlesworth comments severely on the "Orders and Regulations for the Salvation Army," and Mr. Booth replies in terms which we do not understand. As we have received more than one communication respecting these Orders and Regulations, we shall probably return to the subject in our next.

MR. WM. NOBLE during the past and present week has been conducting a successful mission at Exeter. The Bishop of Exeter, and other prominent men in the city and county, have taken an active part in the work. Twelve hundred persons have signed the pledge and taken the ribbon.

Notices of Books, &c.

Gesta Christi; a History of Humane Progress under Christianity. By C. Loring Brace. Hodder & Stoughton. The author of this book is well known in literary circles as the writer of several other works of value and interest, such as "Races of the Old World," "Home Life in Germany and Hungary," "Dangerous Classes in New York," &c. He has a special right to be heard on the subject of the present volume, not only from the painstaking labour he has bestowed upon its development, but from his long experience as a Christian philanthropist, in which character for more than thirty years past he has practically tested and proved the power of Christianity to alleviate human woe, and elevate the human race.

Our author is no carpet knight, but one who has fought nobly and long on the field of conflict with poverty, vice, and their attendant evils. In New York Mr. Brace is known as one of the greatest benefactors the city can boast; his efforts on behalf of the youthful part of the population, more especially those found in the lowest depths of degradation and want, have resulted in untold blessing to hundreds whom he has been the means of reclaiming from ruin, as well as to the city at large by breaking up whole gangs of young ruffians who would otherwise have endangered the peace and welfare of the community. For such a man the subject on which he treats may well have possessed a fascinating influence, leading to the close study, careful investigation, logical force, and wide-spread research, evidences of which everywhere abound in the volume he has produced. His object is "to examine the effects of this faith or moral power (by which is meant the Christian religion) on the advancement of the race in humanity and morality—both what it has accomplished, and what it tends to accomplish."

In working out this purpose the author traces, first of all, the "Influence of Christianity on the laws, practices, and the institutions of the Roman period," then the "Power of the Christian faith on the habits, morals, and laws of the Middle Ages," and, lastly, the "Reforms in humane progress brought about by this moral power during the Modern period." Among the leading topics reviewed in the course of his argument are the position of woman, personal purity, and marriage; oppression and slavery, intemperance, pauperism, free-trade, international law, and war; the religion of Christ is shown to have implanted, stimulated, and supported practices, principles, and ideals in relation to these and other social and political problems which prove it to be "the great reforming power of the world." The parts of history are condensed and brought together with a masterly hand, and a mass of information presented to the general reader of incalculable value and interest. An important distinction is drawn between "Christianity and the Church," or rather between "the Church that is seen and known among men," and that which is "the true and invisible Church of Christ;" the former often having been found in alliance with bigotry and hate, and "often an emblem of power, lust, and ambition," representing anything but the image of Christ, while the latter has ever been on the side of righteousness and truth, its representatives illustrating and transmitting the Divine truths readily from Him.

The book is an important contribution to the evidences of Christianity as a Divine revelation, and cannot fail to strengthen faith in the living Christ, whose achievements the writer truly describes all the blissful results of the Gospel era to be. He is still the great Worker, as well as the Originator of all true Christian progress. It does not, of course, enter into the author's purpose to discuss dispensational aspects of the subject, in its reference to the future; probably, if it did, we should join issue with him as to the means by which the ultimate universal triumph of the Christ shall be secured; believing, as we do, that this shall be, not by a continued process of revolution through the ages, but by the personal return of the Lord Himself. Nevertheless, we rejoice to share in the author's profound faith in Christ and Christianity as the only means for restoring the world to peace and purity, and very heartily commend his book to the attention of our readers.

The friends of Temperance will find stimulus and encouragement from the recognition made of their work, as grading out of, and proceeding in harmony with Christian truth, while all who are labouring to promote the welfare of humanity will be strengthened in their assurance of the soundness and practical value of action on the grand old lines of faith in Christ and harmony with his truth. We would that all who in these days of rationalism and freethought are troubled with doubts as to the Divine personality and power of the Saviour of men, should carefully read and reflect upon Mr. Braces's really valuable work.

Self. By Rev. F. A. C. Lillingstone. Marshall Brothers. Valuable chapters on self-denial, self-esteem, self-interest, self-defence, and self-control. The loving spirit of the writer much commends the volume.

The Holy Spirit in Man. By Rev. A. Douglas McMillan. 2s.6d. Religious Tract Society. The aim of this excellent little book is to create more attention to the indwelling power of the Holy Spirit in the believer, and to unfold some of the more special aspects of his work and office.

This Work-a-day World. By Miss E. Wordsworth. Hatchards. Young folks will here find a store of refreshing reading. Even their toys are made the ministers to their moral and spiritual wants. The writer's thoughts are homely and simple, yet clothed with beauty and interest.

The Lord's Day in Conference and Congress. By John Gritton, D.D. 20, Bedford-street, Strand. The papers included in this volume have been read at Conferences and Congresses during the past fifteen years, and are now published in the hope of furnishing Sabbath defenders with weapons both of defence and attack.

What Shall we Do with Them? By Miss Corke. J. Nisbet & Co. The origin, formation, and success of the London and Brighton Female Convalescent Home are described in these pages. It is the story of fifteen thousand persons, many of them widows and orphans, who have been the recipients of physical and spiritual refreshing during a brief or prolonged stay in the Home.

The Reformation. By Prof. Lindsay, D.D. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh. Among the numerous publications treating of this great religious movement, the little book before us deserves a high place, especially as a hand-book for Bible-classes. The author deals with the Reformation, first, in an historical aspect, and finally proceeds to describe the doctrinal principles which gave it being and shape. The work also contains a chronological summary.

Bible Helps; or, Aids to Bible Students. By G. T. Gillingham. 6s. Elliot Stock. The young Bible student will here find, no doubt, much that is helpful, but there are many more valuable works by eminent writers in the same direction. The information is not always the most recent. An analysis of the various books of Scripture occupies more than half the space. There are now so many good "aids" to the study of the Bible, that a new venture should furnish some special justification.

Bible Readings, arranged by James R. Carr, Carlisle. R. L. Allen, 143, Sauchiehall-street, Glasgow. These Readings are characterised by brevity and point. The Bible student will find much that is helpful in the use of them. The subjects, twelve in number, are very varied, comprising such themes as "Joy," "Separation," "Individual Effort," &c. The one entitled "Using Means" is at the present time likely to be of special interest, as suggesting and aiding inquiry on the theory of "Faith-healing," of which we are just now hearing so much.

A correspondent writes with reference to the book, "Abide in Christ" (Nisbet & Co.), noticed in these columns last week:—This work was lately brought to my notice by a friend, and I have had much pleasure in helping to circulate it. It is a deeply spiritual and valuable work, but not suited, as your notice would lead one to suppose, for young believers so much as for those who have made some progress in the Divine life, and who yearn for the highest experience. I think it superior to anything Romaine ever wrote, having all the sweetness of that author with more variety.

Memorials of the Life and Ministry of Thomas Main, D.D. By his Widow. Macniven & Wallace. Out of Scotland this tribute of an affectionate wife to the worth and labours of her husband, will be of comparatively little interest. At the early age of twenty-three Dr. Main was appointed to an important provincial congregation of the Established Church. Leaving it at the Disruption, he soon found himself at the head of a most influential congregation of the Free Church in the same town, Kilmarnock. After an assiduous ministry of eighteen years, he was transferred to St. Mary's, Edinburgh, where he laboured for twenty-four years. Eminently successful in his first charge, he was only moderately so in the second. The critical atmosphere of the "modern Athens" did not seem to be congenial soil to one accustomed to the quiet ways of country life. The volume before us is made up half of biography proper, and half of sermons of the "solid" type characteristic of the Scottish pulpit. Coming from his widow, a critical biography was not to be looked for. Nevertheless, to those—and they must be many—who during his forty-two years' Ministry derived benefit from his Gospel teaching, these "Memorials" must form a pleasing possession. The publishers have by clearness of type and excellence of workmanship made the work pleasant to the reader.

Old Testament Revision. By Alex. Roberts, D.D. Hodder & Stoughton. This book is well-timed, well written, and well worthy of perusal. The author is clearly at home in his subject, and his suggestions as to the amendments which require to be made on our Authorised version seem to be critically sound and fair. He especially instances what he calls "one of its most characteristic blemishes, viz., the needless and misleading variations in the rendering of terms which are exactly the same in the original." This, undoubtedly, in reference to the names of persons and places, introduces confusion and perplexes the reader, and should, in any attempt at revision, be corrected, as should also the number of obsolete expressions which abound. The refutation of Dr. Robertson Smith's argument for another than Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch is, as it seems to us, conclusive and clear. The chapters on the Hebrew text, and on the Septuagint version and Samaritan Pentateuch, are of great use in showing the English reader the difficulties with which the translator has to contend; while the description of the ancient versions, such as the Syriac, Latin, Gothic, and others, throw a flood of light on the kind of labour which must be gone through before any revision can be regarded as complete. The chapters on the Apocrypha, and on the Talmud and Targums, will be read with great interest. More than 200 distinct passages pass under the author's own criticism in the course of the volume, and without in every case endorsing his opinion—as, for instance, in the case of 1 Kings xvii. 6—we nevertheless note with pleasure the reverence for truth, and general upholding of orthodox principles of interpretation, by which the volume is marked.

MR. QUARRIER'S CANADIAN HOMES.—At the Christian Institute, Glasgow, presided over by Principal Douglas, Miss Bilbrough gave another interesting account of her work among the children sent out by Mr. Quarrier to the Home in Canada. Last year there were 600 applications in Canada for the children, and there were only 150 to supply the demand. Mr. Quarrier said he expected this year to send out 200 children.

PROTESTANT COTTAGE HOSPITAL, BARCELONA.—During the past few years I have once and again aked your sympathy and prayers on behalf of our poor Protestant brethren in Barcelona, as also your aid towards opening for them a small Cottage Hospital as a refuge in time of sickness. Much difficulty has been experienced in obtaining a suitable cottage, but one has at last been met with, and furnished. It is capable of receiving seven or eight patients, though at present only five beds stand prepared. Here, not only Spanish, but also foreign Protestants can be received when overtaken by diseases that demand more care than can be given them at their own homes or lodgings. An experienced and devoted English nurse is at present directing this little establishment, the value and importance of which it would be difficult to overestimate. Not only has a considerable sum been spent on furnishing the hospital, but the current expenses have been considerably increased, so that faith is now called to greater exercise; still we believe that the Lord will continue to bless and prosper this work to the end.

MESSRS MOODY AND SANKEY.

BELFAST.

EACH day served to deepen the impression and increase the multitudes desirous of attending the meetings. Many, it is to be regretted, who had travelled long distances, were unable to obtain admission. God seems to have made the wrath of man to praise Him. The months of horror and darkness and bloodshed through which we have passed as a nation, seem, contrary to the expectation of many, to have cast us upon God, and caused many to seek after Him.

As already noted, the thirst for hearing the Word of God was something exceeding anything Mr. Moody has witnessed since he began these Missions for God. Had he known the depth of the desire of the people he would have arranged to have spent some three or four months in Ireland.

The numbers, ready before all men to express their desire to seek and find Jesus increased greatly towards the end of the week. These included persons in all ranks of society, and of all denominations, Roman Catholics as well as Protestants. The harvest was greater than could be reaped. Although we had many and excellent workers, they were not enough to overtake the difficult, delicate, and anxious work of rightly guiding the awakened inquirers to "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

Sabbath, the 18th, was the last day of the Mission. Arrangements were made by Mr. Moody to endeavour to overtake the pressure of desire to hear "More about Jesus." At eight a.m. a meeting for Christians was held in our largest church. The doors were opened by six, and shortly after the building was densely packed, and the overflowing crowd filled the adjoining church. This meeting was indeed remarkable, and will have its history read and rejoiced over, I believe, in the annals of Eternity. At two o'clock, in the same church, a meeting for women was held. What heart, however callous, would not have been overcome by the solemnity of the sight, by the unearthly stillness of its close, and by the universal consciousness of the Spirit's presence, as hundreds, upon bended knees, sought Jesus and his peace? If the sight of even one man at the Mercy seat, as he pleads for his life, and deals with God, fills the mind of an onlooker with awe and reverence, how much more the sight of that prostrate multitude! Dealt with afterwards by the workers, as best they could in the short time at their command, they slowly and reluctantly retired.

But the day's work of seeking to harvest and gather the sheaves was scarcely yet begun. At 7 p.m. the Ulster Hall was set apart for a meeting for those who had professed to have received spiritual benefit, either as having been led to accept Jesus Christ, or as having been awakened to a sense of their lost state and as anxiously seeking Him. Admission was by ticket. The Hall was soon well filled. Some two thousand five hundred sought admission by ticket. These tickets were carefully given out, after strict inquiry. They who sought for tickets, either as professing conversion or as seeking earnestly after Christ, were of all classes, of all ranks, and of all characters. Some from the most moral and respectable of the community, others from the most depraved—just as of old—scribes and pharisees, publicans and harlots. So also there were inquirers connected with all the Churches—Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Moravians, Covenanters, and Roman Catholics, and some hundreds unconnected with any denomination.

I cannot occupy your space by giving an account of Mr. Moody's addresses at any of the concluding services. I touch rather on results. Melted under the power of the truth in the hands of the Spirit, the place was a Bochim—as solemn as the day of judgment. Many I believe were dealing as directly with God upon his throne of grace as they must do upon that last day before the great white throne. Hundreds knelt before God, and before all men. Others sat remote in some quiet corner, struggling under the birth-pangs of this new life. The workers did all they could. Overcome with the greatness of the blessing, they might be seen as of old, all through the Hall, beckoning to their partners to come and help them.

By nine o'clock Mr. Moody left some of us in charge of the meeting for inquirers, and went to the closing meeting for men, whither Mr. Sankey had preceded him. I shall not attempt to describe the appearance of the meeting as I reached it, at the close of Mr. Moody's address, for, indeed, I could not; suffice it to say there were great searchings of heart, and earnest, painful seeking after God. The area of the church was filled with men on their knees, waiting at the Throne of Grace. How many found Him whom they sought none knoweth, saving He to whom all hearts are unfolded. Man can only judge from the outward manifestation and profession. I think, however, all competent witnesses would be ready to declare their belief that there was joy in heaven over many a sinner brought to repentance that night.

Looking back now upon the week of unceasing effort by these servants of God, in Belfast, for the glory of Christ in the salvation of men, we find that the whole town was stirred as it probably has not been for many years, if ever, on the subject of religion. The desire to hear the Gospel was so great that it was impossible to meet it. Some two thousand five hundred, giving names and addresses, professed more or less interest in Jesus and his salvation, while very many whose names were not taken are among the most hopeful inquirers. Mr. Moody frequently expressed his wonder at the desire to hear, and declared that if he had known it he would have arranged to have spent some months instead of days in preaching the Gospel in this dark and unhappy land.

Some of the most intensely interesting cases were to be seen on Saturday in the rooms of the Y.M.C.A., when the names and addresses were taken of those seeking admission to the meetings for converts and inquirers. A number of workers were present, and as they met with one and another in great mental distress, they took them aside, and with open Bibles, from the Word, they endeavoured to show them the way of life through faith in Jesus. As a specimen, I may mention the case of two, husband and wife, with which I dealt personally. Both of them were upwards of seventy years of age; both of them in tearful agony concerning their lost condition. Taking them aside to a quiet corner, I preached Christ to them, and, pointing them to John i. 12, they seemed, one after the other, to enter in among the many who received Him to whom He gave power to become the sons of God. So it seemed to be with many others, who, coming to receive cards of admission to the meeting as inquirers, left with glad hearts, not as seekers, but as having found the Messiah! As in the closing hours of the Sabbath a few of us knelt and commended our beloved brethren to the grace of God, we did so with thanksgiving and gratitude to God for what He had wrought, through them, in Belfast, and with increasing confidence and brotherly love towards them. On Monday morning, at the early hour of seven, they left for Dublin, on their way to Leicester, whither, I trust, the Lord has gone before them.

H. M. Williamson.

Rev. Dr. Knox, of Belfast, contributed a leading article to last week's Witness, of which we give the opening and closing paragraph:—

"These eminent evangelists have come and gone. It is too soon to pronounce absolutely on the permanence of their work. That that work was marvellous in its outward aspect is beyond all question. Within the limits of a week they moved—or rather, as we feel inclined to say, God by them moved—Belfast as it never was moved before. We remember the great awakening of "fifty-nine." We remember the former visit of these brethren, and very recently, the visit of Messrs Whittle and M'Granahan. On none of these occasions was this great community so stirred as during the past week. No doubt there was intense interest awakened before these brethren arrived. The spirit of expectation took hold of the more earnest of the community. There was much prayer, private and public. But the impression, so far as we can gauge its visible manifestations, far transcended all anticipation." . . .

"Surely this brief and memorable visit lays on ministers and all Christian workers a special obligation to be watchful and prayerful and faithful in gathering in the fruit, in building up young Christians, and guarding them against the assaults of all who are not in sympathy with the work; in deepening and extending that work, and in fostering the spirit of earnestness throughout the Church."

In the same issue of the Belfast Witness we are glad to read the following:—

"One good result of Mr. Moody's visit to Belfast has been that a new effort is about to be made by the United Committee, under whose auspices his meetings were held, to reach the non-churchgoing class of our community. It is proposed to raise funds to provide a structure of wood or iron, capable of holding a considerable body of people, and which can be moved about from place to place. The idea is to erect this in the midst of some careless section of the population, and to hold special services in it, of non-denominational character, night after night—by-and-by to remove it into another district, and so on. The idea seems to be an excellent one in many ways, and, if the requisite funds are obtained in Belfast, may be expected to be wisely and earnestly wrought out by the thoroughly representative committee which has the matter in charge."

DUBLIN.

A correspondent here writes, dated Thursday last:—Mr. Moody was here on Monday, and gave another plain, simple, earnest address to young converts; it had some very sensible warning and admonitions in it. The Union building was crammed, and many persons had to leave from the impossibility of getting room. Mr. Moody's visit has been one of great blessing. Would that ministers of the Gospel would only adopt his style of simple, earnest Gospel preaching, and would learn the great importance of inquiry-rooms!

We have been greatly shocked at the disclosures relative to the assassinations in Dublin, but I am informed on very good authority that the country is quiet only because it is kept so by the power of the sword. The Gospel is the only thing to right Ireland's wrongs.

LEICESTER.

The long-anticipated visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Leicester took place last week. A committee, representing the various denominations, had been quietly working for some time, and every arrangement had been made to prepare for the crowds that were expected. A choir of some three hundred voices had been formed from the various places of worship; united prayer-meetings had been held; while hand-bills distributed among the homes of the working classes announced that Leicester was at last to be favoured with a visit from the men whose name s and whose work had acquired so mighty a reputation.

The Evangelists arrived at 1.40 on Tuesday, coming direct from their Mission at Belfast, and no time, therefore, was left them for rest before the three o'clock Bible-reading commenced. By this hour the Temperance Hall was crowded, and large numbers were unable to gain admittance. There must have been about 2000 present. The platform was occupied by the choir, ministers, and a number of leading townsmen. The meeting commenced with a short prayer by the Rev. M. Reed, vicar of Holy Trinity, after which Mr. Sankey sang the hymn "Behold what manner of love." After another prayer he sang "Nothing but leaves." This was appropriately followed by the congregation singing "We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves."

Mr. Moody followed with prayer, and then gave his address on the Work of the Holy Ghost. Though he was seemingly somewhat wearied, his address lacked nothing of interest and power. It was pithy, racy, scriptural, and most helpful to those who heard it. At the beginning of a Mission like this, it was well to be pointed to the source of all living experience and abiding fruit; and though the ground was familiar to the Christian, it was most encouraging to be reminded that all the elements of a truly successful and blessed life it was the distinct and proper work of the Holy Spirit to impart. The drooping, the timid, the cold-hearted, were roused and cheered to seek something better than that which is the life of, alas! too many. A few detached sentences may be given. He spoke of Christians to meet whom was like a "good blast of east wind in Edinboro' on a cold day in March;" "The Holy Ghost won't dwell in tombs." Our hearts are to contain "full measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over." How can Satan get in then? "The Woman of Samaria came for a pot of water, and she got a whole well." In urging the necessity for a hopeful spirit he said, "God never makes use of discouraged men." He strongly insisted on the need for closer sympathy between congregations and ministers, expressing his belief that many a minister was wearing out his life in accomplishing nothing because of the want of sympathy in their churches. At the close of the address a short prayer-meeting was held.

The evening meeting was held in the Floral Hall. This is an immense skating rink, but it had been floored and seated to accommodate 5000 persons. At one end of the gallery a large orchestra had been erected for the singers, from the front of which Mr. Moody spoke. By a quarter to eight the vast building was filled. All classes were represented, admirable order was observed, and the utmost attention paid throughout. A number of hymns were sung while the audience were assembling, but the meeting proper commenced by the singing of the hundredth Psalm. This was most heartily taken up by the congregation, and the volume of sound from so many voices was grand in the extreme. After prayer, Mr. Sankey sang the "Ninety and Nine." A short Scripture reading having been given by Mr. Moody, the choir sang the hymn, "Hark, hark, my soul," the congregation joining in the last verse. Mr. Moody then delivered an address, taking for its foundation the words, "What seek ye?" "Seek ye the Lord." "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." At the close, the Christians, and those who were seeking the Lord, were invited to remain, and the rest of the congregation were requested to withdraw. A large number remained, and many rose in response to Mr. Moody's appeal to ask an interest in the prayers of God's people. The meeting was continued to a late hour, little knots of those in earnest conversation being scattered over the building, and many encouraging cases came under notice.

On Wednesday Mr. Moody conducted the noon prayer-meeting. It was not generally known that he was to be there, hence the attendance was not large. The address was on the elements of successful prayer, and contained some admirable thoughts. To offer prevalent prayer, he showed there should be adoration, confession, restitution, thanksgiving, petition, submission, union, and mutual forgiveness.

Three o'clock was the hour for the Bible-reading, but as the prayer-meeting was dispersing at half-past one, the first comers took their seats for the meeting which was to follow. Long before the appointed time, the building was crammed, and when Mr. Moody came on the platform at a quarter to three, he said, "There are as many people outside as there are in. We'll go to the Rink." The announcement was received by many with feelings approaching consternation. Multitudes, who had come early to secure a seat, had to hurry off more than half-a-mile; and had any advertisement of the meeting been required, no more striking one could have been devised than that of some three or four thousand people rushing from the one building to the other.

Arrived at the Rink, after singing and prayer, Mr. Moody delivered an address on the words, "God is love." He expressed his conviction that there was no truth the devil was so trying to blot out as this, and that multitudes would flock into the kingdom were this belief but established in their hearts. Most touchingly and impressively he illustrated the strength of a mother's love, with which the love of God was compared, and showed that God could love the unworthy, and would cast their sins behind his back.

The evening meeting was simply overwhelming. Soon after seven the front doors were closed, that part of the hall being crammed, and the crowds yet unaccommodated were passed on to the back entrance. From the platform the hall presented the spectacle of a vast, unbroken mass. There must have been seven thousand people present. After singing and prayer, Mr. Moody spoke from the words, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark."

In applying his subject Mr. Moody especially addressed himself to parents, urging most tenderly those who were already in the ark to seek the salvation of their children. The address closed by a most moving appeal to parents yet unsaved, who could neither pray for themselves nor those dear to them. A deep impression must have been produced upon the assembled thousands. A meeting for inquirers was held in an adjacent chapel, and a large number assembled there to listen to simple words of direction from Mr. Moody, while the believers continued in prayer in the Rink.

On Thursday the noon prayer-meeting was more numerously attended. Mr. Moody delivered an address on "How to Deal with the Anxious," prefacing his remarks with a few observations on revivals. He replied to those who objected to them by showing that a revival was welcome in any department but religion. They would be glad of a revival in trade; he believed the Conservative party would be glad of a revival, and so would the Liberals when the others were in; but it was not wanted in religion. If a minister got cold he did not believe in revivals. With great discrimination, Mr. Moody addressed himself to various classes who appeared in the inquirers' meeting, and showed the treatment that was proper to each.

In the afternoon there could have been little short of 5000 persons present. Mr. Moody delivered a powerful address on "Some of the Promises of Christ." Many doubtless had availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the Thursday half-holiday, and hence the large numbers present. The address was well adapted to awaken the careless and comfort the distressed, and at the close a brief prayer-meeting was held, to which a vast number remained.

In the evening the attendance was again simply overwhelming. The enormous building was filled an hour before the time. After several hymns had been sung, "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by" was given by Mr. Sankey; followed by the hymn "Eternity." Mr. Moody then gave his address on "Excuses." This was one of the most powerful appeals to which we have ever listened, and had half the audience risen to their feet and asked the prayers of God's people it would have seemed but a fitting response. As it was, a considerable number accepted the invitation to adjourn to Hill-street Chapel, where an inquirers' meeting was held.

At the noon prayer-meeting on Friday, as on previous days, special requests for prayer were presented. Mr. Moody read and briefly commented on the opening verses of Psalm ciii. The meeting was then thrown open for testimony. A Swede gave a most encouraging report of the progress of the Gospel in his own country; and one also spoke who had recently been induced to forsake a reckless, worldly life for Christ, through Mr. Moody's services at Brighton.

At the afternoon meeting, Mr. Moody gave an address on "Works." He showed that all through the Bible God delighted in putting honour on mean and feeble instruments; that all He required was a thorough consecration to Himself, a faith that He would use us, and tender sympathy with those we sought to help. The attendance was again very large; the address was listened to with the closest attention, and evidently produced a most powerful impression.

The last meeting was held on Friday evening. This is the most unfavourable evening in the week for obtaining an audience in Leicester, but the view from the platform was a most impressive one. Excepting the further end of the hall, which was not seated, and two of the aisles, every inch of sitting or standing room appeared to be packed. There might have been 8,000 present. Mr. Moody spoke from the words, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Into this farewell address he threw everything of entreaty and appeal to those who at different times had been brought near to the Kingdom, that they would enter it, warning them of the fearful danger of the Holy Spirit ceasing to strive with those who had resisted Him. It must have been a difficult part of the "hard way" for transgressors to get over a loving appeal like this, and the impression produced in the vast assembly was very evident.

In closing, Mr. Moody announced a meeting at half-past nine, for men only, to consider the desirability of forming a Young Men's Christian Association in Leicester. In the meantime, he earnestly invited the new converts, and others seeking salvation, to meet him in the Hill-street Chapel.

At the men's meeting, Mr. Moody's characteristic "go" and good-nature were splendidly seen. He briefly showed the objects of a Young Men's Christian Association; stated how many branches were in existence; and pointed out that Leicester, of all the large towns he had visited, was the only one that had not such an institution. He then stated that he "believed in going right on," and moved that a Young Men's Christian Association be formed for Leicester, that Mr. Lloyd be president, Mr. Theodore Walker be secretary, and Mr. Ralph Walker be treasurer. Each proposition was carried by acclamation; and, to the amazement of those who hardly appreciate such intense go-aheadism, an Association was formed, and a good number of members were enrolled on the spot. Mr. Moody very nobly expressed his wish to become a life member, and insisted on subscribing ten guineas for that purpose. He appeared to be running over with good humour, and nothing could have left a kinder feeling towards the man in the hearts of the many who were present. We could not help asking ourselves, "What can workshop scoffers say to this?"

On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings overflow meetings were held in the Temperance Hall, and each evening we believe the building was filled. Mr. E. W. Bliss spoke and Mr. Sankey sang. The meetings were of a most encouraging character.

These services will be gratefully remembered by many. Mr. Moody's blunt, pointed, business-like way of doing his work is in itself refreshing, while the genial good-humour ever breaking out prevents his being misunderstood. He has a disposition tender and strong. Impatient of all waste of time, he begins punctually, and throws not a word away. Neither elegance nor grammar are regarded so much as terseness and point. His one aim is to make the claims of Christ seen and felt. May the lessons of the visit not be lost upon God's servants in Leicester, and may more cheerful toil for Christ result in a large increase to his kingdom!

J. C. Forth.

The following is from a full and excellent account of the meetings in the Blue Ribbon Banner:—

Messrs. Moody and Sankey have now been three days in Leicester. Just as was the case with Oxford and Cambridge, Birmingham, and Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Belfast the heart of the town and district has been stirred to the core. In view of the scenes witnessed in our streets, the question has been literally appropriate:—

"What means this eager, anxious throng,
Which moves with busy haste along,
These wondrous gatherings day by day?
What means this strange commotion, pray?"

The whole upheaval is a singular tribute to the power of the simple old Gospel to turn the world upside down. The advent of the now renowned evangelists has been productive of just such marvellous effects as have followed their arrival elsewhere. They have not come of their own accord, but on the invitation of some seventy gentlemen entitled to claim that they represent Christians of all evangelical denominations. The invitation was not extended without prayerful consideration, and its acceptance sent the whole religious community to their knees to plead for a special season of refreshing from on high.

There is no suspicion of self-interested motives on the part of the evangelists to disturb the exercise of Christian faith. Their entire prohibition of the incense of popular applause, so dear to secular singers and speakers, sufficiently indicates the Divine Master whose they are and whom they serve. Mr. Sankey is a skilled musician and an accomplished singer, but if it were not the everlasting Gospel that he sings he would have many superiors and more rivals. Mr. Moody is no orator, and yet the most polished and impassioned rhetorician could not, night after night, produce the spell-like power which few fail to feel who come within reach of his voice. We saw a knot of four publicans —whose presence in the Floral Hall was not probably due to a high motive—listening most reverently; and some "hard cases," whose usual resorts are the public-house and the police-court, very near the melting mood. How came it that 8,000 people were content to stay for hours in that Floral Hall, all orderly, earnest and solemnised, although largely admixed with those whom even Mr. Bright called the "residuum"? The only reasonable answer is that the Spirit of God has set his seal on the ministry of speech and song. Messrs. Moody and Sankey have personal faith in the message they proclaim, and therefore it vibrates from their hearts to the hearts of their hearers.

Moreover, in regard to Mr. Moody in particular, there is no slovenly or scamped work about him. As an honest, thorough-going man of common sense he has discovered the best methods of the business of evangelisation. Not only does he believe in the Bible "from back to back" but it has been the loving labour of years to "study to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." His special power seems to be a faculty of de-orientalising the Scripture narratives and translating them into forms that transfix the attention of us denizens of the West, so that we can almost instantaneously claim a closer intimacy with patriarchs, prophets and apostles, and learn new lessons from their lives. Intelligent honouring of the Holy Spirit, faithful preaching of Christ, the power of prayer and song, simple faith, cheerful testimony, personal dealing with convicted sinners in after-meetings; in all these things our American brothers are eminent examples to guide Christians into the way of making their heaven-born power felt, so that our era may become notable for this, that "the Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved."

NOTTINGHAM.

We have received the following by telegram: An interesting preliminary meeting was held on Saturday night. On Sunday there was a meeting for Christian workers, at 8 a.m.; for non-churchgoers, at 11; for women, at 3; and for men, at 7.30. Crowds were turned away from each; the excitement was very great. The largest available building in the town is engaged for overflow-meetings, to be conducted by Mr. E. W. Bliss.

WHITECROSS-STREET MEDICAL MISSION.—A large number of patients attend here two afternoons weekly, when they have doctor's advice and medicine free. A simple Gospel address is given; and as one looks around on the poor wretched people gathered together, seeking healing for their bodies, it is blessed to be able to point them to Him who came to seek and to save the lost. Some have really been led to accept the Saviour, and to trust Him. I feel sure if this work were better known, many would feel it a privilege to help it on. The necessary expenses being considerable, visitors are welcome at any time,—Sincerely yours,

Blackheath. M. Whitfield.

A QUERY.

Sir,—Can any of your readers tell me of a lunatic asylum (ladies') in or near London, where inmates are treated as immortal beings and the care not limited to their animal existence?—Yours truly, C. B.

THE BISHOPS AND PUBLIC MORALITY.

Dear Sir,—The great and growing interest which is felt on the subject of public morality encourages me to call attention, through The Christian, to the wise and weighty words which the late Prince Consort addressed to the late Dr. Wilberforce when he was appointed Bishop of Oxford. In Bishop Wilberforce's Life, vol. i., pp. 276-7, the following sentences will be found: "A bishop should come forward whenever the interests of humanity are at stake, and give boldly and manfully his advice to the House of Lords and the country (I mean questions like negro emancipation, education of the people, &c., &c.) . . . . As to religious affairs, he cannot but take an active part in them; but let that always be the part of a Christian, not of a mere Churchman. . . . . A bishop ought to remind the peers of their duties as Christians. He ought to be a guardian of public morality. He should likewise boldly admonish the public even against its predominant feeling, if this be contrary to the purest standard of morality."

The bishops of England hardly acted up to this standard of duty when they allowed State regulation of vice to be introduced into the country without giving one warning word against it, nor through the past seventeen years during which the system has been in operation, they still remaining silent. Let us hope that they will yet bestir themselves, and not only they, but also every minister of the Gospel and every Christian. Every Christian ought to be "a guardian of public morality." I wonder whether our Queen ever compared her husband's words with the immoral laws which, when he was dead and gone, she was induced to sign.—Yours faithfully,

J. P. Gledstone.

REBUKING VICE.

My dear Sir,—I have long been wanting to write to you and thank you with all my heart for the bold and fearless manner in which you have been dealing with the crying sin of the age. You may offend some, but any man worthy of the name will rejoice that at last a Christian paper has been found that will boldly rebuke vice wherever found.

In my work amongst young people it is simply appalling to see how wide-spread is this deadly evil, amongst girls as well as boys. Thousands of them are ruined body and soul through want of plain speaking and loving warning.

Whenever I speak to Sunday-school teachers I make a point of entreating them to speak out plainly and warn those whom they teach against sins of the flesh. A lady in a large manufacturing town who works amongst girls who come out of prison, has found they have nearly all been in the Sunday-school, and she always puts this question, "Did your Sunday-school teacher ever warn you against drunkenness or uncleanness?" In every case the answer has been, "She never said a word about it!" Proof positive of the need!

This matter seems utterly ignored or tabooed by the Sunday-school papers, which are so occupied with the "teaching" that they entirely omit the "training." But I take it, it is more important to teach children that their bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, than abstruse facts of history or geography, which are of very little practical use.

The state of our streets at night and the awful increase of juvenile prostitution are facts which cannot be denied, and I pray God you may so "agitate, agitate, agitate," this truly burning question of social purity that others may be constrained to join in the warfare you are waging. I could write pages on this subject, for it lies deeply on my heart, but will refrain.

I pray that God may long spare you to witness for Him.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

A Friend of the Young.

GOD'S FAITHFULNESS.

Dear Sir,—How joyfully I can subscribe to the faithfulness of God in supplying, not only the needed funds, but every requisite for the success of his work. Only I think that we should be sure that it is his, that He is at the head of it, then we may trust Him implicitly, confide every detail to Him, wait upon Him continually for guidance, and He will never fail either the workers or the work: at least that is my experience.

Some time ago, He laid it upon our hearts to gather together some of the stray children here to Sunday-school; first, we were supplied with temporary accommodation, then, when we were fairly at work, He gave us a permanent school-room, and has ever since met every need in connection with the work as it has grown.

But I should like to tell "An Old Man" a most precious lesson God taught me Himself, about two years ago, with regard to trusting Him for funds. I thought it would be right to have money in hand to meet all expenses of the Sunday-school, and mothers' meetings, Bible-classes, &c., say for six months, and I asked my friend who built the school to join me in providing it. She however refused, saying she thought we could not improve on our present plan. A little disappointed, I came home to commune with God about it. Then He showed me so clearly, but so lovingly, where I was wrong. Ever since my conversion He had given me daily bread, met every daily need for his work, had given hourly grace, and moment by moment watchful love and tender care—on his part most blessed, unbroken communion, but this fund meant independence on my part, less prayer, because less need, less dependence on Him, less waiting and trusting, and that would never do.

The lesson was most precious, as all his lessons are; it filled my heart with joy to know that He would always set me right, that it was his will that I should be continually with Him, entirely dependent on Him, trusting Him for everything. I am sure that "faith in God" grows from knowledge of God. "They that know thy name will put their trust in Thee, for Thou Lord hast not forsaken them that seek Thee."—Yours very truly,

Bleak House, Aldershot. Ellen Sears.

HEALING BY FAITH v. HEALING IN CHRIST.

Dear Sir,—May I add one more letter to those already written on the subject of "Healing by Faith," many of which are calculated to lead some of God's children into distress of mind, and what is more, may tend to hold others back from claiming their portion of the fulness which is for them in Christ.

It appears to me that the title of the subject, "Healing by faith," is in itself misleading. It is like saying, "Salvation by faith." There is a sense in which we are saved by faith, and in another sense our faith in no way affects the glorious and accomplished fact of salvation in, through, and by Christ, our faith being only the hand that conveys to our soul the blessings of that salvation. So, in like manner, is healing in, through, and by Christ, and when this is once clearly seen, all the difficulties that surround the subject vanish.

The fact that the redemption work of Christ extended to spirit, soul and body, runs through the whole Bible, and though we wait the full redemption-day as regards the body, till the last enemy shall be destroyed, yet present blessings have been seen to flow to the redeemed of Christ in every age, from the first moment a Saviour was promised to the world. The chosen people, walking obediently to the commands of God, were promised exemption from the diseases of Egypt: and who shall dare to say that when his blessed Son was manifested to destroy the works of the devil, and a spiritual kingdom was to be set up on earth, that any portion of his redemption-work was to be abated?

On the contrary, does not the greater include the less? And as if specially to correct this supposition, did He not connect the two, saying, "Whether is it easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or, Arise, take up thy bed and walk." And when it was expedient that He should go away, did He not commission his Church to represent Him to the world, and did not the early Church seem so to understand Him?

In the oft-quoted texts, St. James v. 14, 15, the Apostle in no way guards the exhortation as if to apply to certain individuals only, but exhorts the sick one to seek deliverance from both sin and sickness at once. On the other hand, when the Corinthian Church had grown carnal, and had lost sight of the great spiritual truth of feeding on the Lord by faith, the Apostle Paul plainly tells us,

"For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." The instances so often brought forward of Timothy, Trophimus, and Epaphroditus, of whose individual experiences we know so little, can in no way affect the doctrines of the Gospel of Christ.

Viewed in this aspect, how puerile and secondary appear the dissensions as to the way in which the believer shall claim his portion. Shall we condemn those brethren, who, strong in faith, giving glory to God, take the very letter of Scripture and claim their privilege directly from the hands of the Great Healer Himself? Or shall we blame those fellow-Christians who believe that God more usually works by means, and look for the same blessing through God-given remedies, or such human means as He alone can sanctify and bless?

Above all, let us remember that "all things work together for good to them that love God." He alone knows what discipline each of us requires, and a loving, child-like trust in his unerring wisdom must be uppermost in our hearts. "Thy will be done," must ever precede "Deliver us from evil." So shall the Lord "perfect that which concerneth us, and not forsake the work of his own hands."—I am, Sir, yours very faithfully,

SALVATION ARMY DISTURBANCES.

Dear Sir,—In endeavouring to trace to its true source the cause of the disturbances that now and again take place in connection with the Salvation Army out-of-door work, I think we must go a little deeper than that assigned in Notes and Comments of your issue of Feb. 15, namely, the military dress, titles, &c. And in doing so, if we look at the earlier history of the Army when it was known as the Christian Mission, we shall find it was exposed to exactly the same kind of opposition, and endured similar persecution as it does to-day, though military rank and uniform formed no part of its vocabulary.

One of the oldest members of the Christian Mission who is stationed here now as captain of the Salvation Army, tells me that so far back as sixteen to seventeen years ago, there were large processions marching through the streets of Whitechapel and Mile-End, which had to be frequently guarded by escorts of police from the rude assaults of the mob; and that they had a hard fight of it at Poplar, Millwall, and other places in the East-end; while in the country they encountered attacks, as at Cardiff, where the persecutors nearly succeeded in pulling down Mr. Cory's tent, in which the services were being held, and stoned the procession for a quarter of a mile, many heads being cut thereby.

And in this city where I live, where the Christian Mission was established five years ago, it met with considerable opposition from the beginning, the converts enduring meekly every kind of insult and indignity, their persecutors being allowed without let or hindrance to do just as they pleased; now police protection has been afforded, the processions can go through the streets, and perfect order is maintained.

But to find a cause we must go deeper down than uniforms and titles, and see it in the natural enmity of the heart to the things of God, his people and his cause, as is abundantly proved from the history of the Church in all ages: from the time when Cain slew his own brother; and "he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit"; or the Lord Jesus himself, and his Apostles, and the early Christians; many of whom were persecuted unto death. No fewer than twenty-six recorded disturbances occur in the Acts of the Apostles; Paul was stoned and left for dead on one occasion; and on another, having been rescued by the soldiers from being killed, he was borne by them to escape the violence of the people.

And passing by the long and dark intervening ages of oppression, tyranny, and bloodshed, we come down to more modern times—the devoted labours of Wesley and Whitefield and their numerous followers, and of the Primitive Methodists and other bold missionaries of the Cross: the same facts present themselves. When all these went forth throughout the length and breadth of the land, and faithfully proclaimed the Gospel, warning the ungodly to repent of sin and turn to God, they were in numberless instances met by howling, savage mobs, who thirsted for their blood, and almost took away their lives. Whitefield, for instance, when in Dublin, was stoned, his head cut open, and he hardly escaped with his life; in fact, those devoted men met with quite as bad, if not worse treatment than the Salvation Army; for, standing alone as they generally did, or accompanied by a few followers only, on the village-green or the town market-place, they were wholly at the mercy of their heartless and cruel persecutors; but their success was unparalleled; out of weakness they were made strong, and thousands were awakened from the slumber of sin, and savingly converted to God.

There was no incitement to those persecutions, other than the fact that the preachers were the servants of God, and warned the people of their sin and danger; and, of course, the craft of some was in danger. But while the world lasts, at least until the millennium of righteousness and peace, an aggressive Christianity will be sure to raise up persecution, whatever form it may take. To the true soldier of the Cross, it will ever be as with the Apostle of the Gentiles, "in every city bonds and afflictions abide him;" and "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." For my own part, I never expect to be exempt, and it will be a bad day for the Salvation Army when all shall go so smooth as that they shall have no persecution; which day, it is my fervent prayer, may never come.—Yours faithfully,

G. N. Pepper, Lieut.-Colonel.

NEWS NOTES, HOME AND FOREIGN.

HOME.

The Queen has given another proof of her sympathy with the bereaved by attending the funeral of a sergeant who fell dead when on guard at Windsor.

The Presbyterian Church of England is purposing to raise £25,000 in five years for Church extension. The chairman at a meeting held at Exeter Hall on Monday week started the fund with a £1000 subscription.

After hearing read and debating on a paper with reference to the opium question, the Glasgow Foreign Mission Students' Union resolved to do all in its power for the abolition of the Anglo-Chinese opium trade.

The "Mission Week" recently observed in Edinburgh by the United Presbyterian Church was a most encouraging success. The audiences were large, and it is believed that the interest in Missions will be greatly quickened.

Some Belfast magistrates have lately sentenced transgressors of the licence laws to imprisonment without the option of a fine. This vigorous policy is sure to have a salutary effect. The Belfast Witness thinks that in a very short time Sunday closing will be universal in the three kingdoms.

An interesting meeting of City young men was lately held at 168, Aldersgate-street, in connection with the City Bible Class Union. The object contemplated was to extend the establishment of Bible classes and devotional meetings in City warehouses.

In passing sentence last week on some disturbers of the Church Army meetings at Westminster, the magistrate said these gatherings seemed to produce great violence, and he asked Mr. Carlile, the leader, to consider how far it was judicious to continue them.

FOREIGN.

Many of the Baptist churches in Philadelphia are said to be enjoying seasons of revival.

Two coloured Professors have sailed from the United States for educational work in Liberia College.

Rev. G. Liljeroth, returned missionary from Lapland, is exciting much interest in Chicago by descriptions of the work; he purposes labouring next in Finland.

A lady has recently died at Philadelphia who regularly paid the rent of more than 150 poor families; her benefactions to the needy amounted to $20,000 a year.

"Estimates show that the American people pay more for tobacco smoke than fuel, and that the use of the weed costs more than bread and potatoes."

The increase of infidelity among the Armenians of Turkey is a matter of serious import to the missionaries. Both on the East and on the West active agencies are propagating materialism.

The New York Observer, commenting on the arbitrary arrest of an ex-Catholic priest in Hamilton, Ohio, because a disturbance arose at his lecture, demands to know why Protestants in the United States may not publicly give their reasons for renouncing Popery. No one hears of Romish priests being disturbed or arrested when they denounce Protestantism.

Recent disclosures of the barbarous treatment of prisoners in the Sing Sing Prison, New York, have excited much popular indignation in the United States.

The Railroad department of the American Y.M.C.A.'s, begun a few years ago in a small way, has now branches on many leading lines, with fifty-six secretaries devoting their whole time to the work.

The New Hebrides are being slowly won from their savage heathenism by the Presbyterian missionaries. A new station has just been established on the Island of Epi, which has about 10,000 inhabitants.

The Society for the Suppression of Vice in New York has, through its indefatigable and courageous secretary, Mr. Anthony Comstock, abolished the public sale of lottery tickets, which was a source of much temptation to the young.

The missionaries of the Canadian Presbyterian Church are accomplishing a highly successful work among the coolies in Trinidad. They devote special attention to education, having twenty-nine schools, attended by 1139 children, whose parents are from India and China.

A Christian Home for inebriate ladies has been established in New York. An American contemporary thinks that when such institutions are needed, it is time Christians should banish wines from their tables, and physicians should prescribe them less frequently.

A minister began evangelistic work among the Mormons in Salt Lake City a score of years ago at the peril of his life. A few years later his superintendent was assassinated. Now Evangelical Churches and Christian schools are being established with impunity in all parts of the territory.

Rev. Dr. Arthur T. Pierson, of Indianapolis, has adopted the expedient of hiring the best public hall in the city for his evening services. The church of which he has recently become pastor is both spacious and elegant, yet he finds that he can draw the people into the hall in far greater numbers than into the church. His Sunday evening sermons are delivered to immense audiences. He uses no sensationalism to attract them, but preaches simply the old-fashioned doctrines of sin and redemption only through Christ.

HEART LONGINGS.

SINGING the sweet new song,
Oh, how my heart doth long
To join the singing round our Father's throne!
For heaven seems so near,
And I am sad and drear,
Left in this world of sorrow, all alone.

Wearing the robe of white,
Most holy in God's sight,
And joining in the angels' happy strain;
There on that peaceful shore,
Where partings are no more,
The long-divided ones shall meet again.

Wearing the crown of gold—
No mortal may behold
The glories of that land where Christ is King:
Far different from this,
That land of light and bliss,
Where evermore the Saviour's praises ring.

Waving the peaceful palm—
My troubled heart grows calm,
Even in this world's sin, and pain, and strife:
In mansions, with the blest,
The weary are at rest,
Freed, and for ever, from this earthly life.

Serving God night and day,
Their golden crown they lay
At the dear feet of Him who died to save.
Who died to bring them there,
To his dear home, so fair:
The Shepherd, who his life so freely gave.

Lord Jesus, guide us home;
Suffer us not to roam
Away from Thee, amidst this world of sin.
Oh, guide our weary feet
To thine own rest, so sweet!
Open the gates, that we may enter in.

M. E. B.

UNANSWERED PRAYER.

"WHAT I tell you in darkness, speak ye in light." I believe the shadow, and with many the darkness, of unanswered prayer, enfolds most believers. Of course, I refer to those who understand that, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name," does not merely mean using the customary ending of a prayer, "Through Jesus Christ our Lord," but, "being accepted in the Beloved," and the petitions of his people being thus presented by Him to the Father.

I, for one, have lately passed through the dark valley of unanswered prayer: but coming, even when the gloom pressed most heavily upon me, to "the Light of the World," was taught then and there by the Master what I am now trying to tell his servants in the light.

It is needless to confide the nature of my trouble: it is quite sufficient for me to confess that I was tempted to feel my God had failed me. But even in my sense of despair, I knew the Saviour of the Gospels "liveth for evermore," and "is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever." So, in desperation, I searched my Bible to see if He had ever refused help when here upon earth, because as He had acted then so would He act now.

What did I find? Never, on one single occasion, disregard of any need; but, sometimes, delay before supplying it. In the case of "a woman of Canaan" who cried unto Him "to have mercy upon her daughter," He answered her not a word. The cries of the "two blind men" at Jericho had caused "the multitude" to rebuke them that "they should hold their peace," before Jesus called them.

"Jesus went with" Jairus to heal his little daughter, but she had expired, and his faith was tested, while that of another was proved. The blind man at Bethsaida was "led out of the town" in his blindness, whereas those that had brought him, had besought Christ but "to touch him." The father of the "only child" in the 9th of Luke said "the devil throw him down, and tare him as he was yet a-coming" to Jesus. The nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum, was tried, although he had told the Lord his son was "at the point of death." Even after a message had come from those three at Bethany whom the Saviour "loved," "He abode two days still in the same place where He was:" and we know that when He reached the town, Lazarus had died four days before.

Now the lesson which we should learn from Christ's delaying to perform all these miracles, we are also taught in three parables; see Luke xi. xv. xviii., and again in the 2nd of John, where the Virgin's making known the need of more wine met with that mysterious reply, that in no wise daunted her faith. With such promises as Matt. vii. 7, and Luke xvii. 6, and John xiv. 13, and xvi. 23, who would not have "faith"?

But then that is not sufficient. Over and over again in the Epistles the word is coupled with "patience." Look at Heb. vi. 12; x. 36; xi. 13; and Rev. xiii. 10.

There are evidently two chains to be used whenever we, going through the vale of misery, would use it for a well, and let down our buckets to be filled with water. Faith drops it down, but patience should draw it up again. If we attempt to use Faith for both purposes, the chain cannot bear the double tension, and will probably get worn out; certainly rusted with our frequent tears of disappointment. "In your patience possess ye your souls." It may be that we shall even "die in faith, not having received the promises," and yet never doubt that "All the promises of God in Him are yea, in Him Amen."

God grant that the light which has since then flooded my own soul, and seems strong enough to illuminate a whole lifetime, may also irradiate the clouds of others. L. E. Hilliard.

WORKSOP.—A successful Gospel Temperance Mission was brought to a close here on Monday week. The meetings during the ten days' Mission were crowded to excess. 1133 pledges and 1599 ribbons were taken. All sections of the Christian Church in the town were united in the work, and seldom has such a wave of blessing passed over the town. Jno. Jermyn, Hon. Sec.

"BIBLE FLOWER MISSION."—A worker in connection with this Mission writes from the Home of Industry, 60, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E.: The ladies meet at the "Home," and having received their flowers and texts, each go their separate way to the different hospitals and infirmaries and distribute the flowers as far as they will go. A flower given always opens the way to speak of a Saviour's love, and many friendless ones are touched by the feeling that some one thinks of them. Would more of our friends like to help in this work of love by sending flowers to reach us early on Wednesday mornings?

IN FOUR VERSES.

MY heart was very heavy, for my children cried for bread;
I wept to see my little ones go supperless to bed;
I listened for a footstep, as I'd often done before,
Waiting for a staggering man to stumble through the door:
But his step was firm and steady, and his eye was clear and true,
And on his ragged coat he wore a little bit of blue! Extract.

A CALL TO CHRISTIANS.

By CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

IN THREE VERSES.

(Reprinted from The Christian).

COME forward, Christians, young and old come join our ranks to-day!
Oh help us in our fearful fight against the tyrant's sway!
A cruel master he has proved to many in our land.
And now we hope to set them free; Oh, lend a helping hand!
We go not forth to rescue them in feeble human strenghth.
But trusting in our Saviour's power, we hope to win at length,
For he doth bless—ay, grandly bless—each effort that we make;
It matters not how small the deed, if done for His dear sake. Extract.

THE FEAR OF DEATH.

By D. L. MOODY.

Neatly printed on tinted paper, suitable for enclosing in letters

Price 2s. per 100.

"There are a great many of God's professed children who live in continual bondage, in the constant fear of death. I believe this is dishonouring to God. I believe that it is not His will to have one of His children live in fear for one moment. If you know the truth in Jesus, there need be no fear, there need be no dread, because death will only hasten you on to glory; and your names are already written in heaven."—Extract.

THE WHITE FIELDS OF ENGLAND.

An Entreaty to Communicants.

By REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? And who that reflects can fail to observe that the gross state of our large towns arises very much from their being grossly neglected by us communicants. Their sad state is patent to every observing foreigner whom business brings into the midst of us, and he naturally looks with contempt and abhorrence on what he styles our "Christianity."—Extract.

THIRD SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of MR. C. GODDARD, of MAIDENHEAD.

This patient, a colporteur, came first to Coombe-lodge on the 6th of June last year. His wife, when single, had realised great benefit from my treatment, which induced him to come. He had been subject to colds for years. In the December previous to his visit hæmorrhage had taken place; pains in the left side followed, with a recurrence of hæmorrhage in April. The expectoration was muco-purulent. He was in a very weak state. On examination the whole respiratory system was found to be in a feeble condition, with scattered patches in the lungs, denoting evident mischief.

The patient came again in August, decidedly improved. Correspondence by letter continued through the months of June, July, August, September, and November, each time there being favourable progress.

In the last letter, dated January 10 of the present year, Mr. Goddard writes:—

"I am happy to tell you I have been in the enjoyment of good health for now two months. I can take my preaching engagements without weariness. Life and labour for Jesus once more is joy and gladness. My heart is full of gratitude to God. May He spare your valuable life for many years. As a proof I am doing all I can to persuade others to come to you, you are at liberty to use this as you see fit.

"1, Union-road, Castle-hill, Maidenhead." Ever yours gratefully, "C. GODDARD.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

A BROKEN HEAD versus A BROKEN HEART.

There is an anecdote told of Whitefield when at Exeter, where his preaching provoked in a man who was present such an extraordinary degree of anger that on the next occasion he loaded his pockets with stones, with the intention of injuring him; but instead of doing so he listened, and after the sermon was finished he went up to the preacher, and said to him, "Sir, I came here to hear you this day with a view to break your head, but the Spirit of God has given me a broken heart"! and his after-life proved this to have been a case of real conversion. MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS.

(With Illustrations).

A Complete and Authentic Account of the Lives, Sufferings, and Triumphant Deaths of Primitive and Protestant Martyrs in all parts of the World.

At a time like the present, when, in Great Britain, Popery and its evil progeny Ritualism are both insidiously and openly seeking to gain the supremacy, it is necessary to the well-being of our country that the story of "FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS" should be regarded as an essential part of the education of our children.

From these pages we can learn what Popery has been in the past, even in our own land; and from the record of the past we can fairly judge as to what it would be if again in the ascendant.

The issue of the present edition at a low price and in the convenient form of MONTHLY PARTS (16 parts at 6d. each), places this valued book within the reach of almost every one.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION. Office: 56, Haymarket, London, S.W. This Society is employing 120 Scripture Readers amongst the poor and destitute of London. They go from house to house, and from room to room, reading the Word of God, pressing its precious truths on men's acceptance, pleading with God in prayer for a blessing, and directing all with whom they come in contact to Jesus the Saviour of Sinners. We want to multiply Scripture Readers, for nothing, we believe, can supply the place of house-to-house visitation, and as surely bring the Word of God into immediate contact with individual souls. Funds are urgently needed, and will be thankfully received by either of the undernamed: MARCUS RAINSFORD, Clerical Secretary; J. RODDAM TATE, Lay Secretary; or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that

DECISION OF CHARACTER

ENCOURAGING TESTIMONY

For Invalids and Chronic Sufferers.

Mr. THOS. SCUPHAM, Hundleby, near Spilsby, writes:—

"Your treatment has had a wonderful effect on my constitution: I no longer feel languid in the morning, but rise with cheerfulness, and I shall be indebted to you, under the blessing of God, for complete recovery from this constitutional weakness."

REV. G. V. CHICHESTER, WOTTON RECTORY, DORKING.

"January 3rd, 1877.—My mind and body being more active and vigorous than when I last saw you, it is only fair to acquaint you how remarkable my improvement under your system has been.

"I am convinced, from many years of suffering, that for such cases ordinary medical science can supply no relief. In nervous derangements its agents can only stand aside and commiserate you, and one cannot blame them. Their control of disease stops at those phases of nervous misery which are the more to be compassionated, because the hardest to bear, unapparent in their source, and, therefore, more distressing than many organic diseases. When baffled, it would seem as if they often gave the poor sufferer "a bad name" by representing him as fanciful and hypochondriacal, as if imaginary pain (so-called) were not as real and as distressing as organic pain. No one, surely, however romantic, would voluntarily indulge in flights of imagination which bring down suffering on himself. Nervous misery must, therefore, have some real and physical cause.

"We know not what it is that constitutes the mysterious but ever active spring and momentum of organic life; what it is that gives the body the vital power necessary to the assimilation of food; for food is only as oil to machinery, the motive power in the body being represented by the steam in the engine; and if we find from results that Magnetism supplies to the system that deeper pre-existent vital energy and motive power which does not seem obtainable from food, air, exercise, or medicine, our belief in its efficacy is not a matter of unreasoning faith, but of palpable fact and sight. This, I think, is just reasoning, but if I am under a delusion, it is a happy one, and I have no wish to be aroused from it while it lasts."

On January 7, 1883, he writes:—

"I need only add that I have never ceased to retain (and retain increasingly) the deepest respect and gratitude towards you as an earnest and self-denying Christian, and as a philanthropist whose name, in my judgment, ranks with the highest and noblest names of the day. Where efforts (persistent efforts) to mitigate in some measure the almost universal misery of a groaning creation, are the offspring of faith in a Saviour, and love to God (a faith which is certainly in your case proved by works), I do not feel that I can use too strong words to express my Christian love, and best wishes, and prayers for your great success, in 'healing the sores of the land,' and for your highest happiness and reward, both in time and in eternity.

"Pray accept my New Year's greetings, and believe me, sincerely yours,

"George V. Chichester."

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.

OLD TESTAMENT REVISION: A Handbook for English Readers. By Alexander Roberts, D.D., Member of the New Testament Company of Revisers, Author of "Companion to the Revised New Testament," &c.

The Author says:—"It seems desirable, in view of the approaching publication of the Revised Version of the Old Testament, to furnish, in popular form, some information on interesting and important points connected with that portion of Scripture. My object in the present work has been to present, in easy, untechnical language, a considerable amount of general information, which may enable ordinary English readers to peruse with greater interest and intelligence the Scriptures of the Old Testament, when these are set before them in the Revised Version. I have embodied in the following pages a number of what appear to me improved translations of Old Testament passages."

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES.

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

CHAP. X.—SPOILS SECURED.

"I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—ACTS xx. 35.

"When faithless ones forsake thy wing,
Be it vouchsafed Thee still to see
Thy true, fond nurslings closer cling,
Cling closer to their Lord and thee."

EACH scholar in the senior classes of the Sabbath-school may be looked upon as part of the spoils of the Church. It is something to have kept these scholars so long. They have been kept in spite of the diligent and repeated attempts of the Evil One to displace them. Each represents the legitimate fruit of much bestowal of thought and painstaking.

And so also must we regard the converts of the Churches. They have been fairly won from the enemy. Each convert embodies the results of an amount of self-denying labour on the part of the Lord's people. They are, consequently, lovely and precious in our eyes, and are quite worthy of a new expenditure.

But much of this immortal spoil is not permanently secured. The confessions of those who possess the secrets of the different religious bodies are painful in the extreme. There is no denomination but seems to think that its are the greatest of all. A minister rises up among his brethren, and says, "We had a nice work some six months ago among the families belonging to our Church, but, to my surprise and grief, I cannot discern much remnant of it now." And then a second minister has his say: "I don't marvel at your being surprised. Had the work been among the uneducated and the mentally stupid I could have understood it, for I have invariably found that those who have known little about religion most easily part with their impressions of truth." These lamentations in Church circles are made more shrill by what is known of the perishing multitudes. House to house visitation exposes troublous facts. Large numbers of those who are now "dead in trespasses and sins" were once closely connected with religion. Men and women are come upon who are the offspring of homes of piety, whose relatives even at this present are well-known religionists, but who themselves are alive only to iniquity. How families split asunder!

"From the same father's side,
From the same mother's knee;
One to long darkness and the frozen tide,
One to the crystal sea."

Again and again is the visitor told that the person he has in hand was once in some famous Sabbath school, and enjoyed the teaching of one of the upper classes there. And, oftener than they care to tell, our town missionaries hear that such and such an individual was in time past a member of the Church, but is now neglectful of everything that is good.

Some of the causes of all this are on the surface. The habit—sometimes hereditary—of excessive drinking; early or unhappy marriages; misfortunes in business; sudden falls by reason of an alliance between an evil unsuspected within, and a temptation unexpected without; the wrong practices of another with whom the earthly lot is linked; past betrayal by some who wore the garb of godliness. From these and other causes, much of our prized spoil is lost. Our strength is shown in that we gain so much, our weakness in that we allow to be torn from us so large a portion of ourg ains. How are we to

FENCE ABOUT OUR YOUNG PEOPLE?

How is "holy childhood" to be trained into holier manhood and womanhood? How is negative purity to receive its complement of positive obedience? "These fragile beginnings of a mighty end" are placed in charge of the Churches. God would have them ever feeding among the lilies. How can we work with God so as to make sure of success in conserving the young people to rectitude?

Their true position should be detected and action taken accordingly. Toward the termination of the days of scholarhood the youths and maidens have reached a transition stage. They are ever wakening up to new thoughts. Life then has to them most of romance and least of stern realness about it. O mystery! that in the days of least experience and discernment, sin should be permitted to look most attractive; and these unsophisticated ones most easily beguiled. A little thing now will set the young lives adrift. Because they desire to bribe the conscience with a plausible reason for absence from the class, they are very ready to take offence. Sunday walks with members of the opposite sex are pleasanter than the services of the sanctuary. There are skilful purveyors of amusements after which the carnal mind feels a hankering. The baits of ill are voraciously taken. The elder scholars are soon seen to be more easily lost than regained.

THE FIRST SYMPTOMS OF RESTLESSNESS

should be noted, and counteractive measures taken at once. The next year or two make up the crucial time. Patience manifested now will bear rich fruit afterward in the souls of these scholars thus beset. Some who have, underneath, the most vigorous tendency toward righteousness, are most mischievous and provoking. Fuller says, "A tenant who knows he has to be ousted sometimes does all the harm he can before he is forced to depart, and so it is with Satan and the soul." I have known many a time that the first to present themselves for instruction during a special work of God have been scholars of both sexes whose conduct for months has been of the naughtiest character when teaching-hour came. To bear with such under the hope that a good process is going on within is most needful. For the young are *de*structive often before they commence being *con*structive. Severity might breed resentment, and resentment impel toward ruin.

IF AMUSEMENTS ARE PROVIDED

they must be furnished providently and prayerfully. The elder boyhood and girlhood can hardly be too much reminded of the value of time, of the fact that recreation is only right as it prepares for the more effective performance of duty, and that this world is not constituted only for purposes of human pleasure. Without this, the amusements in chess-room, cricket-field, and conversazione will but defeat their own end. To do without them, if possible, is the wiser course; but, if there is no avoiding them, let restrictions be applied with firm hand. If not, the whole matter will be like the letting out of water.

Officials and teachers can scarcely say too much to their young charges about

THE HABIT OF READING.

The "how" and the "what" of reading may be dilated upon. A large-hearted care should be shown towards the library and its young patrons. If possible, let some skilled Christians be delegated as "tasters" of books. This habit will be a strong safeguard.

If the "commonwealth" feeling prevail, all the better. The schools in which this is most marked are usually the most prosperous. "Our school, in whose counsels I have some share, and to whose success I am bound to contribute," is a most helpful idea.

But, above all, there must be distinctness of object before the workers. Preachers and teachers work under much the same conditions, and are exposed to much the same dangers, and this peril of losing definiteness is common to both. The authorities and subordinates who say they dare rest at nothing short of the true religious decision of the young people, are truly to be admired and copied.

And yet, there are so many teaching who are either themselves unconverted, or are forgetful of their solemn accountability to God for the souls under their trust. Prayer-meetings for teachers only, ministerial addresses to them, pamphlets bearing on their work spread amongst them, will not be more than sufficient for their great need.

While we can scarcely be too anxious, we may be over-impatient after these desirable results. There is a tendency in some schools to force on the work of the Holy Spirit. He is not accustomed to hurry, nor will He be hurried by us. There is a broad difference between quickness and hurry. The fruit may be plucked before it is ripe. Our duty is to work with that Spirit, and to act according as we perceive the tokens of the inward operation. The after-history of is too often quite painful. Much was made of them at the time, but, somehow, the eventualities are not what we could wish. This arises mainly from some zealous toilers not having been content to wait as well as to labour.

But, if the requisite care, love, patience, be provided, the hemorrhage from the schools will be greatly lessened. Some will be converted, who, if not turned round in early life, never would be at all. Circumstances being propitious, and the right turn being taken, there will be henceforth no swerving, however long the pilgrimage may be.

(To be concluded in our next.)

ST. BRIDE'S YOUTHS' INSTITUTE.—The first annual meeting of the St. Bride's Youths' Institute, Shoe-lane, Fleet-street, was held last week, Alderman Sir Robert W. Carden, M.P., occupying the chair. The report was read by the secretary, and showed that during the year 636 youths working in the district had joined and left the institute. Of these about 160 might be looked upon as permanent members. A large and comfortable reading-room had been provided, and evening classes were held. A savings bank had also been started, in which about £20 had been deposited. A register of situations wanted by members was kept, and in this way several had been enabled to obtain employment. The subscriptions were not yet enough to cover the expenses, about £100 a year more being required to successfully carry on the work.

PREACHING "THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

III.

LET us now view the subject of Pract cal Repentance as affected by the truth of "the Kingdom of God."

Repent ye: "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The Lord Jesus and John the Baptist did not simply enjoin repentance. They stated also as a powerful reason this word of knowledge, "the kingdom of God is at hand" (Matt. iii. 2; Mark i. 15).

Our minds incline to receive truth in portions; yet let us remember that portions are parts of a whole, and they should be so regarded. No part is isolated in a living structure. All is attached. So with the words of this life. One portion touches, leads on to, and into another, and involves and is affected by another. "The sufferings unto Christ and the glories that should follow them," are in one rainbow arc; and our hearts are most truly affected when they are viewed simultaneously. The saved sinner is contrite, yet also he rejoices. Paul charged Timothy in the sight of God and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the quick and the dead, and by "his appearing and his kingdom." The latter twofold events are linked together. Let us hold them in like manner.

Observe also in the third chapter of John, that the Lord Jesus not only declared the necessity of the new birth as a portion of truth, but He taught it as a necessary preliminary to seeing and entering "the Kingdom of God." Not only were sick persons to be healed, but they were to be informed that it was significant of the blessings of the Kingdom. Say unto them, "the Kingdom of God" is come nigh unto you. The Kingdom so filled the mind of the Lord Jesus, that events were instantly spoken of in connection with it. The reason given (doubtless many other tender and loving ones existed) to the disciples why they were to suffer the little children to come unto Him, and were not to forbid them, is, "for of such is the kingdom of God." And when the Lord Jesus, in the Spirit of God, cast out demons, that occurrence was not circumscribed in its importance within itself, but then "the kingdom of God" came, as regards its feature of deliverance from satanic power. Satan's partial overthrow was a sign and commencement of the final overthrow; and man's deliverance then was a sign of the believer's full emancipation.

If, then, to our understanding of repentance for our sins we are adding the thought of repentance with reference to an approaching kingdom, and are thus influenced by the powers of the world to come, the important subject of repentance is found to be very wide, and to call loudly for considerable diligence in giving heed to what is necessary. We have not only to be sorry for sin, but to change, and to be changed by God, in everything, whether in spirit, knowledge, motive, thought, or conduct, which is unsuitable to that kingdom of righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit, which is about to be established in power and glory, and whose essential principle is, that except your righteousness shall exceed that of the scribes and pharisees ye shall in no wise enter into "the kingdom of heaven." A repenting Christian is not indeed to pass his days in bitterness of spirit, remorse, and dread, and with a sense of distance from God. Far otherwise. Genuine repentance, under the shelter of forgiving love, does not dispirit. Surely happy love and a kindling eye, and neither moroseness nor dejection, were seen in Zaccheus as he stood forth and declared his determination that the Lord should not be reproached through having him for a disciple, whatever he had been before. Such heartiness is refreshing, and a stimulating example. Practical repentance, truly viewed, becomes something far beyond an act of sorrow, though including that; while as to time, seeing that we should "do works meet for repentance," this is not a matter of an hour or a day. It must necessarily be lifelong. It is to be a fruitful life of a saved sinner, now also a child of God, ever appropriate to, and evidencing the change wrought in him by the grace of God.

Let me now point out how John the Baptist exercised his gift of definite exhortation in regard to repentance as a preparation for the kingdom. Sorrow for sin there should be, must be, will be; but it is not mentioned now; as "the practical life," the fruit of repentance, is the point. What shall we do then?

First, let us grasp the circumstances. John has been awakening the listeners by words of truth from earnest lips and a warm heart. The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Bad trees will be cut down. The axe is placed ready even now. God has a garner. Be encouraged! His wheat shall be safely housed. There is a time of winnowing. Chaff shall be burnt up. Be warned! The wicked will certainly be overthrown. The coming One will separate. He will thoroughly purge his floor. Do some profess to flee from the wrath to come, and yet continue to live the same as before? Then, to such, he says: Ye offspring of vipers, who warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Prepare, and be prepared. Change and be changed in heart, in word, in conduct. There is no neutrality allowed in a Kingdom!

Oh, for more Elijahs, Jonahs, and Johns, and John Wesleys, and George Whitefields! Men are stirred up by speakers who will proclaim like that. Let us be willing so to speak, if called of God. "What shall we do then," became the cry? What is the answer? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ"? No my friends, not only this. I repeat, the Apostles were not always saying, Believe. Neither the immediate forerunner nor the immediate followers of the Lord preached so. We are not now considering how he who is asking the way of salvation should be guided, but the way to repent practically, as a preparation for the Kingdom. Let different truths be put into their appropriate places. John then replied very clearly; and the principle embodied in the practice taught will apply to us all, and in all times of this present age. The people had listened, had felt, were moved, and asked, "What then must we do?" What must we do in order that we may carry out that which you aver to be a necessary preparation for the kingdom? "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath food, let him do likewise." In principle this: Be a kind brother amongst men. Have we been leading hard, stingy, selfish lives, regardless of the need, good, and happiness of others? Now reverse this: Consider other persons; think of, care for, their sorrows and their joys; the need of the bereaved, the widow, the fatherless, the prisoner, the desolate, the poor, the aged, the sorrowful, the depressed, the waifs and strays, the maimed, the deformed, the corrupted, the untaught, the unevangelized, and all that are oppressed of the devil; and that, not by deputy only, but personally; nor be satisfied by parting with superfluities, but truly give.

"Master" (Teacher, master of good instruction, for publicans recognise that), "what must we, renters of Roman taxes, do?" "Extort no more than that which is appointed you." In principle this: Have we acted unrighteously in our occupations, adulterating our goods, charging first rate prices for second rate articles? Do we extract from our customers, clients, patients, servants, clerks, shopmen, more than is fair? Do we exhaust the strength of youth and young women by oppressive or inconsiderate service? Now stop, and become considerate and fair-dealing persons. We may remember that Zaccheus was ready to make restitution also.

And the soldiers asked, "And we, what must we do?" "Do violence to no man, neither exact wrongfully, and (hardest of all) be content with your wages." Some, perhaps, would have advised: "Leave the army the first opportunity." But no; glorify God where you are, in your daily calling. In principle the exhortation to the soldiers was, and to us is: You also become changed, and show yourselves changed men. Are you subordinates, are you dissatisfied, can you oppress, can you easily take things which do not belong to you? Now do not act so; do not seek to improve your means, though short, by wrong actions. Are there sins customary in particular classes of society? Follow not a multitude to do evil. Stand out for God, and serve Him with all good fidelity, and man also.

In other words, let each one consider himself, his ways, his past life, his sins, his failings, his shortcomings, and seek a change of mind and heart; reverse all evil, and hard, unloving, and sinful courses; and seek to possess and show forth the character of Christ, who baptizes with the Holy Spirit; and do these things, not merely because it is right, but as our own practical acts of repentance, and as part of our own preparation for the kingdom of God.

By placing the truths preached in the above discourses in the Acts of the Apostles, and the heart-stirring, definite exhortations together, it is seen how hearers are, or ought to be, affected and acted upon. First, they are enlightened; second, they taste of the heavenly gift; third, they are made partakers of the Holy Spirit (I assume in his convicting operations); fourth, they taste the good word of God; and fifth, they taste the powers of the age to come. Thus blessed, and thus tasting, then by the truths so preached, if adhered to, God effects by his Spirit a real conversion. Until adhered to, and acted upon, the soul is barren; or at best we are disciples, but not what the Scriptures call "disciples indeed," "truly my disciples." Whether those five results, and the ultimate result, are sought by us, for ourselves, and as the fruit of our labours, may be a good, wholesome inquiry, from which no true-hearted labourer in the Gospel need flinch, though the question may become a means of quickening, and lead to more intelligent service.

In conclusion, when once the truth of "the kingdom" has become well-established in the mind, and has become heart knowledge (for it is the eyes of the heart which thoroughly see, Eph. i. 18), all the other truths of Scripture will, by degrees, range themselves in regard to that, and thus fall into their appropriate places. Its bearing on the Church, on the nation of Israel, on the nations generally, will all duly appear.

Of course this paper does not attempt to go into the fulness of the subject. It is not a treatise. I have taken a few discourses, and have endeavoured to note accurately and suggestively an outline of them, so as to evolve the principle and mode of Apostolic evangelization. I need scarcely remark that my paper does not refer to a stated ministry to constant hearers, but to evangelizing a miscellaneous audience.

Words would fail to describe the intense interest which sometimes fills a Christian mind, when, through the Holy Spirit, "the Kingdom" is seen in power. What a range of blessedness! The glory of God and of Christ; the brightness, grandeur, and dignity of the kingdom; its resurrection joys and spiritual powers; its happiness, security, righteousness, purity, holiness, peace, worship, service; the fellowship unhindered with the Lord Himself, and the blessed companionship of an entire family of faith; the reunion with those who have gone before; the full endowments of the Holy Spirit adorning the universal Church; the Father's name written on our foreheads (his character no longer obscured, but presented in our very look); the whole, the fruit to us of his love and toil, humiliation, obedience, and sufferings, who hath set us free and purchased us to Himself with his own blood.

Soon He will come in the glory of the Father with his angels; and his reward is with Him, to render to each man according as his work is. And there shall be a voice, as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, "Hallelujah! for the Lord our God the Almighty reigneth."

God's kingdom shall come, not within only, but in outward glory, majesty, and beauty. His will shall be done, as in heaven so on earth. "All thy works shall praise Thee, and thy saints shall bless Thee." "For of Him, and through Him, and unto Him, are all things. To Him be the glory for ever. Amen."

May we walk worthily of God, who calleth us into "his own kingdom" and glory.

ENGLISHWOMEN IN PARIS.

DEAR SIR,—I should be glad to say a few words through the medium of your valuable paper about the Home for Governesses in Paris, at 22, Rue des Acacias, Avenue Carnot. Many English ladies going to Paris will be glad to know that they can find a comfortable home there, and a kind friend and adviser in Miss Pryde, the Principal, who takes a warm interest in those who apply to her. I passed three weeks at the Home, a short time ago, and was very happy there.

The Directress, a French lady, is most kind, and anxious to make those under her care as comfortable as possible. Good progress may be made with French, as it is the language spoken in the house, and the Directress gives an excellent lesson twice in the week. The terms are very moderate. It is desirable that this Home should be more generally known.

A new wing has lately been added, for the furnishing of which contributions would be thankfully received by Miss Pryde, 16, Rue de Tilsitt, Paris.—Yours truly, M. R.

Forest-hill, Feb. 26.

KINGSLAND GOSPEL MISSIONS.—The first anniversary of the Millwall branch of these Missions was held on Tuesday, Feb. 27, at the hall in Mellish-street. The public meeting was presided over by Mr. Edward E. Harris, of Eliot-park. The local evangelist stated that there were now over eighty members on the books, most of whom were the fruit of the Gospel efforts there during the twelve months. Earnest addresses and solemn appeals followed, by the superintendent of the Mission (Mr. W. Chorley), Messrs. Hopley, Luck, Hopkinson, Newborne, and others. The hall was very full, and plainly demonstrated the necessity for a larger and better ventilated building than the present, which the friends here are hoping in time to secure. The superintendent's address is 79, Norfolk-road, Islington, N.

For the Young.

TELLING JESUS.

DEAR SIR,—I send you the following simple, yet true, account of how a little friend of mine was set free from her load of sin.

Nelly, who had lately recovered from a dangerous illness, was out one day with her mother. As they were getting near home the mother noticed the child had been unusually silent for a time, and all at once she stood still and as if with a determined effort spoke thus: "Mama"—then a pause—"I prayed last night, mama." "Did you, dear; don't you always pray?" "Oh, yes, but I prayed a REAL prayer last night. I don't think I ever prayed a real prayer before."

Then the mother gradually drew from her the following: "I was lying awake last night such a long time, and was thinking how sinful I was. I thought of what a naughty girl I had been so often. I tried to reckon up all the bad things I had done, and they seemed such a lot that I tried to remember all I had done in one week, and there seemed such a heap piled up, and then I was sure I had not remembered them all. This made me so miserable, and I thought, What if Jesus had come for me when I was so ill? I was sure I could not have gone to heaven.

"Then I thought about Jesus coming to die for bad people, and that He had promised to forgive them; so I got out of bed and knelt down and tried to tell Jesus how bad I was, and that I could not remember all the sins of even one week, so I just asked Him to think of them all for me, every one, and then I waited to give Him time to think, and when I thought he had remembered them all, I asked Him to forgive them, and I am sure He did, mama, because He said he would, and I felt so happy. Then I got into bed, and did not feel a bit afraid of God any more."

That this true incident may encourage other little weary ones to take their burden of sin to Jesus as Nelly did, is the earnest prayer of Nelly's Friend.

AMONG THE YOUNG IN GLASGOW.

THIS work continues as interesting and encouraging as ever For the three last weeks the services have been held in the central district of the city, in Dr. Somerville's old church, a hallowed meeting place and fragrant to many with precious memories. This church, owing to the removal of the Anderston congregation westward, has been for some time closed, but recently it has been rented by the United Evangelistic Association for Gospel meetings, and this work was very appropriately commenced among the young.

For three evenings each week the old church was well occupied with young people, the average attendance being over a thousand. To hold a gathering like this is no easy task, and it was truly wonderful to see how, night after night, his hearers were now charmed and spell-bound, now moved and melted by the sympathetic and thrilling way in which Mr. MacKeith tells "the old, old story."

From "the children's friend," as Mr. MacKeith is now familiarly called in Glasgow, all workers among the young may learn valuable lessons. He combines tact with tenderness, firmness with feeling. Much in the speaker's favour to begin with is the clear, manly ring of his voice. By this he wins his way at once with the young. Now captivating them with graphic descriptions, again surprising and carrying them away with some well-known hymn, or with some Scripture text happily wedded to a familiar sacred air, and then closing with earnest appeal in clear and vivid sentences.

A special feature of the meetings is "Search the Scripture Exercise." One night over 600 Bibles were in use, and it was peculiarly refreshing to hear the rustle of the leaves—tiny fingers telling of eager hearts—then came a hush, and some little voice was heard giving out the truth. Speaker and hearer were thus knit together by the living, loving bond of the Word.

The most touching scene, however, is the quiet harvest time at the close, when groups of anxious inquirers are seen dotting the church all over. There were present each night many earnest workers—principally Sabbath-school teachers from neighbouring churches—and yet there were far too few for the inquirers. In conversation with these "early seekers" one was struck again and again by the eager interest and breathless attention with which they turned to the lamps and lights of the Word. The passport for each worker was the Bible in hand.

When at the close of the series Mr. MacKeith invited those who was quite sure that they had taken the Lord Jesus for their Saviour to meet in the hall, 280 responded; of these 111 were boys and 169 girls, ages of both sexes running from eight to nineteen years. Some grown-up people also professed to have received blessing. 539 of the young people joined the Daily Bible Reading Union.

Such meetings we gladly hail as the awakening of the Church to the power and privilege to be enjoyed by work among the young.

Let us pray that those to whom we owe so much in Glasgow may be upheld in this good work, and that these special services, having conversion as the aim, may be largely extended.

A Glasgow Minister.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

"When He was come near the city, He wept over it."

THERE is much in the state of society around us that calls for prayer, and that should lead to self examination on the part of God's children. On the one hand, never were so many prepared to listen to the Gospel, while, on the other hand, evil is more than ever active around us.

Surely there is a call to those who are redeemed by the blood of Christ to be more entirely consecrated to his service—to be vessels sanctified and meet for the Master's use. Let us therefore, laying aside all other considerations, unitedly gather in his name, and wait on Him for wisdom, grace, and power from on high.

All who love the Lord are invited to wait on Him at the Conference Hall, Eccleston-street (three minutes' walk from Victoria Station), on Tuesday, March 13, at 11 a.m., 3.30 p.m., and 7.30 p.m.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending March 17: March 11, Mark xii. 1-12; March 12, Mark xii. 13-27; March 13, Mark xii. 28-44; March 14, Mark xiii. 1-13; March 15, Mark xiii. 14-23; March 16, Mark xiii. 24-37; March 17, Mark xiv. 1-16.

THE SILVER WEDDING AT BERLIN.—In the year 1858 the Society had the honour of presenting through its President, Lord Shaftesbury, a Bible to the Princess Royal on her marriage; and last month its representatives were permitted to tender the Society's congratulations and good wishes to the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Germany, at the Palace in Berlin, on the 25th anniversary of that happy event. At the same time, a handsomely bound Bible with an inscription was presented as a memorial of the occasion. The deputation was cordially received by their Imperial Highnesses, who wished their thanks to be conveyed to Lord Shaftesbury and the committee for such a present on the occasion. After some inquiries as to the progress of Bible work in different lands, the Crown Prince stated that a Bible had been presented to him at the Society's stall during the Paris Exhibition in 1867, which had been his companion throughout the Franco-German war; and on first going to sea, his Highness's second son, Prince Henry, had begged the book from his father, that it might be his fellow-traveller upon the ocean.—Bible Society's Reporter.

"IN DEFENCE": MOSES AND CHRIST.*

II.

COMING to Exodus, the book of miracles, Dr. Paterson has something to say in reply to Hume's argument that "miracles are contrary to experience:"—

Is not that begging the whole question, taking for granted the very proposition that he professes to prove? Contrary to experience! To whose experience? Contrary to the experience of those who witnessed them? No. Contrary to the experience of Hume? Yes; but Hume's experience is simply the experience of an individual. Contrary to the experience of his generation? Yes; but that is the experience of one generation only, and proves nothing. . . . . One wonders how it comes to pass that conclusions based on such shallow reasonings could have passed muster as they did for a time. There is surely something gravely amiss when our professed men of reason allowed themselves to be hoodwinked and led astray by such arguments as these.

But we gladly follow our guide beyond the outposts, and mark how much there is to contend for, and how rich the banquet is which is spread for them who will enter in by faith. Speaking of the Passover, he remarks:—

It has been well said that this clear type of redemption presents a profound thought which we should do well to keep before our minds, and that is, that it is not the redeemed one but God who sees the blood. The Israelites could not see the blood if they were shut inside, as they were, by Divine command. So the Lord God does not say, "when you see the blood," but "when I see the blood I will pass over you." What does this suggest? May it mean that it is not my estimate of the blood—whether the blood of the passover lamb in Egypt, or the antitypical blood of God's Lamb on Calvary—it is not my estimate of the blood that is my security, it is not my knowledge of the value and full significance of that blood, but it is God's own knowledge of the blood upon which my security rests? I do not know the value of the precious blood of Christ—thank God I do know something about it—but my security rests not on my knowledge, but upon God's estimate of the value of the blood. "When I see the blood I will pass over you;" upon that declaration rests our security in God's presence, though that presence be in judgment.

The most interesting chapter is that on Leviticus. The theme of the middle book of the Pentateuch is "Worship":—

As in Exodus we have deliverance through the blood, so in Leviticus we have access by the blood. And it is in access to God that we enjoy the privilege of worship. I take the words in the eleventh of the seventeenth chapter as really the key-note of the whole book, and as the key-stone of the whole method of access to God. They reveal the foundation on which worship rests, a foundation stable and sure, approved by our Maker and Redeemer Himself. What words these are! "I have given you the blood upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls." "I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement by the life." Blood is the primal, fundamental demand of God in all the approaches of man unto Himself. Many do not apprehend this nowadays, they think they can approach God in ways of their own devising without blood. There seems to be nothing so distasteful to the natural and unrenewed man as the idea involved in the shedding of blood. "If we have any self-respect"—so men talk—"we abhor the very idea of sacrificial blood. Why should we not go to God in fairer, nobler terms? Surely we are quite competent to deal directly with God, to have friendship with Him, without any such thing as the death of an innocent victim?" We are unwilling to admit any necessity for death.

Such is the pride of our hearts, we imagine we can dictate to God, and have fellowship with Him in our own way. God's primal demand is death, not life; God's primal statement is "The blood, which is the life, must be poured out, and then I can speak with you." Judgment must take place before there can be mercy. There can be no intercourse between God and man save that which is based on judgment executed and sin put away; there can be no communion or fellowship unless judgment precede mercy. So it is in Exodus, judgment executed, then deliverance; and so it is in Leviticus, judgment, then ministry; and so it is with the last great work of deliverance wrought at Calvary—judgment, then deliverance and ministry."

Mark the precise words used: "I HAVE GIVEN YOU THE BLOOD," not you have given it Me. The blood is God-given; I have no right to kill an animal any more than I have to kill a man. I have no right to take away life—life belongs to God alone. . . . There is a distinction intensely broad and deep between heathenish notions of sacrifice and the teaching of Scripture. The heathenish notion is, that I have freedom of action, and that the animal which is my own I may slay if I choose and bring as my offering. . . . But God says, "I have given you the blood." It is God's divine gift to man, and it sets forth that divine sacrifice which in his own body the Lord Jesus Christ offered in the fulness of time for my sin.

The chapter on "Numbers—Pilgrimage," is marked by the same spiritual insight:—

We find three leading thoughts running throughout the whole book—warfare has the most prominent place—war, work, and walk. The warriors are first numbered, separated to their places, and their duties assigned them; then we find the workers, the Levites, whose duty it is to bear the tabernacle with its furniture in the journey throughout the desert, designated, and their duties determined; then follows the record, containing the incidents of the journey itself, and the lessons to be gained by us from the people's conduct, and from God's dealings with them.

In regard to the most prominent of these matters—the wars, objections have been loudly urged and pleas have been advanced in reply that have made us as much afraid of our friends as of our foes. The extermination to which certain nations were doomed has been apologised for as simply in keeping with the cruel and savage customs of the age. Dr. Paterson's attitude towards this mode of defence is marked by his usual honesty and strong common sense:—

I unhesitatingly dismiss all such arguments of a palliating character as worthless and as illusory in the treatment of the record. Why? Because I am distinctly informed that the wars were not wars of the Jews at all, but the wars of Jehovah, and the method pursued was the distinct method inculcated by God. Thus, to speak humanly, if there be any responsibility at all, it must rest upon God Himself, and not on the men, who were but the instruments in his hand.

We can readily understand that those who were thus made the instruments of vengeance against sin would be themselves deeply impressed with the evil of such sin. They would learn that the just and holy God must punish evil wherever He finds it; that He must smite, and cannot spare. . . . . Further, God would teach them that they had bound themselves to Him by this solemn covenant of blood to have no peace with evil so long as they lived. They committed themselves in this great conflict to a perpetual holy war. They identified themselves with Him in his righteous judgment. Hence thoroughness in waging the war of the Lord is the lesson which comes to us most specially from this old Book. We must be embittered and pitiless against all sin. No matter how dear it may be, we must cast it off from us; no matter how useful it may be to us in a worldly point of view, no matter how intimate and personal—even if it be as the right hand and the right eye—it must be cut off; it must be exterminated without pity; if we suffer it to remain, it will prove a source of weakness, a source of pollution.

This chapter contains an able reply to the argument for a post-Mosaic authorship, based upon the non-observance of the laws of the Pentateuch. The same argument, as has been well remarked, would prove that even the ten commandments were not given by Moses. We have room only for a glance at the concluding section of the book, that, namely, which deals with Deuteronomy. The inspiration of the last book of Moses is abundantly proved by its prophetic character:—

You may assign to it the latest date you please, even the days of Josiah instead of Moses, yet it still preserves its character as a book of prophecy, inasmuch as it predicts the curse, which on account of disobedience came on Israel in later days. These prophecies are so clear and exact that we are compelled to come to the conclusion that the book is prophetic.

That it belongs to Mosaic times is proved by the representation it gives of the Egypt of the period, and the scenes through which the Israelites wandered. A picture so undeviating in its faithfulness, no writer of later times could have presented.

In all such cases, sooner or later, something is discovered, like a recent watermark on a document the contents of which claim to be of considerable age, by which the writing is proved to belong to a later date than is claimed by the writer. When our wisest and cleverest writers have attempted thus to rehabilitate former times, they have scarcely ever failed to betray their modernness of thought and knowledge.

The character of Deuteronomy is as distinctly marked as that of the others: its key-note is obedience. This suggests another argument for the Mosaic authorship and the inspiration of the Pentateuch. The five books are links in one chain, they are steps in the accomplishment of one plan.

There is a very close and vital connection between the various books of the Pentateuch, a connection which serves at least to indicate the fact that they are charged with a purpose, and that this purpose is furthered by their respective positions. In Genesis we have the beginnings and the first man. Correspondent thereto we find elsewhere the Second Man, the Lord from heaven, who maketh all things new, and who is the Firstbegotten from the dead. In Exodus, we have deliverance connected with the blood-sprinkling. Corresponding to this we find a later revelation . . . . the blood of Him who is our Passover Lamb, sheltered by which we are safe from the destroying angel in our exodus from the house of our former bondage. In Leviticus, there is arrangement for priesthood and access unto God. Corresponding thereto we recognise the Great High Priest of our profession; who having passed into the heavens is now in the presence of God for us, and who will come the second time without sin unto salvation. In the book of Numbers we have the story of the guidance of the redeemed people by the pillar of cloud and fire all through the wilderness; and in the fulness of time God sends the Great Shepherd of the sheep who goeth before his sheep, and who leadeth his own to the heavenly Zion. In this book (Deuteronomy) we find a full and firm demand for the obedience of a redeemed people; in the Gospel-story we find that demand met and measured by Him who was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

We would express our indebtedness to the author of "In Defence" for a book which we have read with so much pleasure, and which, we trust, will meet with the reception it so well deserves.

* IN DEFENCE: THE EARLIER SCRIPTURES. By H. SINCLAIR PATERSON, M.D. John F. Shaw & Co.

A CHURCH BURNT DOWN.—DEAR SIR,—We have had a sad check to a useful Mission work, in the total destruction of an iron Mission building, in the crowded district of Stratford, E. The centre of a splendid mothers' meeting of over 200 women, our parish prayer-meeting, communicants' meetings, temperance meetings, Sunday-school services, evangelistic and pastoral, in one short hour its usefulness was at an end. We are covered by insurance, but I am now being urged to build a brick Mission room in place of the iron one which has gone. Will your readers help me in this work? A very simple cheap building is all I wish for, but it must be large enough.—Your obedient servant, RAYMOND P. PELLY, Vicar of Stratford, E.

A GIRLS' CLUB IN EDINBURGH.—In the City of Edinburgh one benevolent lady has guaranteed the rent for a year of a suitable place in which to begin operations, and many others have shown their interest and sympathy. A room has been taken in the neighbourhood of John Knox's house in the High-street, and many experienced district workers have volunteered their services. This is an experiment in the right direction, and every right-thinking person must wish it all success. If only one girl should be rescued from a life of vice in a twelvemonth, surely the work would not be in vain. Suitable recreation or work will be provided by a trained staff of assistants. Those wishing to hear further regarding this movement in Edinburgh, or who may wish to contribute towards this object, might communicate with M. C., care of Miss Welsh, 23, Archibald-place, Edinburgh.—Christian Leader.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

At the close of Rev. S. Charlesworth's last letter in The Times were some drastic strictures on the book of "Orders and Regulations for the Salvation Army." To this Mr. Booth replied as follows:—

"I have great pleasure in submitting to you a copy of the book said to be secret, which has long ago been noticed in the public journals, has been sent by us to many of the clergy and dignitaries of Mr. Charlesworth's own Church, and was recommended to the perusal of his clergy by his lordship the Bishop of Durham, in his charge delivered on the 19th of December last. It was originally intended for cadets, but 2000 copies have been issued, and it never has been, in any such sense as Mr. Charlesworth suggests, secret. You will observe (1) that it is not a book of orders and regulations at all, but merely a catechism mainly as to doctrine; (2) that not one of the monstrous theories referred to by Mr. Charlesworth can be found in it."

We confess that we are unable to understand this reply. There are two books published at "Headquarters:" (1) "The Doctrines and Discipline;" (2) "The Orders and Regulations." The first is in the form of a catechism, the second is not. Mr. Charlesworth named the second, though he also referred to a passage in the first. It is the second which the Countess de Gasparin attacks; and, as we have been urged by correspondents at home and abroad to refer to it, we quote the following extracts, which, have already been printed in the North British Daily Mail. It marks by italics the passages to which it specially calls attention:—

EXTRACTS.

In the chapter "Searching out the Land," the officer is told—"Look to your own personal appearance. While it is to the interest of the service that you should appear anything but well-to-do, it is most important that you should impress people also as being careful, orderly, and business-like, and thoroughly practical." "Keep your business to yourself till you have completed some arrangement about which you can boast with good effect." When treating of "How to Choose a Town," it is said: "The fact that there are gentlemen likely to help with money is not unworthy of notice, if there be any large number, and proof of their having given freely before." In looking out for a building, "The only information we can rely on is that which you get by the use of your own eyes. An officer on this duty has no business with bashfulness or propriety. He should never wait to know whether he may go here or there. If a theatre door be open, walk in and inspect every part of the building until somebody objects. The remark that you want to see the manager, and that you are a perfect stranger groping your way, will generally satisfy everybody, and will prevent officials from treating you with disrespect. You can afford any quantity of apologies after you have got the information you wanted." "In talking with anyone on business, always observe the eyes closely, and take notice of tones of voice and manner generally. You will often learn more in this way in a second than from what the man says in an hour. It is only by such observation that you find out whether a man is really friendly or otherwise, and so know how to deal with him."

"Section 5.—Making Friends and Spreading Alarm.—As a rule, it is best not to let anyone know what buildings you are after in a town, because there is a risk of causing others to either seek them, or strive to prevent your getting them. If possible, avoid making inquiries of members of Churches; any way, you need not tell them what you are about.' It is a painful fact, that very often the ministers and officers of the Churches are bitterly opposed to our entering a town. Ministers will, for politeness and decency sake, assure you that they take the deepest interest in your blessed work getting money from the people. They will give if distance from them. But if, thrown off your guard by this, you inform them of your plans, they may either mislead you by advising against the buildings where you would best succeed, or even may go so far as to persuade people to refuse the use of the places you most need. Even if ever so well intentioned, their utter ignorance of the likely way to reach the people will be almost certain to lead you astray by any advice they give." "To make ministers and others engaged in Church work friendly, you must dwell upon the fact that we attack those who are quite outside their range, and that from the want of education amongst us, we cannot be in competition with them." "Should you meet with a gentleman 'interested in any good work,' do not be in too great a hurry to tell him all. Find out what his own views are, and dwell upon the points in which we meet them especially. If you find that he objects to some of our operations, 'female preaching,' &c., never argue, but dwell upon other points—above all, show the great results achieved by the means and persons actually raised up by the Army, and who, from their past history, cannot be expected to avoid errors in small things."

In the chapter, "How to Capture a Town," we have the following: "But no one is fit to capture a town, who is not able to invent special plans of his own. Under ordinary circumstances, a daring, reckless, determined commanding officer can make himself known to 30,000 people in less than three days.

Under the rubric, "How to get Collectors," we have this:—"It would be a good plan to announce at the first open-air services that those who wished to help in saving souls were invited to meet the officers at a certain place on the Saturday or the Sunday morning, and collectors could then be fixed on." The commanding officer is told that "He will lose no chance of conversing with persons of all sorts and getting them to prayer, and will thus discover their spiritual condition and notions on religious subjects. He will not seek ministers, but should he be thrown into their company he will talk to them in such a way as to discover their own spiritual condition and plans without saying more than is necessary as to his own." "The C. O. must always remember that everything done should be impressive, especially at the commencement of an attack like this. A large company of soldiers will itself be impressive, no matter how the men conduct themselves. They can shout and laugh, and display the most perfect freedom. But two or three will not be able to produce a deep impression without far more careful conduct. They must either make a very great show of energetic zeal, or else profound solemnity and intense conviction."

Mr. Booth does not seem to be partial to Christians generally. Here are some of his references to them—"Be careful in using Christians in any way to prevent their stiffening or injuring the service. Some forbearance must be shown to Christians in Salvation meetings at first, as they cannot know anything of our system; and, however sincere and earnest, need teaching before being severely dealt with. Do not be anxious as to Christians who come up to help at the beginning, praying at too great length or in a low, drawling tone. It will relieve you while dealing with the anxious, and help the meeting generally; whereas to snub them or sing them down will not merely tend to make enemies and lose the sympathy of people who may be very helpful, but will also tend to destroy the good influence in the meeting. The officers first appointed will frequently be persons who have been Christians for some time, or persons chosen chiefly because they are the only ones possible from education and position, at the time, though the C. O. does not at all intend that they should continue in office when converts are to be found in whom these trusts can be placed." "A field officer on taking command must always be firm in believing and declaring his Divine errand to the people, and therefore satisfied of his own value to them as a light." "The field officer is not obliged to follow any rule of other preachers, and need take no Scripture text." "He is at liberty to follow the guidance of the Holy Ghost and to give to the people as from God whatever he feels bound to tell them."

Under the section "Offerings" we have: "It is not well to make known the amount of offerings at first, and indeed at no time is it wise to publish them to the whole congregation. The mass of the people will never suspect real soldiers, and it is therefore foolish to assume any possibility of suspicion, or to make any statement with a view to meet it. There is not as a rule any need to refer to the fact of the field officers being paid; the expenses for rent, gas, &c., being seen by all to be heavy." To avoid getting into debt at first, "It is generally only necessary resolutely to set about —which perhaps they do, provided it keeps at a the work is properly done and they are properly pressed, except in rare cases. At the first, when receipts are low, is the time to get rents, &c., lowered. Tell proprietors, &c., exactly what offerings you have received, and press them to reconsider their price if you find them so agreeable as to be likely to value your permanent tenancy. Pressure put upon the people at the same time will frequently cause them to make presents of food as well as money, which a conscientious C. O. will of course consider in drawing any amount for salary. From the first the C. O. must explain to his men how we hate the penny-a-week system; and by showing a good example himself, he will ensure a handsome custom of weekly offerings."

Under the section "Management," we have: "Since the entire control and responsibility belongs to the C. O., it is never well to say or do anything likely to give men an idea that they have power, by vote or agitation of any kind, to produce changes of any sort or to prevent them. Therefore no society or members' meeting is ever to be held, such as has been usual in churches and at some of the older stations in the Army, and no divided vote is ever to be taken; that is, no opportunity is to be given for voting in opposition to the C. O. But a competent C. O. will in no way display his ability more than in the skill with which he will carry all his force heartily with him in every operation, causing them at times, if he judges it of value, even to vote for that which he wishes them to do."

The appeal of Miss Booth and Miss Charlesworth against their expulsion from Geneva has been rejected by the Council of State by a majority of one. On Monday next the second anniversary of the Army work on the Continent will be celebrated in Exeter Hall, when Miss Booth will narrate some of her experiences in France and Switzerland.

SOCIAL PURITY.

The following letter was lately addressed by the Bishop of Durham to the Editor of The Newcastle Daily Chronicle:—

Sir,—The visit of Miss Ellice Hopkins to these Northern counties has awakened in many consciences the sense of a strong responsibility, unrealised hitherto, on a question affecting more nearly than any other the physical, moral, and spiritual well-being of England. Those who have heard her appeals on behalf of her wronged and degraded sisters—her sisters and ours—feel that they cannot any longer let the matter rest where it is. Penitentiaries, reformatories, hospitals—these and other curative agencies, however benevolent in purpose and useful in operation, are quite powerless to stem the torrent of misery and vice.

We must strike at the root of the evil. A more wholesome and righteous public opinion must be created in the matter of social purity. Not until it is generally recognised that the man who has wrought a woman's degradation is at least as great an offender against society as the man who has robbed a till or the man who has forged a cheque —nay, a much greater, for he has done a far more irreparable wrong—not until society is prepared to visit such an offender with the severest social penalties, will there be any real change for the better. So long as the violation of purity is condoned in the one sex and visited with shame in the other, our unrighteousness and unmanliness must continue to work out its own terrible retribution. Is it beyond hope that by invoking widely the principle of association on a very simple religious basis, this end of creating a healthy public opinion may be attained?

The other day, at Bishop Auckland, at the close of a meeting addressed by Miss Hopkins, no fewer than 137 young men—nearly half the room—came forward and enrolled themselves in the ranks of a "White Cross Army," of which the object is the promotion of purity. The rules of our Auckland "White Cross Army" follow mainly the lines of similar associations already existing in Oxford and Cambridge. The central obligation is the pledge "to maintain the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women." The rules, generally, are very simple—so simple as to commend themselves. We hope by this organisation not only to emphasise right principles, but also to summon to their aid the moral force which is generated by pledged companionship and sympathy in a great cause.

At a meeting held at Durham the other day, a committee was appointed to consider whether any diocesan movement could not be organised. I trust that this may be found feasible. But meanwhile, I should be only too happy to learn that diocesan action had been anticipated by the formation of parochial associations like our Auckland "White Cross Army." Inspired by this hope, I venture to ask your insertion of this letter in columns which have a wide circulation throughout my diocese.—Yours, &c.,

Auckland Castle. J. B. Dunelm.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

NOTTINGHAM.

[FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

THE week begun on Sunday, Feb. 25, 1883, will be remembered in Nottingham as one of immense spiritual activity. Immense, but not altogether unusual activity, for God's work is carried on in Nottingham steadily and earnestly. Existing agencies for spreading Christianity are utilised to the full; and, more than this, strenuous efforts are being made in all directions to increase these agencies. In connection with the Church of England, a "Spiritual Aid and Church Extension Fund," the object of which will at once be apparent, has met with most substantial support, since its establishment, some few months ago. Dissenting chapels are being erected in many new localities, while the Salvation Army has been busily carrying on its work in the manner peculiar to it—it is hoped with the best results. Turning to another branch of Christian work, a recent "Blue Ribbon Army" campaign was brought to a most successful conclusion. Hence it will be seen that the Christians of Nottingham have not been behindhand: indeed, the recent visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey may be likened to the sowing of good seed upon ground which had been assiduously prepared.

THE NEED.

If, however, the spiritual advantages of Nottingham are great, so are its needs. "I am not dissatisfied with the means of work and the regular services and ordinances which God in his mercy grants us," said a leading local clergyman recently, "but if any man can say of Nottingham, 'we don't need such a work as that of Messrs. Moody and Sankey,' I can only say he must be wilfully blind; or I pity his ignorance." A great centre of commerce, there are in Nottingham, it is to be feared, hundreds of intelligent working men who are ready enough to welcome the numerous sceptical speakers and lecturers visiting the town from time to time; but to whom the interior of a place of worship is unexplored territory. Female labour, too, is extensively utilised in Nottingham; but the public streets afford painful evidence of the way in which many working girls spend their Sunday. Probably Nottingham is not one whit worse than other large towns. Probably there are many God-fearing men and women to be found among the lower classes of its inhabitants. But the fact remains—and it is not a pleasant one—that of a population of 200,000 only about 50,000, according to a recent religious census, are in the habit of attending a place of worship.

THE HELPERS.

To the Young Men's Christian Association belongs the credit of having brought Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Nottingham. About a year ago the idea was mooted. A large meeting of representative clergy of all denominations was convened. An invitation addressed by that meeting to the American evangelists was accepted, and a committee, similar in character to the meeting, was formed to carry on the work thus inaugurated. There has been a wonderful unanimity amongst Christians of all denominations in the endeavour to make the most of this rare opportunity.

The Rev. Canon Smith, who may be taken as representing the Evangelical section of the Established Church in Nottingham, has taken an especial interest in the movement. Some time before the arrival of the evangelists, he made an earnest appeal to his congregation to bring all their forces to the aid of the visitors; and his appeal has met with the readiest response, not only from within, but from without his own parish. Preaching in that practical, straightforward style which characterises his sermons, from the text, "Cry aloud, spare not," he said, "Were the Spirit of God to write of Nottingham, I am quite sure many of the sins of Isaiah's day would be put on record. I don't suppose for a moment our town is worse than others; but I am quite sure it is bad enough. There is as great need for crying aloud in Nottingham, to show people their sin as ever Isaiah had. God is sending such a voice to us." He warmly repudiated the charge brought against Messrs. Moody and Sankey of awakening undue excitement; but, more than this, he impressed upon his hearers that they could not hold aloof from the Mission. They must help or hinder it. If they were not inclined to help it, dare they incur the fearful responsibility of hindering it?

Canon Smith has not stood alone. Churchmen and Nonconformists have worked manfully together, and Mr. Moody has remarked on this fact with the utmost gratification: "We have received more assistance from the Church here than in almost any other place. The Church has been very well represented at our meetings. We had four canons on the platform yesterday—at least I saw four, and I don't know how many more were there."

THE MEETINGS.

Throughout the week preceding Messrs. Moody and Sankey's visit, public prayer-meetings were held to ask God's blessing on their work; and the interest in these meetings seemed to increase daily. It was originally intended to use a large wooden building, erected for a circus, and capable of seating some 3000 people; and the Albert Hall—of about the same capacity. But eventually it was decided to use the Albert Hall and the Marble Rink, a large and extremely handsome building in which in an inconceivably short space of time sitting accommodation for no fewer than 6000 persons was provided. At ten o'clock on Saturday night the Rink was filled by a busy crowd of pleasure-seekers. How different the crowd, which ten hours later, was pressing eagerly to the spot from all directions!

Eight o'clock on Sunday morning was the time fixed for the first meeting—an unusually early hour, and one at which it would not have been altogether surprising to find a small audience, considering that those to whom Mr. Moody purposed addressing himself are drawn mainly from the commercial classes, whose Saturday, the busiest day of all the week, often extends into the early Sabbath morning, and to whom the first day of the week is often a rest-day in the most literal of senses. But the hour was apparently the only one possible, seeing that Mr. Moody wished to address Christian workers without drawing them from their work; and the event proved that Mr. Moody's first meeting was destined to be as large as any of its successors. Long before eight o'clock the vast building was crowded to its utmost capacity by an audience as attentive as any which Mr. Moody has had in Nottingham—more thoroughly in sympathy with the work in which he is engaged. It was indeed a most impressive sight.

Nothing has more characterised Mr. Moody's addresses in Nottingham than the marked suitableness of each one for the particular occasion on which it has been delivered. He is not a great orator; there is no remarkable literary elegance about his sermons; and there is no straining after new readings of truths which are unalterable for all time. But there is an intense earnestness which has something infectious about it. There is a simple pathos which finds an echo in every heart. Mr. Moody has, in short, a wondrous power of sympathy with his audiences. He seems to gather at a glance what food is fitted for their spiritual needs; having hit upon the right vein, he sets to work with marvellous energy to exhaust it. He employs every legitimate means to bring home to his hearers the particular truth he is seeking to impart, calling to his aid full many an anecdote, all the more impressive since it is usually drawn from his own experience; all the more interesting from the fact that it is a fragment of the everyday life of his hearers—showing that his experience may be, nay, often has been, theirs.

The text which Mr. Moody had chosen was the first part of the twenty-fifth chapter of Exodus: "And the Lord spake unto Moses saying, speak unto the children of Israel that they may bring me an offering. And this is the offering which ye shall take of them: gold and silver and brass." The lesson which Mr. Moody drew from this was singularly appropriate. Perhaps there were Sunday-school teachers present who found their work easy enough. To them Mr. Moody had the warning to deliver, "Let that work be done in no perfunctory fashion. It is willing work the Master requires." But there were teachers present, too, whose ability was smaller, to whom the preparation of a lesson was a painful task, who found it hard to impart the knowledge they had with difficulty acquired. And to them he had many a kindly word of encouragement to offer. Let them do their work, and do it as best they might—that was all God required, and that was as acceptable in his sight as the very best. Only let each one realise the fact that he had something to do for God; and whatever the offering—purple or fine linen, gold, silver, or even brass, if it were brought with the heart, all would be well.

It is no new lesson this. The parable of the talents found an echo in the "To work is to pray" of a later day. Adam Bede learned that even good carpentry could be part of God's will—that form of God's will that most immediately concerned him. Diogenes Teufelsdrockh found, but the search was a long and painful one, that the divine command was, "Do the duty which lies nearest thee, which thou knowest to be a duty. Thy second duty will have become the dearer." Not new; but how true! "Do not waste your time longing for any better talent than God has given you. Only use that; use it diligently, and with a cheerful heart." That was what Mr. Moody had to say to Sunday-school teachers. Only for apathy had he hard words; and the man himself was the strongest possible protest against it. No man—not the most hypercritical of those critics to whose existence amongst his audience Mr. Moody humorously referred—could charge him with that.

SPEAKING TO NON-CHURCHGOERS.

Very different in character was the audience which two hours later was to be found in the Rink. But if any one meeting was more interesting than another during the whole Mission, it was this one. The invitation was addressed to those only who habitually absented themselves from a place of worship, and once more the vast building was crowded. Every care had been taken, by means of the judicious distribution of tickets, to get an audience really of non-churchgoers; and, so far as it was possible to judge from appearances, the effort had met with every success. The work of selecting the audience had extended over several weeks; and it had been by no means confined to the lowest classes. The preponderating element seemed, indeed, to consist of working people, whom Sunday morning often sees lounging about door ways or street corners—making for the country or for such places of public resort as are open to them as afternoon approaches, wending their way homewards, dust-stained and tired at nightfall, having spent their Sunday, if not viciously, at any rate with no profession of God's service.

Here and there might be caught a half cynical expression, a look of predetermination not to be impressed. But the hymns were sung with fervour; the prayers were followed reverently; the address was listened to with rapt attention. And with what marvellous tact did Mr. Moody once more adapt himself to his hearers! They were men and women who made no profession of religion—who, perchance had been brought up in fear of God, and had forsaken Him. How were they to be approached? Were they to be attracted or repelled? Mr. Moody's first words struck the key-note loud and clear. He had come to preach no Avenger, dealing destruction, as he said, with a "two-edged sword." He had come to preach that "God is love." Would they know how God loved? Did they remember how those mothers who had nursed them years ago had loved them?

Simple enough was the language in which Mr. Moody proceeded to enlarge upon the maternal love; but every word told. His anecdotes were as homely as might be, commonplace, perhaps, were they, reduced to the plain prose of a newspaper report; but they were potent to bring tears into the eyes of many women present. Telling over again the story of the Prodigal Son, and dwelling on the strength of that father's love, which could forgive and welcome even him, Mr. Moody cried that not even the love of father or mother could convey an idea of the Divine love. "God is love." A preacher had preached from that text every night for a week, and on the seventh confessed that he had utterly failed to tell how great that love was; that love which impelled God to give even his only begotten Son. The very greatness of the gift showed how great was the love. It was misfortune which evoked sympathy. It was the calamity of man's fall that had brought forth God's love for him. From the beginning of Genesis to the end of Revelation it was recorded that for the last six thousand years God had been telling sinners how much He loved them. Let that truth sink deep into the hearts of those present—it would bring them to God; it would turn their feet into the way that led to life everlasting.

"WOMEN ONLY."

Women only were invited to the afternoon meeting, but so well was the invitation responded to, that an overflow-meeting had to be held in a neighbouring church. "All things are delivered unto Me of my Father, and no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him. Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and you shall find rest unto your souls; for My yoke is easy and My burden is light." Upon these words of St. Matthew Mr. Moody based his discourse. The Sunday services were concluded by one for men only, in the evening, no fewer than 30,000 persons having visited the Rink during the day.

It is unnecessary to follow the work of the Mission during the next three days. Each meeting has been a counterpart of the others. At every one there has been the same eager crowd—eager, but not excited, for every meeting has been marked by extreme simplicity, and by intense earnestness. Now and then an interruption of the kind peculiar to the Salvation Army has been heard, but that is all.

The order of procedure each day has been as follows: At 3 p.m., a Bible meeting; at 7 p.m., a meeting for women only; at 8 p.m., a meeting for men only. The afternoon audiences have been drawn mainly from the middle classes, and the female element has preponderated slightly. These meetings have, however, been supplemented by many others—notably inquiry-meetings, at which a careful record of persons professing conversion has been taken with a view to urging them to attend some place of worship in the future.

Of course Mr. Sankey has taken a prominent part in all these meetings, and his singing has been listened to with the utmost pleasure. He has, moreover, received valuable assistance from a large trained choir. Mention must also be made of a children's meeting, conducted by Mr. E. W. Bliss, by whom the Mission was carried on several days after Messrs. Moody and Sankey had departed for Manchester.

ABOUT RESULTS.

Such, briefly, is the record of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's work in Nottingham. And its result? Mr. Moody, in the course of conversation, has said that the work "was very good for a short visit." But he added, "You see, we are only here four days; I wish it were longer. That is hardly long enough to accomplish all we should like to do, but we are in hopes it will set the Christians of the town to work. That is about the main thing we can hope to do."

Again Mr. Moody insisted upon the necessity of the work being kept up, when he said, "The permanence of the effect depends altogether on how it is followed up. Sometimes the Church—and when I say the Church, of course I mean all the Churches and Chapels in the town—does not follow up the work, and of course the effect is not so permanent as when it is followed up."

Undoubtedly Mr. Moody is right. The same idea was expressed by Canon Smith when he said: "If Messrs. Moody and Sankey's work here is to be blessed, as I have no doubt it will be, much of it will be the result of many weeks and months, ah! and perhaps years, of toil of God's faithful servants. What is to become of the seed of the word they shall sow if it is not carefully and diligently tended in the regular ministrations of our Christian Churches?"

The ground had, indeed, been carefully prepared; the seed had been sown with marvellous care. What is to be the harvest? Perhaps those "who work and wait shall never see." But people have had the word of God brought to the very thresholds of their hearts this week; and He alone can tell with what result. Over 100,000 people have attended the meetings. An eminent Nonconformist minister in Birmingham said the other day: "Of 200 persons who were received into our Church eight years ago, when Messrs. Moody and Sankey were here, at least seventy per cent. have continued to live for God." Is it too much to hope that eight years hence Nottingham may have as excellent an account to offer?

DEAR SIR,—The visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Nottingham has caused many to rejoice. The meeting for Church-workers last Sunday morning at eight o'clock will long remain in the mind. I started from home soon after six o'clock with a friend. It was a beautiful morning; the birds poured forth their melodious strains of welcome to the returning spring, and thought flowed like a gentle stream. On arriving at the Marble Rink crowds were assembled; there were some who had walked ten or twelve miles. There were about 3000 present. Mr. Sankey, on the wings of song, poured forth the strains of melody about the love of Christ.

"Individual effort" was the theme of Mr. Moody's discourse. He dwelt on the importance of each doing something to forward the work; even the humblest might do a little. By individual effort the finest powers of the soul were called forth, and each effort tended to strengthen the noblest feelings. There is a wide opening for Christian love and sympathy, and if the importance of the subject of "individual effort" were duly impressed on the mind, and "no day without a deed to crown it," were realised, what an amount of happiness would be spread abroad in every direction.

The subject of "individual effort" deserves our earnest thought and attention.—Yours very truly, G. W.

March 3.

MANCHESTER.

The impression created by the last visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Manchester has never been lost, and the hymns then introduced have ever since been sung by multitudes of the people. Better still, numbers who were then brought to know Jesus Christ as their Saviour are now earnest workers in the Church of Christ. The Mission has been preceded by much prayer and special religious services in many of the churches. The Committee has circulated 50,000 papers, containing an announcement of the Mission on the last page. Copies of Mr. Moody's last address at Birmingham have been freely distributed. Our brethren came to a people prepared of the Lord.

The first meeting of the Mission was held in Cooke's Circus on Thursday evening. The great crowd which thronged that structure was a sufficient proof that their popularity is not on the wane. They were supported by many ministers from the different Churches. From the text, "And when He saw their faith, He said unto him, man, thy sins are forgiven thee," Mr. Moody powerfully declared the need of faith, courage, enthusiasm, and sympathy for the work which they were that night taking in hand for the salvation of the people. He held the vast audience spell-bound, and may were pricked in their hearts.

In the afternoon of Friday, Mr. Moody delivered a special address to Christian-workers in the Free Trade Hall. Long before the hour announced for commencing the service, every seat in the vast hall was occupied, and numbers, not being able to obtain admittance, went away. Mr. Sankey sang his solos, "Soul of mine in Earthly Temple," and "Nothing but Leaves." The effect of Mr. Sankey's singing cannot be described. Many were deeply moved.

Mr. Moody took for the subject of his address "The Work of the Holy Spirit." He said that if the Mission were to be a success, they must get their minds off men and off the meetings, and look entirely and constantly to God. He spoke of power in and upon the believer; of the power needed by all who would witness for Christ; of lost power, and the way in which it might be regained; of the effects of this power in the believer and in the Christian Church, and of power in its fulness. He pointed out the need of being re-baptized there and then. Best of all, the power came and rested upon the people. Everybody to whom we spoke testified to the blessing they had received. A short prayer-meeting was afterwards held, during which prayer was offered by Revs. H. Bone, W. Spiers, W. D. Sargeant, and others.

A second meeting was held in the same hall in the evening; the building was again crowded, and the audience included a large number of working people. An overflow meeting was held in the Circus, Chepstow-street. Mr. Moody delivered a rousing address on Repentance. He appealed again and again to those present in the most earnest manner possible to begin that night a new life. Every eye seemed fixed upon the preacher, and many were the "Amens" which followed his beseechings. A large number of all ages and classes stood up in token of their desire to be prayed for.

At the close of this meeting, the workers went amongst the inquirers, and many of those who had been praying and waiting for a blessing were greatly cheered by what they saw and heard. One young man said, "Up to to-night I have been a Pharisee, but I now take the publican's place, and Jesus saves me." A lady said, "I have been wanting salvation for years, and sometimes I hope I have it, and then I find out that I am mistaken." She at length discovered that at one point obedience to Christ had been wanting, and as soon as that one point was removed she found her Saviour.

Another young man said, "I am a member of the Church and secretary of a Sunday-school, but I am not saved, and I want to be saved to-night." It was not long before he had entered into the joy of God's pardoning grace. A girl who was spoken to looked up through her tears and said, "I am too wicked to be saved." In a few minutes she knew the blood of Christ had power to cleanse from all sin. "There is a sound of abundance of rain." W. D. S.

On Sunday morning last there was a crowded meeting of Christian workers in the Free Trade Hall. In the afternoon the Free Trade Hall, Cooke's Circus, and the Y.M.C.A. Hall were all crowded half an hour before the advertised time, several thousand people being still left in the streets. At the evening hour the Circus and the Y.M.C.A. Hall were crowded with men only. Many anxious inquiries were met with after all the meetings.

DUBLIN SOLDIERS' INSTITUTE. — Founded only five years ago in a hired house, which it quickly outgrew, the Dublin Soldiers' Institute has established itself in large premises specially built for its accommodation. A few devoted friends of the soldier carried the work through its earlier stages almost alone, but it soon attracted the notice of others, and the highest military authorities in Ireland are now amongst its supporters. Unfortunately the work has outgrown the means to do it. Additional sleeping accommodation is needed. Were the expense of providing it (£1200) once surmounted, the payments of the men would render it self-supporting. A special fund is being raised for this purpose. For want of the help which is now asked for hundreds of men have to be turned away every month. It is painful even to think of what this must already have led to in many cases. The general funds of the Home are in debt £360, and the treasurers are properly desirous before increasing their responsibilities to see this cleared off. The Hon. Secretary is Captain Wade Thompson, Clonskeagh Castle, co. Dublin.

Notes and Comments.

BERMONDSEY Town Hall was used for eight months (April to December, 1882) by the Theatre Services Committee; but the Vestry, using or abusing the powers with which they are invested, have let it to the Unitarians. This body, by the use of a brass band to lead the singing and perform overtures, has succeeded in filling the building every Sunday night. We commend this action of their representatives to the evangelical ratepayers of Bermondsey.

The Evangelical Alliance has issued the following invitation:—

The Council of the Evangelical Alliance earnestly invite all Christian people who desire to see the constitution of our country maintained in its allegiance to God, to attend a meeting for special prayer, to be held at Exeter-hall, on Friday, the 9th inst., at 4 p.m.

The subject for intercession will be that the name of God may always be honoured in the statute-book and by the legislature of the nation. The Council trust that those unable to attend the meeting will nevertheless remember this important matter in their supplications.

J. Field,
A. J. Arnold, } Secretaries.

Alliance House, 7, Adam-street, Strand, London, W.C.

We fervently hope the vital importance of the subject will be felt sufficiently to draw together a large number of earnest praying people, to entreat God to preserve the nation from so great a sin as to admit to its government men who deny the existence of the Creator and Preserver and Ruler of all.

Through the liberality and zeal of Lord Radstock, Mr. E. M. Denny, the Countess de Noailles, and others like-minded with themselves, a very useful step has been taken on behalf of emigrants sailing from the Thames for America and the Colonies, of whom there is an increasing number every year. In 1881, 26,903 passed through the port of London. The Brunswick Hotel, close to Blackwall Docks, has therefore been opened as a Christian home for emigrants, at a cost of about £1,500, towards which £900 has been subscribed. It is impossible to estimate the good results likely to follow the Christian influence which, through this movement, will be brought to bear on many hearts as they bid farewell to English soil. Accommodation is provided for 300 emigrants.

A crowded farewell meeting, held at Regent's Park Chapel last week, tells of the regret with which the friends of Dr. Landels in London view his departure from their midst. Far beyond the circle of his own Church and denomination this regret will be shared, his constant readiness to place his gifted services at the disposal of any good cause having won for him general esteem, while through the pen as well as by his voice he has made himself widely known and loved, both in town and country. Edinburgh and Scotland generally will however be gainers by the Doctor's removal, and we trust that he may be spared for yet many years' continued prosperity in the Master's work, the change of sphere being sanctified to the yet greater glory of God in the labours of his servant.

A very interesting and exhaustive paper on the social conditions and prospects of Madagascar was recently read before a meeting of the Society of Arts by the Rev. J. Peill, Sir Donald Currie, M.P., in the chair. He gives some very startling facts concerning the difficulties with which Christianity has to contend in that favoured isle. Among them slavery and the traffic in rum rank foremost. The latter especially calls for earnest attention, and for effort to bring about right action on the part of our own Government, who have at this time a revision of the Anglo-Malagasy Treaty under their consideration. At present the native Government, though anxious to raise the duty on rum, so as to prevent it being sold at so cheap a rate (the low price of 6d. per quart placing it within the reach of all), are unable to do so by reason of the terms of our Treaty with them. Much of this spirit is distilled by the natives, but large quantities are imported by British and French merchants, British subjects pressing the trade, and sheltering themselves behind their Treaty rights. The terrible effects of this traffic may be imagined from the following statements of Mr. Peill:—

That it is freely drunk among all the tribes there can be no doubt whatever. The Sakalava are said to give it raw to infants at the breast, while one of the missionaries who travelled in their country says he has seen children stagger in their play from its effects. So terrible a curse has this cheap foreign spirit become on the east coast of Madagascar, that all progress is prevented by it, it is destroying the natives, and depopulating the country.

Having returned from his round the world tour, Rev. Joseph Cook is again attracting large audiences in Boston to a new series of his Monday Lectures. We select a few passages from his recent utterances on Christian Missions, a subject upon which he is well qualified to speak, from having visited the chief centres of missionary operations, and given special attention to the work radiating from them. The following facts call for serious consideration:—

There are three hundred millions of women now on this planet who have only the Buddhist hope of being born again as men instead of toads or snakes. There are eighty millions of women in Moslem harems. There are uncounted millions of men and women and children growing up in the most degraded superstitions, and suffering in mind, body, and estate from inherited Pagan customs. In the name of mere philanthropy and secular prudence, Christian Missions ought to receive a support, immediate, abundant, permanent, unflinching.

And yet with the added, and pre-eminent, force of Christian faith and its resultant obligations, what are we doing for these millions of precious and undying souls? Let these statements of fact suggest a reply:—

All that united Protestant Christendom together raises annually for Missions would not pay the liquor bill of the United States for three days, nor that of the British Islands for two. At the opening of the century all Protestant Christendom expended only 250,000 dols. annually for Missions. It expends to-day 7,500,000 dols. for that purpose. This is a large sum you think. It is a bagatelle. The dissipations of Saratogas and Newports and Brightons would hardly find this sum worth mentioning in the hugeness of their expenses for self-gratification. The Churches are penurious toward Missions. In China there is not an ordained missionary to-day for a million people. In the population accessible to the American Board there is as yet only one missionary for some 700,000 inhabitants. Modern Christendom has thrown one pebble into the great ocean of missionary effort, and stands with an amused childish conceit on the shore of history watching the wide ripples produced by that pebble, and supposes that it is reforming the world. Another century will sneer at us for our conceit and our penuriousness.

In view of Mr. Cook's experience and testimony as to the spread and influence of modern unbelief in our great Mission fields, we are led to feel that this is no time for our missionary committees and directors to relax vigilance and care as to the soundness and thorough scripturalness of the doctrines taught by the agents by whom they are represented abroad. More than ever is it essential to send out not a Gospel of doubt or negation, or one of human speculations and philosophisings, but the plain, clear and unadulterated gospel of Christ proclaimed by whole-hearted believers in its Divine authority and power to save. 1 Cor. i. 17—29, speaks with renewed force on this point.

Infidelity is occupying the field of the upper and middle classes. Imported unbelief, in many quarters of India, China, and Japan, is as great a danger among educated native circles as hereditary disbelief. This proposition seems to me to be of the utmost importance, and is one on which my experience as a traveller has laid great stress. It has been my fortune to give lectures in the ten cities I have named; but I rarely felt it necessary to attack the hereditary misbeliefs of the audiences. My whole opportunity was, in most cases, used in attacking imported unbelief. The ablest men are needed at the front.

In his lecture on Spiritualism Mr. Cook brought to light some awful facts concerning the latest developments of that fearful system. In an interview with Professor Zollner, of Leipsic University, the leading Spiritualist in Germany, he was introduced to an American lawyer who claims to have received a Bible which is to supersede the old one, "the proof sheets having been dematerialised before several persons, and taken in an invisible state into the other world, corrected, and sent back, so that there could be no mistake about the revelation." This work, under the title of "The Christian Spiritual Bible," it is intended to publish, copies being already in circulation privately.

The lecturer also spoke of another volume, a prospectus of which he had just received, also containing revelations which are to supersede Christianity, which had been given by the dictation of angels through a New York medium. Agents for the sale of this work were likely to permeate the country, so that warning was necessary as to its real character. Speaking of these books, Mr. Cook says:—

It is worth mentioning them in order that you may see from the floating of these air-bubbles which way certain currents run. The bubbles amount to nothing; but the currents amount to much.

It appears to be true that apologists for Spiritualism are to be found among the professedly Christian circles of our own land, and that it is regarded with favour by not a few in connection with the various sections of the Christian Church. In many cases this must be traced to ignorance of its real nature and design; but others receive it knowing at least something of its claims as a religious system to be associated with faith and with revelation. Surely such may well accept this warning, and, seeing which way the current bears them, will pause ere they suffer themselves to be drawn further into a vortex so terrible as that to which this demoniacal system leads its adherents. Truly, as Mr. Cook asserts, "Modern ages are in need of all the scriptural warnings against necromancy and commerce with evil spirits."

It is worse than useless to ignore the presence amongst us of this pernicious system, as some do, or to affect to treat it with contempt, as unworthy of the attention of thoughtful and devout men. Its progress and power are manifest, and the moral mischief it is working in other countries is beginning to show itself among ourselves, many thoughtless and ill-informed people, unaware of its true character, and ignorant at first of its alliance with a religious faith, the practical effects of which are horrible to contemplate, being led by degrees into all its subtle but soul-destroying depths. Mr. Cook spoke of "the obscure but terribly real underground work of Spiritualism in America." It behoves us to lift up the voice of warning, and that with no uncertainty of sound, against its insidious advances in England. "The Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons" (1 Tim. iv. 1).

Grave responsibility rests in these days upon Christian men who have any degree of influence in political matters. While it is true that "our citizenship is in heaven," so that we cannot regard politics from the mere politician's point of view, or suffer ourselves to be absorbed in the strifes of conflicting parties, there are yet many questions affecting the State, and bearing upon the moral and social welfare of humanity, which, as men, and all the more as Christian men, we are bound to consider, and to the utmost extent of our power help forward whatever in them is to the glory of God. It is at our peril that we are silent and inactive when such subjects are before the public mind, and in the hands of our legislators, as, for example, the Closing of Public-houses on the Lord's Day, the continuance and even the extension of the Contagious Diseases Acts, the recognition and authorisation of open atheism by special legislation on its behalf, &c. Principles dear to every Christian heart, and of immense importance as touching the best interests of society, are involved in such questions, and it behoves all the friends of God and truth to be awake to them and to their duty as Christian Englishmen, in relation to them.

What is needed is a spirit of independence as to mere party considerations, and a quickened conscience as to the intrinsic worth and paramount claims of truth and righteousness. Lack of this among our statesmen leads to the repression and obstruction of much that is good, and to the maintenance of much that is evil. Social questions in which there is room and urgent call for co-operation are often set aside, and looked down upon because of their quiet and unobtrusive character, while questions affecting the ascendancy of this or that party, although of slight influence on national advancement in moral and social spheres, are unduly exalted. The present session of Parliament has already been spoken of as tame and unheroic, because it proposes simply to deal with matters of home and domestic policy. There is surely sufficient room in this direction for much useful and necessary action; far more, indeed, than our legislators seem prepared to occupy.

The 82nd Psalm will repay prayerful thought in reference to this subject. It is there declared to be the first duty of rulers, spoken of as "gods," to "defend the poor and fatherless, to do justice to the afflicted and needy," and "to rid them out of the hand of the wicked," as opposed to the pursuit of schemes of personal ambition and carnal policy. God who observes their course as He "stands in their midst, judging among them," will not hold us or them guiltless if we do not surrender mere partizanship, and disregard worldly impulses, in favour of the advancement of purity, and whatsoever, coming from any source, is honest, of good report, and tending to godliness. "Righteousness exalteth an nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." He, therefore, is the wise politician who labours to remove from his country the stain of whatever national evils are manifest and rife.

Speaking of recent explosions in Glasgow and Brussels, of dynamite sent by post, of Anarchists by the hundred arrested in Spain, of bombs exhibited in America by O'Donovan Rossa, as specimens of articles recently despatched to Ireland, the Daily News says that "the societies are believed to number many thousands, while the Inner Brotherhoods, the Spanish Invincibles, consist of desperate characters only." Louise Michel is suspected of being implicated, but she is a literary character, and "literary characters are always for violent measures on paper, and confine themselves in warfare to paper bullets of the brain."

"The assassination of all the upper and middle-classes is practically the avowed aim of the new sect of Anarchists in France, Spain, and Russia. These thinkers see no hope for the world while organised society endures; and in their desire to 'make all things new,' they find it necessary to suppress everyone who has anything to lose by the overthrow of society." These schemes are said to be blundering and brutal, hopeless, unpractical, abominably wicked; and the ultimate conclusion arrived at is that "the performances of the Anarchists, whether at home or abroad, are not so skilled as to make society tremble for its existence."

This somewhat flippant article seems to us to underrate the seriousness of its subject. The paper bullets of the literary brain are apt to transmute themselves into leaden bullets fired by the assassin's hand. Even Liberal politicians are waking up to see that there must be a limit to the freedom of tongue and pen; that violent speech and writing are not always steam blown off, but steam at work. The remark of Joseph Cook quoted above, that "the bubbles amount to nothing, but the currents amount to much," notes a fact apparently hidden from the eyes of the writer in the Daily News.

"The fruit of all this expenditure of money, time, and dynamite," it is said, has so far been "the maiming of several innocent people, chiefly of the poorer class, and the death of the late Czar." This scarcely tells all the truth; but if the fruit so far has been only as bubbles on the current, the current has to be accounted for. The Anarchists agree with God in seeing the need of making all things new; but they go to the devil instead of God to make them new.

The laws of mind are not less certain than the laws of matter. Water in its various conditions is a mighty force. The deep and sluggish stream of our pauperhood; the pent-up tears of the oppressed and underpaid; the miasmatic swamp of our guilt gardens; the roaring torrent of our roughs—these are the waters out of which the bubbles of anarchy are blown, and which may make society not unreasonably "tremble for its existence." A greater than Daniel entreats society (i.e., the upper and middle classes) like another Nebuchadnezzar, to cut off its sins by righteousness, and its iniquities by showing mercy to the poor, if it may be a lengthening of its tranquillity. Otherwise by the decree of the watchers and the holy ones, it too shall be driven from among men and a beast's heart be given to it. History repeats itself; like causes produce like results, whether in a nation or a man only.

We are informed that there will be no Conference this year at Crayford, but that one will be held (D.V.) at the Rink Hall, Blackheath, on the 18th and 19th April next. Among those who have engaged to be present are Lord Radstock, Mr. Stevenson Blackwood, Revs. W. Webb Peploe, Evan Hopkins, J. Bennett, J. B. Figgis, W. Haslam, J. Denham Smith, and Mr. H. Bowker.

The following paragraph, extracted from the Parisian correspondence of The Daily Telegraph, affords food for very serious reflection. We trust the French Government will pause before sanctioning such a departure from the modern methods of exploration hitherto adopted in Central Africa:—

> A Bill has been introduced into Parliament for providing M. de Brazza with a veritable arsenal of weapons for his expedition to the Congo. If the measure, for which urgency is claimed, be passed, M. de Brazza will be gratuitously furnished with one hundred and eight thousand percussion lock firearms. He will also be indebted to the liberality of the War Office for twenty thousand swords, a hundred tons of powder, ten million percussion caps, two hundred tents, and a thousand axes. Moreover, a whole company of the first Algerian sharpshooters is to be despatched to the Congo to aid M. de Brazza in his enterprise. It is evident that the French Government has decided to enforce respect at all costs for the so-called "treaty" to which King Makoko and M. de Brazza affixed their signatures. The presence of an armed French force on the Congo is, however, certain to lead to bloodshed. Has the Government thoroughly weighed the probable consequences of a military invasion that may end in catastrophe, and will infallibly retard the progress of civilisation and commerce in a country so recently opened to European influence?

In our issue of Feb. 22 we commented on a Conference of the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of Warwickshire, quoting a report which appeared in the Birmingham Daily Post. A correspondent referring to our note informs us that as far as he can ascertain all the ministers named are Unitarians. We do not know why the Daily Post should have omitted to state this fact. A Unitarian Conference certainly does not represent the Protestant Dissenters of Warwickshire.

A prayer-meeting of ladies opposed to immoral legislation was held in the large room of the Westminster Palace Hotel, close to the House of Commons, on February 27, at the time when it was expected that Mr. Hopwood's resolution would come before Parliament. Though the resolution was crowded out by the debate on the Address, the influence of the prayer-meeting was felt even in the House by M.P.'s who had heard of it. The good men were encouraged, the others exasperated. These detestable Acts cannot hold their ground against prayer.

Our readers will hear with deep sorrow of the sudden decease, at Bournemouth, last week, of Major-General Burrows, well known to many for his active and ready interest in all kinds of Christian work. He was on the point of addressing a social gathering of postmen and porters when the summons came, and he entered, without a struggle, the unseen presence of his Lord.

MY VISIT TO JERUSALEM.

DEAR SIR,—Many of your readers will be glad to hear of my second journey to the Holy Land, especially those who so freely and liberally ministered to my heavy expenses in going there and returning. From the time I had received an invitation from the Rev. H. Friedländer to go and see what was going on at Jerusalem since the return to the land of their fathers of great numbers of the persecuted Jews from Russia and other places, I began to pray about it. I had not the money necessary for the journey, but £120 came in after prayer in a very short time. I was far from strong, and doubted whether my health would permit me to accomplish such a long journey in the depth of winter. I prayed about this also, and I had scarcely arrived in Italy when I felt myself far better in health than when I left home. The time occupied by the journey, and the time spent in the Land, was altogether some two months and a half.

The object I had in view in going was to ascertain whether it is possible to purchase land, and at what rate, so as to give farming occupation to the many Jews now in Jerusalem and the Holy Land. As this was a delicate and difficult question, I had the pleasure of knowing that many of God's remembrancers were in daily prayer for the success of my journey, asking that special wisdom and guidance might be given to me to accomplish what was supposed to be a great difficulty. I was led to inspect different tracts of land offered for sale, none of which appeared to combine the necessary requirements for the object in view. But our prayer-hearing God and Father was watching and guiding in answer to the prayer of faith, and now a large and excellent tract of land is at our disposal at a very low rate. We hope before long to be able to purchase it for the purpose above mentioned. Something in detail will be printed and sent to friends when our project is more matured; for the present I should feel glad if this letter should lead your readers to pray for continued wisdom, guidance, and blessing to carry out what is before us in this matter.

As I received hospitality from our devoted and zealous brother, the Rev. H. Friedländer, I saw during my stay in his house his wonderful activity in endeavouring to supply the wants of the many suffering Jews that came under his hospitable roof. In a letter, just received, he writes: "I have two men constantly making mattresses, and still many people are sleeping on the cold ground." From seven o'clock in the morning till nine at night his hall is the rendezvous of the unfortunate, whose cases are investigated one by one, generally by himself, and none are sent empty away, whether as regards their bodies or their souls. He believes in the truth of our Lord's words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Though we have not sent money that at all meets the wants of these outcasts our worthy friend continues to supply their need out of his own private resources. I trust that this letter will stir up many to haste to the rescue, as the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN will gladly acknowledge and forward direct to M. Friedländer any sums sent for him. I was glad to see that he is nobly seconded in his arduous work by the excellent partner in life the Lord has given him, who is indefatigable in her labours of love towards the Lord's outcasts.

Jaffa, the seaport of Jerusalem, forty miles distant, is a lovely spot—a town embosomed in orange groves and palm trees, which are extremely luxuriant in growth. Its progress, commercially, may be gathered from the fact that in the year 1868 there were only seventy orange groves, the price being 19 francs per thousand. There are now 370 groves, while the price is 32 francs per thousand. Nor are the spiritual wants of Jaffa unattended to, for besides many flourishing schools and chapels, Miss Mangin has established a hospital, and anything better managed I have rarely seen. Every morning visitors may see this excellent woman holding forth the word of life in Arabic to a numerous audience of men, women, and children; after ministering to their spiritual wants she goes and washes their sores and binds up their wounds with her own hands. Of course she and her noble helpers, Miss Newton and Miss Nicholson, have gained the esteem, not only of the sick, but of the majority of the inhabitants.

These Medical Missions are proclaiming in an unmistakable way the love of Christ to those who would otherwise probably lend a deaf ear to his offers of mercy. Our sisters above-named finding their present building too small, which they only hold from year to year, have selected a fine site adjoining their present quarters; they have enough money of their own for the purchase of the land, but are hoping for help soon to lay the foundation of another building. Miss Mangin speaks the Arabic fluently, and is making a deep impression on many hearts in Jaffa. Praise the Lord for such labours.

Our Lord, in writing of his land in the Old Testament, described it as a land flowing with milk and honey—the glory of all lands. This is true. Each year it improves in its productiveness; copious rains have fallen for many years now, and good harvests have been gathered. This year is of greater promise than any. Finer grapes than those grown in Jerusalem, and which remained on the vines till December, I have rarely seen. Splendid pomegranates, quinces, apricots, oranges, &c., are most plentiful. I rode down the valley of Eshcol and ate of its excellent grapes.

Jerusalem is spreading outside the walls so rapidly that in a short time the portion extra mura will be the best of the two. The residences outside have this in their favour, that they have the fig tree and the vine to sit under, and one may eat of their pleasant and wholesome fruit. The building outside the walls of Jerusalem has been a great step in advance, as it has given occupation, as quarry-men, carpenters, masons, &c., to many Jews who had hitherto been in a state of idleness and sloth. A far greater advance will be made the day we can give agricultural employment to a thousand Jewish families on the broad and fertile acres of their own splendid country, where the air is so pure and the sky so blue.

Friends in Christ, the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle dove—the Spirit's voice—is heard again in the land. Soon will He return who has a right to the sceptre of that land. "In that day shall a present be brought to the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, of a people terrible from their beginning, and hitherto," &c.

May we be privileged to help forward this glorious gathering. Any further questions in connection with this matter should be addressed to me as below.— Yours faithfully,

WM. GREENE.

BETHESDA MISSION, PORTSMOUTH. — The Eleventh Annual Report has recently been issued, and presents a record of much good and successful work done in that important field of Christian service. The work is carried on in evangelical and unsectarian lines, and commends itself to the prayerful and practical sympathies of the Lord's people. We cordially bid its workers God-speed in their efforts to impart the word of life to perishing souls.

BIARRITZ MISSION. — DEAR SIR, — I am anxious to make known the fine opening there is just now for preaching the Gospel to the people of this place. A capital hall, comfortably benched and well lighted, in the very centre of the town, has been hired to the 31st of May next. The Mission is in charge of Mr. Auguste Saillens, father of Mr. Saillens, of Marseilles, who will most gladly welcome any workers willing to assist him, and from past experience of the work here I am fully convinced that with attractive speakers, short addresses, and pretty good music (there is no difficulty about the latter), the hall may be filled every night, and a great and good work done here. Earnestly hoping that this may come under the eyes of some willing to help, yours faithfully,

Hotel d'Angleterre, March 1. T. R. TUFNELL.

'TIS BUT FOR THEE.

'TIS but for Thee to speak! and these wild waves,
Roused by the storms of fears and questionings
And shrinkings from Thy wise and gracious will,
Shall fold themselves to rest beneath that Voice,
And sink into a calm.

'Tis but for Thee to smile! and those stilled waves
Shall mirror back in gladness that dear smile,
And dance, and glow, and sparkle 'neath its beams,
Reflecting still its sweetness and its joy:
Thus glorifying Thee.

'Tis but for Thee to beam, O glorious Sun,
On my heart's desert! Then each bitter weed
Of sin shall wither up. Then all the fruits
Of righteousness, and peace, and joy shall grow
And spring forth to Thy praise.

O Fire of Love! 'tis but for Thee to fall
On my heart's altar, kindling there the pile
That smouldering burns, and waits but for Thy love
To burst into a flame! Ascending up
To Thee its glorious source.

O Saviour, speak and smile! Oh, beam and burn!
That e'en while here a foretaste may be mine
Of that blest time when, sin for ever gone,
My soul shall bathe in love's unfathomed sea,
And God be All in All!

AMONG SPANISH SOLDIERS.

SIR,—May I ask you kindly to insert some extracts from letters received by me from a Swiss pastor, who since 1869 has been teaching and preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ in Barcelona. Besides day-schools and Sunday and week-day services, he has now nine Sunday-schools there, many of them taught by converts.

In December last he wrote me, "I am hoping to try a method of evangelisation which has not yet been attempted in Spain. Barcelona is a garrison town, and thousands of soldiers pass through it every year. If we can evangelise them we shall be working for the whole of Spain. My desire is therefore to open a room where we could welcome and invite them to spend their time in reading or writing letters; we could there talk to them of the Gospel, put into their hands the Word of God, teach them to read and write, and have meetings and lectures for them; and if the Lord deigns to bestow his blessing, these men will return to their homes to proclaim the Gospel of Christ, instead of carrying there the vices of this Great City."

M. Empeytay now writes me on Feb. 10 that while the room has many constant frequenters, 1100 have visited it since the opening in December, and several have, he believes, been truly converted to God. Five of these young men have formed themselves into a "Young Soldiers' Christian Union," the object of which is to encourage and help each other in the work of the Lord, and to spread the Gospel among soldiers all through Spain. He adds, "They bring me their little savings for the cause, and it is indeed a pleasure to hear their prayers, to find how they gather up what they have been taught, and to see their interest and anxiety to hear and receive the word of God. . . Strengthen our hands by much prayer on our behalf, knowing that our labour shall not be in vain before the Lord. Ask that He who has deigned to put the seal of his blessing on our beginning, may vouchsafe to deliver us from all adversaries, and continue to bless our feeble efforts for his glory, and for the salvation of many souls."

Funds being greatly needed for this work, I will thankfully receive any help which your readers may be led to bestow on it.—I am, Sir, faithfully yours, H. REW.

ALTON.—Three correspondents write that though there certainly has been an awakening here, and a blessed work among the people of God, it is an exaggeration to say that souls were saved as many as twenty a night. Our former correspondent was a visitor, who repeated what he heard. Those who now write say that every night some were deeply impressed under the preaching of Mr. Carter, of the Evangelisation Society, of whom many are now rejoicing in Christ and showing the change by their lives.

EMIGRANTS' CHRISTIAN HOME.

ON the afternoon of Monday week a number of ladies and gentlemen assembled at this establishment, situated close to the Blackwall Railway Station and Pier, preparatory to its being opened for the use of emigrants. The project originated in the fact that whereas until recently emigrants for America and the Colonies went chiefly from Liverpool and Plymouth, now several shipping companies have weekly lines of large steamers from the Thames. The result is that the number from the Continent of Germans, Swedes, &c., and from various parts of Great Britain has augmented so largely that last year more than 25,000 passed through the port of London, while there is every probability of an annual increase. The building now about to be used for the temporary accommodation of successive bodies of emigrants was opened in 1834 as the Brunswick Hotel, under which name it was for a long time famous for its fish dinners. For the last six years it has been shut up, and some time ago the founders of the new Home secured it on a twenty-one years' lease at a moderate rent. It has been carefully and completely repaired and fitted for the end in view at a cost of about £1600, and it is estimated that the yearly outlay for such work will be covered by an allowance made by the shipping companies.

The use can be had of two large sheds adjoining the Home, one for men, the other for women, where emigrants landing in the night can rest when the Home is too full to take them in. Captain Wilson, of the Board of Trade, the Government Inspector of Emigrants, who has had to prosecute several holders of the low houses to which they have been enticed, has expressed his warmest approbation of this movement, and his willingness to help it on by every means in his power. The great shipping lines have promised to send their emigrants to the Home as soon as it is ready to receive them. The owners of steamships have had to send all the way to Plymouth, because of there being no suitable place in London. The Great Eastern Railway have just stated that in consequence of the opening of this Home for emigrants at Blackwall they intend arranging a more convenient Continental route for German emigrants.

The whole building presented on the opening day a bright, cheerful, and pleasant aspect to the visitors, the situation being manifestly the very best for such a purpose. From three to four hundred emigrants can be accommodated, and the charge per head for boarding and lodging adults will be about 2s. 3d. per day, and for children about 1s. per day less. Private rooms are to be reserved for friends of the institution occasionally coming from the country. Among the donations and subscriptions to the object are: £200 from Mr. S. Morley, M.P.; £100 each from Lord Radstock, Mr. E. M. Denny, and the Countess de Noailles; £50 each from Mr. R. Barclay and Mr. T. A. Denny, the former subscribing that amount for five years and the latter for three; £25 from the Hon. Elizabeth Waldegrave, &c. £300 has been offered on condition that £600 more is raised within two months. The committee consists of Lord Radstock, Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. R. Paton, Mr. E. Trotter, Mr. E. Clifford, and Mr. H. W. Maynard; Mr. George Hamilton being honorary secretary, and Mr. R. Barclay treasurer.

At a meeting held in the largest room, at which Lord Radstock presided, pointed allusion was made to the wretched condition of many emigrants for want of such a Home, and the Chairman himself expressed a hope that from seven to eight thousand persons will pass through it annually. Mr. S. Morley, M.P., said it was impossible to over-estimate the value of such a place as that. He had occasionally been thrown in contact with circumstances which proved the terrible difficulties to which emigrants were exposed, even women and children knowing nothing of our language having in many cases come to this country with arrangements by no means complete. All along the river-side were harpies waiting to lay hold of persons in such difficulties as these poor creatures were seen to be, and, instead of feeling that they had been blessed by coming among English Christians, numbers of emigrants had cursed the very name of London because they had found it so full of dangers. He therefore felt very thankful that emigrants were in future to be taken care of by those who would have the management of that Home. Mr. T. A. Denny, who followed, said there was reason to believe that when the Home was thoroughly at work it would be found self-supporting.

SIR,—The new Home for Emigrants will, God helping, be of great value. Having during the past three years visited Australia and America, mainly to study the question of female emigration, I see how great a want this Home will supply. My own work lying so much among the fallen, makes me anxious to welcome and encourage, as far as I can, work among young women tending to prevent the evil we all so much deplore.

To this end I should much like to see a special mission-woman appointed to work among the single women, to preach the Gospel, and to distribute liberally Bibles, tracts, &c. If the names of all the single women anxious, and requiring, to be assisted on arrival in New York, were sent to Mrs. Stuart Wortley, we could, I think, arrange for a committee of ladies in New York to take up and carry on the work begun here. Would it be possible to send a missionary backwards and forwards in each vessel? The voyage itself is a time of great trial to young women, and, from the unavoidable circumstances of the case, most trying to the modesty and good feeling of any young woman.

How greatly work among emigrant young women is needed may perhaps be understood when I tell you that a careful inquiry made by me into the state of San Francisco showed that nearly all the unhappy women there were emigrants from Europe, and but a very small proportion were American-born women. I do not know whether the language would be a difficulty. Possibly some lady having the real fire of love for souls in her heart might take up this branch.

To any well-thought-out and matured scheme on the above lines I would give £50.

Faithfully yours,
H. STUART WORTLEY, Colonel.

THE FLOODS IN GERMANY.

THE following is part of a letter from Pastor Scheve, whom we met last year in Wiesbaden, and who is seeking to carry the Gospel to the sufferers from the recent floods:—

"Last Wednesday evening I returned here again after my missionary tour, tired certainly, but well, and in the blessing of the Lord. The journey has been very fatiguing. Sixteen days have passed, from early morning till late at night in full work in the Lord's vineyard, where there was not only much sowing, but also much reaping. Thanks be therefore multiplied to Him!

On Friday last I went to Frankfurt, to speak to the Director, Mr. Watts (agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society there). The Society has already been active in the distribution of Testaments in the flooded districts. Their manner of procedure, however, had been this, that they had offered the precious gift to the Roman Catholic population at their own houses, and had met with thousands who accepted it; whereas the Protestants had been directed to apply to their respective pastors to ask from them the gift of a Testament.

I expressed my fears that by this method the evangelical population in many places would be neglected, since the "rapport" and interest between pastors and Church-members in many Protestant communities is of a very precarious kind, and I therefore proposed that the Protestant population might be dealt with in the same manner as the Roman Catholics. An aged and experienced chief-colporteur of the Bible Society was of the same mind with me, and an agreement has now been entered upon between the Director, Mr. Watts, and myself, by which he places at my disposal one colporteur, a Mr. Gartner, who, together with one of our colporteurs, is to visit the Protestant population in the suffering districts, to offer to them in their own houses a Testament with memorial leaf as a gift.

The work is important, and must be done. The Lord beckons me to it so distinctly by many tokens, that I have no doubt about it. Still, I accept, in the first place, gratefully the proffered hand of the British and Foreign Bible Society, especially since my plan, unknown to them, has been theirs, and I rejoice, therefore, that in the execution of it we may work conjointly. The Lord grant this may be the blessed beginning of a more widespread missionary effort along the Upper and Middle Rhine. If Christian friends in England only knew what need there is here of an energetic evangelisation, they would utilise for it more of their means and talents entrusted to them. Dark is the night of infidelity resting upon our people. Christians abroad hardly can have any idea of it.

In Derschlag and Cologne I had meetings richly blessed. In Derschlag I baptized nine saved sinners into the death of the Lord. In Wiesbaden six new converts are to be baptized next Sunday.

Your brother in the Lord,
Weisbaden, Einser Strasse, EDWARD SCHEVE.

THE GOSPEL IN ROME.

DEAR SIR,—Under date February 12, I received the following from Mrs Wall, of Rome. J. B. S.

"Our new hall is a beautiful room, airy, and in a splendid situation for the people. It will seat quite 300. It was opened, I think, on the 20th of January; several of the ministers of the different denominations were present. The evening was dreadfully wet, it rained in torrents, but the hall was crowded. We have always three or four meetings there weekly, when we get large congregations, generally of 150 to 200. We have no curtains before the door, so when the people are afraid to enter they can hear outside. The Lord is really giving us a blessing, and bringing souls to hear the Gospel. I feel so very much rejoiced to see so many young men, and working men, who have never been in the habit of attending any religious service. We want more helpers."

This new hall is in Trastevere. Mrs. Wall continues, "The little hospital is quite full;" and then she tells a touching story of a poor old man and his wife, chronic sufferers, whom, by the help of friends, she had placed in a room, such cases not being eligible for remaining in the hospital. The husband, quite a cripple, was too helpless to do anything, and in attempting to move about the room he fell, and bruised and cut himself dreadfully, so that he had to be taken to the Hospital della Consolazione. "We went," she says, "to see him on Saturday, and found him much more comfortable than when in his own room. He told the nun he was Evangelical, and did not require the priest. During the service on Sunday morning a man came to ask someone to go at once, for the poor old man was dying. One of our members went. The priest was anxious to see him, but the poor man said, 'I have Christ, and do not need anyone else.' He died soon after, leaving behind him a testimony to his faith in Christ. I heard to-day that three in that hospital had refused to confess, through the testimony of poor Morgagne."

"THE GOSPEL VAN."—This work has been very much owned and blessed of God since its commencement upwards of two years ago, and a report recently circulated by Messrs. Sylvester and Weaver shows a large circulation of Bibles, Testaments, Gospel books, and Scripture Text Cards has been effected. The way these two young evangelists have been led and blessed to the conversion of souls should call forth thankfulness and praise from the hearts of those Christians who have laboured in prayer for their success, and lead others to look up to God for a continuance of blessing upon their labours. Mr. Sylvester is at present laid aside through ill health, and special prayer is requested for his speedy recovery, so that he may join his colleague, who is now scattering the precious seed in Manchester, where a large field is open for such work.

MISSION PROGRESS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DEAR SIR,—It is some time since you heard direct from us of our work, which, of late, has been much blessed in bringing in souls for the Master. During the last few months, both men, women, and young people of both sexes have been led to acknowledge Jesus as their Saviour. The spiritual life and character of each one has greatly developed, and some are most earnest workers.

In September last an incident occurred in our midst which was the means of much blessing and stirring up of the heathen. A native, who had led a purely heathen life, grovelling in all its degraded customs, and extolling and vaunting all his pleasures and vices, was brought to the Saviour's feet, "clothed and in his right mind." A year before, his wife had been converted. Chiefly through her prayers and earnest entreaties he had been induced to come to the services, and there, Sabbath after Sabbath, he listened only to go away and scoff, much to the amusement of others like-minded with himself.

This poor heathen sinner suddenly became humbled and depressed. "What could be the matter?" said many. One Sabbath he was heard weeping and seen falling on his face. Many faces were wet with tears, and his wife sang out from the depth of her heart, "Alleluia to the Lord." After the lapse of a few weeks we saw that his heart was changed, and his great desire was to be accepted as a member. Then he was publicly received in presence of the congregation.

Before the close of the service his wife stood up and spoke something after this manner to his old associates: "Now, what do you say to the Lord's work? You all know what my husband was, how dearly he loved all the customs and heathen rites that you still follow after. You all know how strong he thought himself to be, to keep to them, and how he for a time defied the Lord. Whose work is it that has wrought this change? Will you now say, 'There is nothing in the Bible and in serving the Lord'?" She, with the other Christians, wept for joy, and sang praises to the Lord with such fervency that all present were not a little affected, and many shed tears.

On Christmas day we had our usual annual gathering, which was much larger than formerly. At our second service two young men and one young woman were received into Church membership. It was a very solemn time, and the heathen were much impressed. One old man, a youth, and a young girl, have since then come out of heathen darkness, and are desirous of joining our band of converts.

For the last six months we have had night school, three evenings in the week, for the more advanced scholars; through this fresh effort all have made greater progress, and have learned a number of new hymns. The Bible-class at the close is most interesting to them and cheering to us. The services have been so well attended that we often say our little place of worship is getting too small, and we must soon be thinking of building a larger.

Some of our thoughts and energies are now being directed towards a branch station near the coast, on some land which we have lately procured from Government. A Mission is much needed here, and we soon hope to have a good work in progress. Mr. Eyles, from the East London Training Institute, is coming to us for a time to apply himself to the language, to gain some experience amongst our people and knowledge of their ways and customs, and then go to this branch Mission, there to labour in connection with us. We have named the place "Malan Cliff," in memory of Major Malan, who was so deeply interested in this work here, and did so much for its commencement. We ask the prayers of all interested in the heathen, for this contemplated new Mission, as well as for our work here.

When I last wrote you we were busily engaged putting up a building in Harding. It was soon finished, and used by the soldiers stationed there, for upwards of two years, as a "reading-room," for improvement classes, and other meetings. On Sabbath the services were well attended, and when leaving this neighbourhood their letters and actions showed us that the "seed" had not been sown in vain. The attendance of the people in Harding and neighbourhood was always good, and, although the soldiers had now left, they wished the services to be carried on as heretofore. The Griquas there, the half-caste people whom we were then so anxious to help, have also been good attendants at their own Sabbath services. They have a day-school for their children, themselves supporting the teacher, with our providing books and occasional extras needed.

We find much comfort in the weekly perusal of The Christian. Occasionally we receive papers from unknown friends, for which we are grateful, and offer our best thanks. We trust that many of your readers may be led to help on our work in all its branches. We would rejoice to be able to employ several native evangelists. Any friends who are led to help in this Mission may communicate with Mr. J. J. Wilson, 5, New Bridge-street, Birmingham. Asking the continued prayers of the Lord's people,—Believe me to be faithfully yours,

F. E. Aitchison.

OUVRIERS OF FRANCE.

THE sale inaugurated by a number of Christian ladies in France on behalf of the Mission of Mr. McAll was held last week. Those who saw the circular issued by the committee, a translation of which we gave a short time since will be interested to know that the articles contributed were many and valuable, that the attendance on the days of the sale was large, and that the proceeds amounted to about £800. The deep interest and generosity thus manifested have been very gratifying and encouraging to our beloved friend the director of the Mission.

This sum is, however, scarcely the tenth of what is needed to meet the annual expenditure. The stations now number eighty, with a total accommodation for about 16,000 persons. Of these stations thirty are in the capital, and the remaining fifty in some twenty-eight different localities in the provinces.

MISS MACPHERSON IN ROME.

A MONTH under sunny skies has enabled me to return refreshed to my loved work amongst the children of London.

While in Rome I had the privilege of meeting with many of the Lord's dear servants, toiling on with patience amid great difficulties. I endeavoured to stir them up to increased efforts for the young in that city, who are being demoralised by the doles of visitors. I ask your prayers that hundreds of these poor lambs may be sheltered and taught to read and write, and pursue some honest industry, that they may grow up to become worthy men and women, able to earn their own bread, instead of being gamblers, liars, and thieves. What a practical Gospel this would be in the midst of the Churches! The special need is, more Italian workers who will engender the spirit of the Gospel, which is true independence, vying with each other to have their every word or action for the glory of Christ alone.

One evening I met fifty Italian workers. The presence of the Master was realised; the Holy Ghost led many to pray for an increased outpouring of power upon all their efforts. Shall we not, throughout the world, unite with these Roman Christians, that again the Apostle's word may be made good (Rom. i. 8): "First I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world." A CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

"JAMES," said a motherly woman to a young man whose first sermon she had just heard, "James, why did you enter the ministry?" "I had a call from the Lord," said the young man. And then came the reply, "But are you sure it wasn't some other noise that you heard?"

We wish this "motherly woman" had been near when certain good men, whom we will not further indicate, first went up the pulpit stairs. But as providence did not so arrange it, we beg to state that we know of a fatherly man who longs to see the aforesaid brethren receive a divine call to go back to the plough, the needle, the awl, the yard-measure, or the scales. Is it not better to attempt something you can do, than weary people with what you can't do? Is it not better to be a genuine penny than a sovereign that everybody refuses to take? It must be more glorifying to God for a man to build the walls of a barn than to pull down those of a church. Better sew cloth than rend a congregation. Better feed sheep than starve souls.

Nobody likes to say this to any one individual, but it were a consummation devoutly to be wished if the right persons would be so good as to think it for themselves. Kindness, benevolence, admiration, can in some cases do no better thing than gently say, "Dear good brother, do give yourself a fair chance of serving God. Leave off being a poor tongue, and be a dexterous hand or a watchful eye." Is there not something in the observation?—C. H. Spurgeon.

MISS LEIGH'S WORK IN PARIS.

ON Wednesday, the 21st ult., a meeting was held by the kind permission of Mr J. Sheppard, at 89, Westbourne-terrace. Rev. Canon Boyd Carpenter said he had recently seen the work of the Mission Homes in Paris, and commended it especially for the wise variety of its appeals to the common sense of Christian people in its various branches, including orphanage, home, governesses' institute, and church. It deserves and requires support in proportion to the wide charity of its scope. A friend had just offered £500, if another £1000 can be raised within two months, and he trusted Miss Leigh's hands would be strengthened by a hearty response to his challenge. The distress of our fellow-countrymen is greatly aggravated by the difference between the marriage laws of France and England. It seems imperative that the English Government should call the attention of the French Government to this abnormal state of things, affecting not only individual happiness, but the sanctity of hearths and homes, in which lies the moral and religious welfare of any people.

Miss Leigh said that among one hundred governesses who came under her notice in a short time, seventy were orphans—that is, for the most part, friendless girls. She called attention to the sad results of the English marriage laws not being recognised in France. An English lady who had been deserted by her French husband, and was left homeless, friendless, penniless in Paris, came lately under her notice. The husband lived in England on her fortune, to which his marriage in English form had entitled him, while she struggled for existence across the water, a dishonoured woman. Hearing of a sum of money left her, she contrived to come over, only to learn that her husband had already claimed it. The lonely, hopeless sorrow of a deserted woman crushed her heart; she died alone among strangers in a London Hospital. A member of the Government recently said, "We can do nothing in this matter until people show they care about it." It rests then with Christian men and women to show that they do care to remove such evils. It is proposed to petition Parliament that an Act be passed for the protection of British subjects marrying foreigners in England, requiring that such marriages should take place before the consul or at the British Embassy, as is the case abroad.

The Bishop of Huron spoke in hearty appreciation of the work, and of sympathy with Miss Leigh in her Christ-like Mission.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

HACKNEY.

A GOOD work, in connection with this movement, is being carried on in Hackney. Meetings, composed largely of working people, are held every Wednesday evening in the new Hall, Morning-lane. A large number of people have signed the pledge. Several remarkable cases of conversions to God have been the result of the meetings, which are conducted by Mr. Alfred Carlton, City Missionary, at Hackney.

WOOLWICH.

On Thursday evening, March 1, the Rev. J. E. Shephard (late of Ramsbottom) conducted a Gospel Temperance meeting in the Free Methodist Church, Beresford-street, Woolwich. At the close, it was reported that fifty-four had taken the pledge. Those who had taken the Blue Ribbon then resolved themselves into a society, electing Mr. Shephard as their president, intending to hold meetings every other week.

THE SOUTH COAST.

A Gospel Temperance Union has been organised at Broadstairs and St. Peters with very encouraging success. The sympathies of many, especially of the upper classes, who formerly held aloof, have been enlisted in the work, and the movement is rapidly spreading. A ten days' Mission has been held at Margate, some 600 ribbons having been taken at the close of the third day.

EXETER.

The Blue Ribbon Mission in this city, to which we made brief reference last week, has been continued with much enthusiasm and success. Never before in the history of Exeter has there been such a combined effort on behalf of temperance. In addition to the great meetings in Victoria Hall, the subject of temperance has been pressed on the attention of the people in various ways. A series of work-room meetings was held by permission of the principal employers of young women; factory meetings were arranged for. Mr. W. Noble, who has sustained an active part in the work, also addressed great gatherings of children. According to the latest received accounts, about 3500 new pledges had been registered.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY IN HAWICK.

At this old border town Mr. Francis Murphy commenced a Mission on Wednesday, February 21. Fresh from the health-giving breezes of the Cumberland hills, and the genial circle at Naworth Castle, he addressed a large gathering that evening in the Corn Exchange Hall. Rev. John Thomson welcomed Mr. Murphy to Hawick. He had taken part in the work both in Edinburgh and Carlisle, and could testify to the great enthusiasm that had in both these places been awakened, and to the good results that had followed. Rev. Dr. Adamson gave his personal experience of the marvellous work that had taken place in Edinburgh, as well as the results that had been achieved in Dundee, Forfar, Arbroath, and elsewhere in Scotland.

Mr. Murphy spoke for about an hour. Alternately humorous and pathetic, now with tender winning appeals, then with bursts of passionate earnestness, Mr. Murphy pressed home the truth with convincing power.

As in the opening meeting, so night after night subsequently he drew together large crowds, and held them spell-bound by his eloquent speech. The enthusiasm deepened and extended as the Mission proceeded, and great as has been the interest, it would have been much greater had he stayed a few days longer with us.

The closing meeting was held on Friday, March 2, and this was in many respects the best of all. The church in which it was held was crowded, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailed. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Douglas, the Rev. Dr. Adamson, Edinburgh, and Mr. Murphy, who gave a powerful address and bade the people an affectionate farewell.

Since the commencement of the ten days' work, 1500 new pledges have been obtained, while considerably over 3000 have donned the blue ribbon. This means, that taking into account those who formerly wore the blue, fully one-fifth of the entire population are pledged to total abstinence. It is cheering to know that not only has total abstinence from strong drink been brought to the front, but numbers have come over to the Lord's side, and have determined, in God's strength, to abstain from the very appearance of evil. That the good work may go on, and spread, and deepen till all society is leavened by its beneficent influence, is our heart's desire and prayer. THOS. MABEN.

Mr. Forbes conducted a Mission last week at Chelsea Vestry Hall. The hall was crowded nightly. Ministers of different denominations assisted in the Mission. A large number of pledges were taken.

Mr. George Blaiklock revisited Faversham last week, and conducted a week's Gospel Temperance Mission. The lecture-hall was crowded each evening. During the two Missions Mr. Blaiklock has conducted here 1500 new pledges have been taken, and 2000 ribbons donned.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

CORK.

DURING the past week successful Evangelistic services have been held here by Thomas Houston, the blind Evangelist. Much blessing has resulted.

CANNES, FRANCE.

A meeting is held every Friday at 2.30 p.m. for the study of the Word of God at Mr. Cheyne Brady's residence, Villa Celigny, Route de Grasse, Cannes.

COLOGNE.

A lady writes: "During a recent visit I paid at Cologne I had opportunity to hear of the labours of Dr. Ziemann, especially at Soest (Westphalia), that there has been much acceptance of his work for the Lord among the highly educated and refined there, and that it is much desired he should visit there again, and Cogne also."

BUNGAY.

During the past fortnight, Mr. Avers, of the Evangelisation Society, has been conducting daily services in the Mission Hall, Bungay. The afternoon Bible readings were well attended by believers, and on all sides heartfelt delight has been expressed in listening to the stirring and forcible words of the Evangelist. Deep impressions have been produced at the evening evangelistic meetings. Several, it is believed, have completely surrendered themselves to Christ.

ILLINOIS, U.S.

Mr. Thomas Harrison, the "Boy Preacher," is greatly blessed in his labours at Decatur, Illinois. Over a thousand persons have professed conversion, and there is no abatement of interest. An all-day jubilee meeting was held one day, and at the six o'clock morning service over six hundred young converts and Christians were present. People have come a hundred miles to the meetings, bringing their children, hoping they would be led to Christ.

STRATFORD.

Free tea-meetings of railway men have been convened by the Great Eastern Railway Servants' Christian Union on five successive Saturday evenings, 400 being present each time. Mr. C. Dobbin, land agent of the G.E.R., presided on each occasion, and on the last evening asked the men if they would wish to continue the meetings without the tea, to which a hearty affirmative response was given. Mr. George Williams, Mr. Arthur Pease, M.P., the superintendent of the locomotive department, as well as Mr. Wm. Taylor and Mr. Day, of the Evangelization Society, have been the speakers.

WOOTTON, WOODSTOCK.

A series of evangelistic meetings have been held here, which have resulted in much blessing to the neighbourhood. One of the workers states that at the close of the Mission she has received thirty names of converts to be enrolled in her class-book. A spirit of unbroken unity has prevailed among the friends engaged in the work; their efforts have been abundantly owned of God, both in the conversion of outsiders and the refreshing of those already within the fold.

CHURCH ARMY.

We are requested to say that there is urgent need at the services in Portcullis Hall, Regency-street, S.W., of helpers experienced in the Christian life. Numbers of seekers sit for a whole hour waiting for some one to speak to them. These are mostly men. It is hoped that some Christian men will sacrifice a few of their home comforts and go from nine to ten and give a helping hand. The police now offer full protection, and there is no danger. Rev. W. Carlile invites the help of all those who can assist in the open-air march at seven o'clock every night.

RICHARD WEAVER IN DUNDEE.

On Sabbath, Feb. 18, Richard Weaver commenced a three weeks' campaign in Dundee. The first service was held in Bell-street U.P. Church. Every night the word has been with power, and seeking souls at the close of the meetings have met a seeking Saviour.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Weaver gave an address to Christians in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, from the text, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." He illustrated the text from telling incidents which had come under his own observation, and all present felt it to be stimulating and refreshing. On Saturday evening another meeting was held in the same hall. The audience listened with marked attention as Mr. Weaver related the Lord's dealings with him, in calling him from the coal-pit to be a preacher of the glorious Gospel. On Sabbath, the 25th, meetings were held, in the afternoon in Victoria Hall, and in the evening in Bell-street Church. The word was spoken in power, to the conversion of some and the conviction of many more.

Dr. Baedeker writes to us from Berlin that he will give an account of his work in Russia, on Saturday next (10th), at the Noon Meeting, 183, Aldersgate-street, E.C. His visit has been a most interesting one.

WHAT IS MILDMAY?—What is Mildmay? Let the reader imagine one of the Moravian "settlements" abroad—shall we say Neuwied?—to be taken up bodily, and dropped down, with all ts dependencies, in an everyday London suburb; and let him imagine, further, that the various buildings—schools, hospital, orphanages, training houses, and the like—finding no room wherein to dispose themselves around their proper centre, have ended by making the best of circumstances, and settling quietly down in adjacent streets, one here and one there, as the exigencies of the case permitted—and he will have a sufficiently correct notion of what "Mildmay" means.—The Quiver.

LEARNING CHRIST.

"To learn Christ, this is "—Stepping Heavenward.

My thoughts go back this evening o'er years now passed away,
And bring again before me that unforgotten day,
When first upon my spirit this startling truth was burned:
"Our life's great crowning object is this, that Christ be learned."

I trusted his salvation, and tried to work for Him;
But love was cold and shadowy, and faith was faint and dim,
Until this single sentence, glanced over oft before,
Flashed forth with diamond brightness, to haunt me evermore.

I prayed it vaguely, blindly, not knowing what I sought;
"Lord Jesus let me learn Thee! be this great lesson taught.
I crave this sacred knowledge—I know not what it means—
Lift Thou from off my spirit the veil that intervenes."

The days flew swiftly onward, my prayer was still the same;
Then o'er my longing spirit a slow, sweet change there came.
No more a vague abstraction, a Person all unknown,
The Master stood revealed, His wondrous beauty shown.

I will not trace the history the years since then have brought
My prayer has had its answer in ways I little thought.
For when I prayed the Master to set me such a task,
Full well He might have answered, "Ye know not what ye ask?"

Dark depths of self-abasement I never knew before,
And nights and days of conflict, of anguish, deep and sore,
A frame both frail and weary, the learning brought to me.
"And am I really learning?" I questioned doubtfully.

Oh, days that were so bitter, in which I seemed to stray,
Both from my task and Teacher, and wander far away!
Oh, work I loathed when finished, so marred, and sin-defiled;
Nor marvelled that upon it the Master never smiled!

Yet has my prayer been granted; what blindly I besought,
By strange and painful lessons I know I have been taught.
But looking gravely backward, and forward too, to-night,
I crave a fuller teaching, a clearer, truer light.

There is a hidden power which is not mine as yet,
So slow am I in learning each lesson Christ hath set,
There is a closer union; there is a brighter ray
That must illume my pathway to make it "perfect day."

E'en if all further teaching be purchased at the cost
Of every earthly blessing, of all I cherish most,
I cannot choose but echo the prayer of long ago,
Although its solemn import far better now I know.

Stay, do I know its import? Perchance if He should speak,
The Master still would tell me I know not what I seek.
Of all these years have taught me, how trifling is the sum!
How weak, how empty-handed, again to Him I come.

The past has shown my weakness; may it not be at length,
The Master now will lead me to secret springs of strength?
By bitter sense of failure brought low, and humbled long,
Saviour, may I not learn Thee now as my Strength and Song?

May I not find this pathway I almost fear to tread, [instead;
Not fraught with loss and suffering, but crowned with peace
Earth's joys not wrested from me, but bathed in light Divine;
Life stronger, purer, sweeter, because my all is Thine!

DISTRESS IN WALES.

OUR friend, Mr. S. Gillespie Prout, in writing to acknowledge the funds kindly placed at his disposal by our readers, says: "Privation such as has never before been known here prevails among the oyster dredgers, who form almost the entire population of the Mumbles. During the past four months, owing to continued unfavourable winds and the dwindling of the "beds," the average weekly earnings of the men, many of them having large families, have not reached half-a-crown. In a house I was led to visit one Saturday night (where I found the sick father telling his children, who had eaten nothing since the last bit of bread for breakfast, that they must go to bed and sleep off the hunger), the earnings of the previous fortnight had been but eighteenpence. I was reliably told that one of the brave lifeboat crew who was drowned off the lighthouse rocks a month ago, had no food in the house when he left his home that dark morning to win, but by his death, the bread his wife and children wanted.

"It is, indeed, but little that I have been able to do, but nowhere can I recollect to have met with more pathetic gratitude—too full in its expression to repeat—than that little has received from these plain-spoken, independent, uncomplaining Mumbles fisher people. Their wonder that anyone should have found out their need has, to me, been singularly touching, and their undoubting and reverent, if strangely phrased, assurance that God sent the stranger to them." Mr. Prout's address is Portland-place, Mumbles, Swansea.

MR. OPIE RODWAY AT BOURNEMOUTH.

IN response to an invitation from Rev. R. Colman, and the Church under his charge at Westbourne (a suburb of Bournemouth), Mr. Rodway came here for six nights last week. The people were in a prayerful condition, and ready for the work. A resident thus writes of the blessing received:—

Many who were secret disciples of Christ have been led boldly to confess themselves on the Lord's side. Backsliders have been reclaimed. Others who were halting between two opinions have been led to decision for Christ. And, blessed be God, very many who were dead in sin have been awakened to see their lost condition, and to find in Jesus a loving Saviour, while the spirit of prayer, earnestness, and love which has rested on believers has filled us all with joy and praise.

Oh, what happiness has been brought to homes here by these meetings! Parents are rejoicing in the conversion of their children, husbands of wives, wives of their husbands, teachers of scholars, and in one instance at least children in the conversion of their aged father. These results have been brought about by no sensational means, but by the simple preaching of the grand old Gospel of Jesus Christ, accompanied by the earnest prayers and loving sympathy of the children of God.

Nearly fifty persons gave in their names at the final service as anxious to serve the Lord; many of these gave the most interesting accounts of his dealings with their souls. One man, in advanced life, stated that he had known Westbourne when only a common, and had seen its rise and progress, but had never seen such work before. He said men who had been hardened sinners had been brought to cry on their knees for mercy and forgiveness, like children, and had found peace, himself among the number.

A dear sister, whose husband had been convicted of sin at the first meeting, begged us to pray that God would lead him to come again; and in answer to our prayers he did come on the last night, and found the Lord. Never shall I forget the joy depicted on her countenance as she said, "Bless the Lord, now we shall go to heaven together."

Ask the readers of The Christian to pray for us, that we may be helped to gather in the harvest, and that blessings like these may still continue to attend the ministry of dear Mr. Rodway wherever he goes.

MODERN SENSATIONALISM IN RELIGION.—In this month's Sword and Trowel, Mr. Spurgeon says:—"It is time that somebody spoke, now that the attempt is made to make men religious by turning all religion into a game of soldiers. Because they would not hinder anything that promised well, Christian men have borne with much that grieved them, but there is a point beyond which longsuffering charity cannot go. That point is nearly reached; even the most ultra-tolerant must feel that hope has been disappointed, and fear now takes its place."

MANCHESTER Y.M.C.A.—A week's Mission has just been held here by Captain Frank Graves, of the 20th Hussars, and each evening some young men have decided to serve the Lord Jesus Christ. On Saturday week, over one hundred workers had tea together, to whom afterwards Captain Graves gave an earnest address. Much prayerful preparation has been made for the Mission by Messrs. Moody and Sankey. About 200 ministers and 100 laymen have joined the General Committee. Fifty thousand "Bible Truths" are being distributed. The meetings are arranged for the Free Trade Hall, Circus, and Y.M.C.A. Hall. W. H. N.

ISLINGTON AND HIGHBURY Y.M.C.A.

ON Tuesday week, the annual meeting of the subscribers and members of this Association was held at Myddleton Hall, under the presidency of Mr. J. Herbert Tritton. Mr. Arthur Austin submitted the balance-sheet, which showed that the total expenses of the past year, including the cost of necessary repairs to the Priory, Upper-street, had been £676 11s. 3d., of which £625 18s. 11d. had been collected. There was, however, an advance balance of £50 12s. 5d.; and, as it was no use being a treasurer without doing something, he himself had wiped that out.

Mr. J. J. Atkinson (secretary) read the annual report, which spoke gratefully of the success of the various adjuncts of the Society during the past year. The Tract Mission, the Open-air Mission at Highbury-vale and Pentonville, the debating classes, the Bible studies on Saturday evenings, Wednesday and Thursday evening addresses, the early morning meetings, and the Lodging-house Mission, had all been carried on with satisfactory results; as also had the Evangelistic Mission under Mr. Bain. The report contained many testimonies to the usefulness of the Society, and concluded by earnestly appealing for increased aid, and a special appeal to the various Churches for one collection during the year towards their valued work.

Rev. E. A. Stuart said the subject he had thought of on which to address them was "Preparation for War." They were met there that night to furbish up their arms, and he would give them the 5th chapter of Joshua, where they found great preparations for war. He would take it for granted all present had shown their manliness and devotion, and placed themselves distinctly and decidedly upon the side of the Lord; but if they were going to war, they must remember the words of Joshua to first draw the sword upon themselves before they drew it upon others. There must be personal holiness for the work to prosper. There were great fields for personal effort amongst the multitudes in the Upper-street, and in the back streets, who were living in sin and hungering for the Spirit of God.

Rev. Dr. Bevan said his earliest recollections in London were connected with the Young Men's Christian Association, when Exeter-hall was almost the only place at which their lectures were given; when he came back from America he was rejoiced to see it had fallen altogether into the hands of the Association. He would say they must be something more than receivers; there must be active virtues in their lives. Life at present seemed to be afflicted with the plague of levity; there seemed to be a great want of earnestness in the manner in which people said and did things. There was so much unreal pretentiousness in life; so much veneer in life, and character, and work, that he believed it behoved all to proclaim the Gospel of thoroughness. There was a want of thoroughness in moral character; they even had it in the miserable buildings which they saw about London. Some time since, workmen were engaged in trying to knock down a piece of old London Wall. They tried with a hammer, and then with a pick, aided by the strength of a navvy, but the wall seemed to smile at their efforts; and they had at last to have recourse to boring, and blowing it up like solid rock. They did not build like that now-a-days, for it was dangerous for a man to lean against some of the walls. There was a want of thoroughness. If young men were to have their mark upon their age and upon their work, they must be thorough in character. They must also be thorough in their religion.

Rev. J. R. Wood alluded to the good effects of the society, and thanked God there was a power in good companionship as well as in bad. He was glad to see that the young men were perpetually sending out their feelers and invitations for others to come in. It was impossible for young men, coming as strangers to London, to say nobody cared for them, as on all hands they saw the members of such Associations only too ready to take them by the hand. He thought such societies were doing much good in giving young men easy access to circles of Christian influence.

The Chairman, in reply to a vote of thanks, said it was a privilege to be at the meeting, and to hear the earnest words that had been spoken. They had heard about the want of thorough strong men. It was a want of the age everywhere, and particularly in London. They read in the Bible about strong men, and why they were so. Obed-Edom and his sons were spoken of as strong and able men; the raison d'être was that God had blessed the father, because the ark of God had rested in their house. Let them go to the Epistles, and they saw in 1 Corinthians, "Quit you like men; be strong;" and if the question was asked, "How?" let them turn to the Apostle's own answer, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." Would that they might all be thorough in taking in as well as in giving out, that they would be thorough in self-effacement in the Master's work. He ventured to prophesy for the society still greater blessings than those heretofore enjoyed, still grander results than those of which they had testimony.

Notices of Books, &c.

How to Help Cases of Distress. By C. S. Loch. Longmans & Co. A useful book of reference for the charitable and philanthropic. It furnishes information regarding emigration, training institutions, school boards, reformatories, vestries, and legal provisions for relief of every kind.

The Light of the Morning. A series of four very choice illuminated text-cards with this title are issued by Mr. J. G. Wheeler, 88, Mildmay-park, N. The texts are descriptive of different aspects of the life of Christ, and the beautifully coloured sketches of natural scenery aptly enforce the lessons to be conveyed.

India. By Rev. Ed. Storrow, formerly of Calcutta. Parts I. II., 6d each. John Snow & Co. A very valuable contribution to missionary literature, furnishing facts as to the country, its people, history, manners and customs, together with its religion, and an account of the work accomplished by the spread of the Gospel in the land. It is certain to stimulate the zeal and increase the interest of the reader in the cause of Indian Missions.

Short Readings on St. Matthew's Gospel. By G. H. A. Ryves. E. Stock. These readings are evangelical and spiritual in their tone, and often suggestive to the devout mind, but do not aim at being critical or to any great extent expository. To invalids and others incapable of close thought and lengthened reading, they will prove of service, while as a book to take up at odd moments it would be to any class of reader helpful to devotion, and refreshing to the spirit.

Sunday-school teachers have just now an opportunity of obtaining a most useful book at a nominal price. The publisher of The Teachers' Storehouse and Treasury is offering the annual volume of the work at half-price—viz., 1s., or by post, free for 1s. 4d. We advise our readers to take advantage of this offer, as the work is a storehouse of useful material for the teacher's use. The number to be sold under this arrangement is limited, and application should be made to Mr. Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

The Sunday at Home. 6d. Religious Tract Society. The current number is one of unusual interest to those who watch the progress of Christian work. The excellent "Letters from the North-West" to which we have already referred, are continued, and give a vivid glimpse of life in Manitoba, towards which the eyes of many are being directed in these days of emigration. A journalist gives a short but very readable and succinct sketch of "Drawing-room Meetings," and the important part they play in making known among the upper classes the claims of many good works. Most interesting perhaps of all the contributions is the account of Christian work among the fishermen of the North Sea, from the capable and sympathetic pen of the Secretary of the Thames Church Mission. We trust any of our readers who do not subscribe to the magazine will procure and peruse this issue.

The Great Memorial Name. By P. W. Grant. Hodder & Stoughton. This is an exhaustive treatise of more than 400 pages on the significance of the name Jehovah, as setting forth the Almighty as the God of Redemption. The reader is taken through the Primitive and Patriarchal, Mosaic, Prophetic, Messianic, and Apostolic unfoldings of the Divine Name under this aspect, and is shown how the one great purpose of all revelation has been to make known God in Christ the Divine Redeemer. In reference to all the main lines of theological truth, the book is sound and evangelical in its tone, and cannot fail to check the influence of Agnostic and Rationalistic theories on the mind of the reader who may be in any way disturbed by them. Bible students will find in it much that is helpful to a fuller grasp of inspired teaching on the true character of God, and on the proper Deity of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

Dictionary and Concordance of Bible Words and Synonyms. By Robert Young, LL.D. Geo. A. Young. English readers of the Word of God are laid under great obligation to Dr. Young for the service he has rendered them in issuing this wonderful book at a price and in a form adapted to meet the want of every one desirous of using such aid. The "Analytical Concordance," of which this much smaller and cheaper volume is a condensation, not an abridgement, has proved a priceless boon to thousands of Bible readers, but has been beyond the reach of a numerous class to whom its contents would be invaluable. Such may now have nearly all its advantages at a cost within their means, and may avail themselves of the results of the scholarship and research which the author has brought to bear upon his work. From this volume the mere English reader may at once ascertain three points of immense interest and importance: "First, the original Hebrew or Greek of any word or phrase in his English Bible; second, the nearest literal rendering of every such original word; and thirdly, every passage where the same original word is used." There is in addition a concordance to 8000 changes of the "Revised" Testament. We strongly urge all our readers to obtain and diligently use this golden "key to the hidden meaning of the Sacred Scriptures."

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton's forthcoming works for the spring season include "An Introduction to the New Testament," by the Rev. Professor J. Rawson Lumby, B.D.; "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," by Professor Henry Drummond, F.R.S.E.; "From Manasseh to Zedekiah," by Rev. Dr. Cunningham Geikie, being the new volume of "Hours with the Bible;" "The Bible: Its Revelation, Inspiration, and Evidence," by John Robson, D.D.; "Scottish Characteristics," by Paxton Hood; "Alexander Duff, D.D.;" a new volume of "Men Worth Remembering," by Thomas Smith, D.D.; "Pulpit Prayers," by Eminent Preachers, being the new volume of the "Clerical Library;" and "David Easterbrook, an Oxford Story," by Tregelles Polkinghorne. Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton will also publish shortly "The Life of Adoniram Judson," by his son, Edward Judson. It will present a consecutive narrative of the labours and sufferings of this pioneer missionary, while introducing Christianity into the Burman Empire. It will also include full descriptions of his interviews with the native king, his long confinement in the death prison at Ava, his missionary tours in the jungles, and his translation of the Bible into Burmese. Letters hitherto unpublished will throw new light upon his personal and domestic character.

Autobiography: Intellectual, Moral, and Spiritual. By Rev. Asa Mahan, D.D., LL.D. T. Woolmer.

Dr. Mahan gives us in this book, written at the advanced age of eighty-two, not so much a sketch of his life as of his opinions, and of the circumstances under which those opinions were formed. These circumstances throw considerable light upon the opinions themselves. He was brought up in America, amongst the very highest type of ultra-Calvinists. So extreme was their teaching that, when, as a young man, he was under concern for his soul, all the comfort he could get was that if he was one of the elect he would be saved; if not, there was no hope for him. They so utterly denied all thought of human responsibility that he says of himself, he thought he "was under no more real obligation to become a Christian than to become an angel;" and he adds, "in no sense or form was I responsible, that is, deserving of punishment for sin, whether original or actual."

It is not to be wondered at if such teaching led in time to a very strong reaction, and that strong Calvinist as he was for the first eighteen years of his religious life, he should have been for the latter forty-seven years as determined an Arminian. There is, however, as much of what is extreme in the views of his later, as in those of his earlier years, as those who are acquainted with his books must know. This, his latest work, much as it contains of that which is interesting, will not remove the impression that his is not a well-balanced mind, and that his judgment in matters of Scripture interpretation is not at all to be depended upon.

He candidly admits in this autobiography that when first taking up the subject of Christian Perfection (with which his name is now so associated) he did so with the feeling, "Why should not the work of emancipation then begun be rendered universal and entire? The very thought that it might be so, awakened an intense desire that it should be so." He seems quite unconscious that such a frame of mind is anything but conducive to an unbiassed judgment, for he adds further on, "No one can properly inquire whether such a doctrine is true without an ardent inward desire that he shall find it true." Apply this principle to some other subject of inquiry—say to one of the many shapes or forms in which the punishment of the lost is either denied or explained away. Can we say that, "No one can properly inquire whether such a doctrine is true, without an ardent inward desire that he shall find it true"? It were safer to say that such an ardent desire brought into the consideration of any question is much more likely to bias the mind and to lead it astray, than to guide it aright. Our desire should be to find out what is true, not that what we desire should be found to be true, for in this latter case the wish too often becomes father to the thought.

There are two subjects to the advocacy of which Dr. Mahan has devoted his long life ever since the change that came over his views at the age of thirty-five. These are Christian Perfection and the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. As to the latter, he has done good service in calling attention to the manifest blessing that ever attends praying for the Holy Spirit. Many excellent Christians have been so in the habit of thinking this to be an error, that it is a good thing to be reminded by proofs innumerable that God does "give his Holy Spirit to them that ask Him" as well after Pentecost as to the generation that sought the blessing then. In fact, the view that Dr. Mahan strongly urges that Pentecostal blessing is still to be experienced, if only sought for, is illustrated by numerous instances which he gives both of individuals and of Churches.

There is no doubt exaggeration in his way of putting it, as when he says "no doctrine can be . . . . more manifestly unscriptural than is this, that all believers are in this dispensation baptized with the Holy Ghost at the time of their conversion." This being plainly taught in 1 Cor. xii. 13. But this exaggeration, which seems inseparable from Dr. Mahan's way of stating things, does not injure the substantial truth that underlies his teaching, that it would be well for individual Christians engaged in the Lord's work, as well as for Churches, to learn experimentally the truth of our Lord's words, "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."

Of the other subject on which Dr. Mahan has written and taught so much—that of Christian perfection—it is impossible to speak with similar commendation. He has, perhaps more than any other living teacher, carried these views to an excess that recoils upon those who urge the claims of holiness in a more scriptural form. His mode of reasoning is that very delusive and unsatisfactory one called by logicians "à priori," which takes this form: "God may be reasonably expected to do such a thing, therefore we must believe that he does it." Here is a specimen in his own words: "No reason can be conceived why the one (justification) should be perfect and complete, and the other (sanctification) a marred work, a work constituted of contradictions and incompatibilities." Again, "if sin is left in the soul it will be because God chooses to let that amount of sin remain in us, rather than to have in its place perfect moral purity. It is an infinite slander upon the moral character of God to suppose that such should be his choice."

How far different from this is the true mode of inquiry, What saith the Scripture? When Dr. Mahan is tested by this, his mode of dealing with Scripture cannot be commended. He has a few favourite texts which he quotes again and again, notwithstanding that some of them have manifestly very little to do with the subject. The next which of all others cuts at the root of his perfection theory (1 John i. 8), he has persuaded himself refers not to Christians—as every legitimate principle of interpretation would demand—but to Gnostic heretics who denied "the fact and possibility of sin so far as the soul was concerned." It needs but to state this view to show how little Dr. Mahan can be trusted as an expositor of Scripture. Nevertheless, his piety and earnestness are much to be admired, and though his system of doctrine—too much the elaboration of human reason—is far from satisfactory, his life and walk and zeal for the promotion of holiness are worthy of all commendation.

BIBLE CLASSES.

DEAR SIR,—Will any of your readers kindly give me from their own experience any hints as to the most profitable way of conducting a men's Bible-class in a town.—I remain, yours truly,

WORK IN SOUTH LONDON.

SUNDAY EVENING SPECIAL SERVICES FOR THE PEOPLE.

"A CHRISTIAN ALMOST."

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to reply to a letter, by request, in your very valuable paper? I beg to say that as visitor for the Mission Services at the "Royal Victoria Coffee Hall," New Cut, Lambeth, I shall be very thankful for any copies of the above or any similar work for free distribution. I may add, that I am brought into contact with 1500 working men at the wharfs and workshops that I visit each week, besides visiting the homes of the poor, cabstands, &c.; therefore, any Christian friend who will help me to carry on the work by free grants of books, tracts, &c., will help the good work for the Master, and greatly oblige, yours faithfully,

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

DEAR SIR,—Could not more be done for the spiritual instruction of the hundreds of neglected children we are daily meeting in the thoroughfares of our large towns? We can scarcely walk along a single street without meeting some little child whose appearance makes our hearts ache. Its pale, pinched face, its tattered clothes, and alas! too often dirty condition, tell a sad, sad tale. But could we look within, and see the ignorance which reigns there, I believe we should be astonished. Could not a body of earnest Christians in each town form themselves into a society for giving temporal help and spiritual instruction to these little neglected ones? Or, could not services or classes be held in Mission-rooms or other places for these poor children? I know we have noble institutions such as Dr. Barnardo's for assisting friendless children, but the great masses of the untaught never get within their walls. More pitiable cases than those of children born and living in the atmosphere of sin can scarcely be imagined. Let us awake to more energy in these matters of vital importance. Each day sees some of these little ones launched into eternity. Shall we, who enjoy so many blessings, see these perishing and not stretch out a hand to them? See James ii. 14—17.—I am, &c., H. S.

EMIGRANTS' HOMES.

SIR,—With reference to a letter in your issue of the 22nd ultimo, I beg to point out that the writer is mistaken in saying that "hitherto there has been no proper resting-place for emigrants" during the days or "weeks of their stay in London."

Our establishment has now been in operation for a twelvemonth, and the accommodation we offer is highly approved of by Government officials who have inspected it, as well as by the Scripture-readers of "The British and Foreign Sailors' Society," and other missions, who visit our lodgers.

I enclose a prospectus of our Limited Liability Company, which—without appealing to charity—carries on a most important work on a sound commercial basis.

The Home we have already opened is going on very successfully, and we are anxious to open others, as funds are subscribed—for which funds we afford ample security—for the investment, in the way of premises, &c., and also a fair interest, with participation in the management to anyone desiring it.

We court inquiry into our plans, which have been very carefully matured, and have, moreover, been tested by experience.

HEALING BY FAITH.

DEAR SIR,—I should like, with your permission, to make some further observations on the letter of "A Disciple," in THE CHRISTIAN of the 1st inst.

Your correspondent says, "all lovers of truth will desire to see the above subject resting on a sure scriptural basis;" and, a little further on, adds, "The words in the last chapter of the Epistle of St. James stand pretty much alone as the basis upon which so much stress is laid." He also states, "My conviction is, that in some cases, healing through the prayer of faith will be granted, on the ground that 'all things are possible to him that believeth.' This is large enough and wide enough to cover the ground before us."

I would add, large enough and wide enough to cover the whole ground on which healing by faith rests; and that healing, in every case, is granted to the prayer of faith, on the truth of the promise, "All things whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." It would seem, then, from this verse, that healing is quite possible, if I only believe; but, how am I to bring myself to believe God will heal me? How am I to get faith enough to believe this? Now, I am told I am saved through faith; in other words, that I obtain that marvellous gift, eternal life, through faith, and not I only, but, "whosoever believeth in Christ." Faith, then, is God's appointed way through which everyone can obtain eternal life; either, then, I have the means for obtaining this life, or, if I have not, I must be able to get the means, for God cannot offer me gifts on impossible conditions.

But God has given me faith. I can, and do, implicitly believe those around me every hour; then I can believe God; it necessarily follows, I have the means by which to obtain healing. Certainly those who have obtained eternal life have the means; for which, I ask, is the greater miracle of the two, or which requires the greatest outputting of Almighty power, the recreation of Divine life in a dead soul, or the putting an increase of life into limbs and organs, not dead, but only diseased through insufficient life?

We, however, put the burden upon God and say, "surely we must ask in submission to God's will;" but God returns the burden to our own shoulders, and says, "if thou canst believe." Our Lord was a constant listener; we may rightly believe then in everything He asked his Father's help and guidance; and when He was asked to heal did he ever hesitate to do so? What was his usual reply? Not, "I will do it if I find 'tis good for you;" or, if I find 'tis God's will; but "if thou canst believe," and when those who asked were healed, He said, not "it was because it was good for you," or, "because it was God's will," but, "your faith has made you whole." From Genesis to Revelation I read of wonderful deeds being wrought, and of wondrous promises obtained; and by what power? Only by not staggering at the mighty promises of God. Without faith it is impossible to please God, but with faith God is so well pleased that to it nothing is denied.

The fact is, it is God's will to give us health, for it is certainly a good thing, and God says He will withhold no good thing from those who walk uprightly, and must necessarily be included in the all things which I am told are mine; and, if I have faith as a grain of mustard seed, if I will but exercise the faith of which I have shown all are possessed, whatsoever I shall ask, if I but believe I receive it, I shall have it, and nothing shall be impossible unto me. But if I stagger at the promises for lesser while grasping the infinitely greater blessings, no wonder I do not comprehend the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, of the love of Christ in all its fulness; a love which his life on earth showed extended to the body. If, on the other hand, by faith, I fully open my heart to the glorious assurance that I am loved as God's only Son; that I dwell in God, and God in me; that my body is the temple of the Holy Ghost; if I draw on this life and strength; I shall find a power in me overcoming life-long sins; I shall find, if the Spirit of Him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in me, that He that raised up Christ from the dead also quickens my mortal body (which the verse before tells me is dead) by his Spirit that dwells in me, to be an instrument of righteousness unto God, to bring forth fruit, not as I did formerly unto death, but unto God; and, with this, for the object of sickness is now fully accomplished, I may find also a far more glorious and wonderful revolution, for, observe, I have now my Creator dwelling in me always, and with Him that power in my body by which Christ wrought his works of healing.

I may find, also, if I will but claim it by faith in the members that are now yielded to God, a power before which sickness must flee; whether suddenly, or by degrees, as God orders. And this is strictly in accordance with the teaching of Scripture—see, for one example, Job xxxiii. Here, after God has spoken once, and twice, and the man has not perceived, God afflicts with strong pain, &c.; then, if the sickness has opened the ears of the sufferer, if there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, to show unto him God's uprightness, God is favourable unto him, and says, "deliver him from going down into the pit, I have found a ransom;" margin, atonement; which suggests a beautiful, and correct idea of the purpose of sickness. "I have found an at-one-ment; the man and I are at one, henceforth he will yield himself to Me as a servant of righteousness; his flesh shall be fresher than a child's, he shall return to the days of his youth."*

But, it will be asked, how is it, then, so many of God's dear children are laid aside, perhaps for years, by sickness? In the first place I would observe faith cometh by hearing. There are plenty to object to the doctrine of healing by faith upon the slightest acquaintance with it, but few to lay it before poor sufferers; and, instead, they are taught to believe it is God's will concerning them that they should continue sick. Our Saviour taught that his followers would have to take up their cross daily, must have tribulation, must suffer persecution, probably peril, famine, nakedness, &c.; but where shall we find He taught his followers they were to continue in sickness? But we do find that He healed all that were sick, that a certain passage in Isaiah might be fulfilled, viz., Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses; clearly showing his purpose with regard to sickness. I also find that his last injunction to his disciples was to observe and do whatsoever He had commanded them; and I do find his disciples, amongst others, diligently observed the command of healing the sick, and healed everywhere. Miracles may not be necessary now, but I cannot see who is to decide they are not. Apart from healing, miracles were of rare occurrence, but in connection with it of daily and hourly occurrence; and what our Saviour commanded to be observed 1800 years ago surely ought to be observed with his other commands now.

Again I would observe, Is it not to be feared that what St. Paul says to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. iii. 1-3, applies to Christians as a body now? He says, "I could not speak to you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, for ye are carnal; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and factions, are ye not carnal, and walk according to man?" showing that, if these things exist amongst us, we are not walking according to the Spirit, and is it to be wondered at then, if, as a body, we do not know the mind of the Spirit (who we are promised shall guide us into all truth) concerning healing of the body. Again, if there are factions in the body of Christ, if one member suffers all the members do not suffer with it, consequently, there is not united prayer amongst us for the relief of individual sufferers, and they are left almost alone to struggle on without that wondrous help and comfort that such united prayer would give.

I do not speak of it in unkindness, or complainingly, but though I have been an invalid many years, never, till recently, when two dear friends offered to do so, have I had prayer for my recovery volunteered; and if others only knew the wonderful help that this voluntary offer has been to me I feel sure many would offer like help to their suffering friends. It seemed as though I had been told "the set time is come;" and, certainly, ever since I have felt a gradual improvement. And if the few imperfect ideas here written should help to encourage any, or in any way clear their ideas on the subject of healing by faith, may I ask their prayers that God would speedily accomplish the work He has begun, that another witness may be added to the faithfulness of his promises.

I should like to have made a few remarks on the use of means and anointing, but I have already trespassed far too much on your space. In reply, however, to your correspondent's query as to whether we can yet dispense with the power wielded by Medical Missions, I would say, and I do not intend it unkindly, that we never shall be able to dispense with them so long as those who inquire into the subject say, when a little further inquiry would prove the incorrectness of the statement, that "the words in the last chapter of the Epistle of St. James stand pretty much alone as the basis on which so much stress is laid" by those who advocate "healing by faith."—I am, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

Mr. and Mrs. GEORGE SOLTAU.

TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Sir,—In The Christian for June 29th, 1876, under the head of "Mission Changes" appeared a letter from my hand announcing the fact that Mr. and Mrs. George Soltau had been led by the Lord to give themselves to the work of Governor and Lady Superintendent of our Village Homes at Barking-side, Ilford, Essex. From that time to this date, now nearly seven years, these dear friends have laboured with me on behalf of the children in a manner which is beyond all praise; indeed, no words of mine can describe the untiring devotion with which these beloved coadjutors have thrown themselves into the work which they undertook for the love they bare our Lord Jesus Christ. Now it is sad even to think of their leaving the sphere of service in which so many happy years have been spent, and upon which they have impressed indelibly the influence of their godly and devoted lives, but such a change is alas! imminent, and it becomes my duty to give the fact and its cause publicity.

During the past two years it has been growingly manifest that Mrs. Soltau's health was being seriously affected by the constant strain of the village work. They both struggled hard against the necessity for breaking the ties that bound them to the village, but at length by medical advice they feel compelled to relinquish a post where so large a share of the work necessarily falls upon the Lady Superintendent, feeling certain that the God who led them to the work is now as clearly leading them to leave it.

Although it mitigates not a little the sadness of saying "farewell" to know that their regret at leaving is as deep as my own, yet, as may be imagined, my heart is indeed very sore as I contemplate the great gap that their removal will create. I can only cast myself afresh upon the Lord, and beseech Him of his great goodness and mercy to raise up others who shall be qualified to take the place of these his servants. Mr. and Mrs. Soltau will probably remain until after our annual meeting, the 6th of June, but by that time we must have those who will be prepared to consecrate themselves to this work of our Saviour Christ among his little ones.

You, dear Sir, who so often open your pages to appeals for money and practical sympathy of another kind for all sorts of Christian work, will perhaps find place for this somewhat lengthy letter, which is intended also to serve as an appeal that others suitable for the post may be led to offer themselves.

It is not possible here to describe fully the nature of Mr. and Mrs. Soltau's work at Ilford. The daily instruction of the dear children in Scripture was with Mr. Soltau a labour of love, besides which, many meetings were regularly held with the "mothers" and others in the village, and visits of Christian sympathy, counsel, and instruction were frequently given. At the same time the reins of general government were held in a firm, loving grasp, which knew how to reprove in wisdom as well as to encourage the large family of little folk and the community of co-workers committed to his charge. But, far beyond the circle of our own village, the whole neighbourhood, I may say, for miles round has felt the influence of his powerful ministry in the Gospel, and sanctified example.

Of Mrs. Soltau's powers of organisation, of the thoroughness with which everything she undertook was done, of her complete acquaintance with the perplexing details of a work whose burdens every year became greater, of that wise and comprehensive survey that could grasp the whole aspect of a subject, and yet omit not one of the minutest details, I need not here write, for no one who has known her within the past 6½ years in connection with any of the many departments of the village work, but must have felt that in a very peculiar sense she was singularly adapted for the post she so ably filled. From the foregoing some idea may be formed of what I shall lose by their departure. Now I shall have to begin over again those minute details of management, which for years I have left with such delight and happy confidence in their hands, but what will my loss be compared with that which the children and the "mothers" at Ilford will realise, who every day, and almost every hour of the day, could go with each burden and little anxiety or perplexing matter to find in those dear friends, advice, loving sympathy, or wise reproof?

My only comfort is the belief that the Master who led these his servants in 1876 to the work and has sustained them throughout, and made them a comfort and a succourer of many, will graciously, and in his own good time and way, fill their vacant places.

To this end I earnestly invite an interest in the prayerful remembrances of all who love our work for the Lord Jesus Christ. More I must not now say. Indeed, I ought to apologise for taking up so much of your space, but I could not write less on so interesting and important a theme.—I am, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

MISSIONS TO MOSLEMS.

Sir,—It is a great pleasure to me to see your columns open to correspondence on the subject of Missions to Mohammedans, and to find in your pages so much information on a matter of so great importance to the Church at large. I am very sensible of the importance of Medical Missions and Christian schools such as those referred to by Mr. J. E. Mathieson, and Mr. Ferguson, of Kinmundy, and I most cordially wish them all support, encouragement, and success. But is it not sad to find, notwithstanding, such testimony borne by those very competent to bear witness, as was borne by speaker after speaker at the recent Missionary Conference in Calcutta, to the effect that there is, after all, so very little of direct and systematic work among the Mohammedans, and that what is done is mostly indirect and at great disadvantage?

We ought to be thankful for any kind or degree of work done for the Gospel in the field of Islam, however imperfect it may be. But how does it come to pass that in Bengal (for example), "although the greater half of the Mohammedans in India are resident in that presidency, there is not a single missionary entirely devoted to their evangelisation?" This fact was brought out by an experienced missionary at the Conference referred to (and testimony of a like kind could be given as to Missions to Moslems in almost every place where Moslems are), while another of the speakers urged the necessity of "men to be specially devoted to the work among Moslems," for the sake especially of being able to get acquainted with their sacred language, and their sacred book and its literature.

The Moslems, most assuredly, have not to so large an extent been abandoned by Christian Missions without some good reason. There are peculiar and great practical difficulties in the way, that it is not needful to go into now. And, knowing these, it is cheering to hear such words of hope in this cause as are held always by Rev. Mr. Hughes, of Peshawar. But the cause of the extension of evangelisation among the Moslems is one, nevertheless, which requires to be well considered. To "make an attack on Islam all along the line" at present, as was suggested the other day by a zealous friend of Missions in the North, without some careful survey of the field, would not be good missionary policy. There is great need, assuredly, of earnest prayer and patient waiting upon God on the part of all believing Christians with special regard to this matter, when the friends of Missions have practically found cause—if not to flee before their enemies—yet, at least, to abstain from advancing to any purpose against them (we speak only so far as Moslems are concerned).

There is a great want of full and well-digested information regarding the peculiarly difficult attitude of Moslems hitherto towards all the approaches of Christian Missions. And it seems to us that while Medical Missions and Christian schools ought by every means to be helped and encouraged, and importunate prayer persevered with, something additional should yet be undertaken in the way of full and patient, systematic, sympathising inquiry, viewing the problem of Missions to Moslems on all sides. There might, by-and-by, be something of organised inquiry of this sort. But, meanwhile, I for one am disposed to thank you, Sir, for calling attention so prominently to this great subject, and shall continue to view with interest every further measure of light which you or your correspondents may be able to cast around it.—I am, &c.,

THE WHITE FIELDS OF ENGLAND.

An Entreaty to Communicants.

By REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? And who that reflects can fail to observe that the gross state of our large towns arises very much from their being grossly neglected by us communicants. Their sad state is patent to every observing foreigner whom business brings into the midst of us, and he naturally looks with contempt and abhorrence on what he styles our "Christianity."—Extract.

Captain R. Wade Thompson, Clonskeagh Castle, co. Dublin, by whom Contributions will be thankfully received and acknowledged.

The Committee of the Dublin Soldiers' Home and Institute desire to bring their case before the English public, in the hope that those who take a real interest in the welfare of our soldiers will come to their assistance at the present juncture.

The Institute established six years ago, has been almost entirely supported by friends in Ireland, but owing to the sad state of the country during the last two years, and the embarrassment many have been placed in, they are not able to continue their subscriptions, and in consequence the Committee regret to state that they are in debt over £300, but feel confident when this appeal is known among the English friends of the British soldier they will approve its object and sympathise and support them.

It is unnecessary to state the objects of a Soldiers' Institute, as there is one in almost every garrison town in England. The mode of carrying out these objects is identical in all important points with Miss Daniel's Soldiers' Institute at Aldershot. A special feature, however, in connection with the Dublin Home is the sleeping accommodation provided for soldiers passing through the city on furlough, a most essential adjunct, as Dublin is the thoroughfare to all the garrison towns in Ireland, and soldiers have found the greatest difficulty and often impossibility in getting a respectable, quiet or decent lodging while on furlough.

The present sleeping accommodation of the Home is entirely insufficient for the demand in the "Furlough Seasons:" so much so, that for the last two years, during each "furlough," hundreds of soldiers have had to be turned away for want of room, while on several occasions many have been thankful to be allowed to lie on the floor of the Bar or Coffee-room, rather than remain in the streets all night, which seemed to be the only alternative. During the present winter, the Committee have been obliged, at great inconvenience, to turn a portion of the Lecture Hall into a Dormitory, but they earnestly trust that before the Furlough Season of 1883-4 commences they may be able to add to their present premises, so as to supply the necessary accommodation. The estimated cost of the proposed new wing is about £1200, and already over £200 of this sum has been received. It is earnestly hoped that friends in England, who approve of the objects aimed at, will come to the help of the Committee in their present need. The addition, if once erected, would be self-supporting. The importance of such accommodation to the soldiers cannot be over-estimated.

The Home contains Reading-room, Game and Smoking-room, Bar and Coffee-room, Dormitories, Single Beds for 6d. each, private room for Married Men at 1s. 3d.
Lecture Hall in which Meetings are held.
Lectures given on Total Abstinence.
Bible-classes every evening and on Sunday.
Evangelistic addresses in the afternoon and evening.

It is the earnest desire of the Lady Superintendent, and of all who take an interest in this work, that those who frequent the Home should not only receive the benefit of the temporal advantages offered, but that, if they have not already accepted Him as their Saviour, they may be led to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Lord has hitherto richly blessed these efforts, and that He may continue to do so is the earnest prayer of all concerned in this work for his glory.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

BRONCHO-PHTHISIS.—CASE OF MR. C. E. GRAY.

This patient, who is a draper at Hemel Hempstead, first came to Coombe Lodge September 29, 1881 (about seventeen months ago), recommended by Rev. J. Rawlings, minister of the Baptist Chapel, Hemel Hempstead, and late of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's College, and by the pastor of the Congregational Church where he was a deacon.

The history of the case was this:—"Patient of consumptive family. Illness had commenced twelve months before, with violent pains in the chest, want of energy, thorough prostration. Consulted Dr. D.; after improving a little, relapsed into his former condition; then taking a severe cold, a harassing cough came on, the expectoration increased, became purulent, and blood was mingled with it; soreness of the chest, pains in the shoulders, breathing short on the slightest exertion, and great irritation of the throat.

This patient received full advice from me, and the correspondence continued for twelve months, terminating in his complete recovery. I have just unexpectedly received the following letter from him:—

"C. E. Gray would like Mr. Congreve to publish the great good his medicine has done him. The cough was dreadful, with raising blood and extreme prostration. In a fortnight my cough was better; in a month or two I resumed business; now I am as well as ever I was in my life. I have given your medicine and liniment (as prescribed for me) to many persons, to whom it has proved most valuable, certainly it has saved my life. I lose no opportunity to speak of it."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

A BROKEN HEAD versus A BROKEN HEART.

There is an anecdote told of Whitefield when at Exeter, where his preaching provoked in a man who was present such an extraordinary degree of anger that on the next occasion he loaded his pockets with stones, with the intention of injuring him; but instead of doing so he listened, and after the sermon was finished he went up to the preacher, and said to him, "Sir, I came here to hear you this day with a view to break your head, but the Spirit of God has given me a broken heart"! and his after-life proved this to have been a case of real conversion. FOXE'S

BOOK OF MARTYRS.

(With Illustrations).

A Complete and Authentic Account of the Lives, Sufferings, and Triumphant Deaths of Primitive and Protestant Martyrs in all parts of the World.

At a time like the present, when, in Great Britain, Popery and its evil progeny Ritualism are both insidiously and openly seeking to gain the supremacy, it is necessary to the well-being of our country that the story of "FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS" should be regarded as an essential part of the education of our children.

From these pages we can learn what Popery has been in the past, even in our own land; and from the record of the past we can fairly judge as to what it would be if again in the ascendant.

The issue of the present edition at a low price and in the convenient form of MONTHLY PARTS (18 parts at 6d. each), places this valued book within the reach of almost everyone.

BOGATZKY'S

GOLDEN TREASURY

Of Texts for the Children of God.

A Series of Scripture Texts and Meditations for every Day in the Year.

"BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY" has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books, except the Pilgrim's Progress, have been so largely circulated or so widely read. I will surprise many to learn that more than a century and a half has elapsed since the first publication of this valued volume. The success of the book is not yet over. It is hoped and believed that another generation will derive spiritual instruction from a volume which has been richly blessed to the one now passing away, as well as to generations which have previously "crossed the flood."

Dr. Cranage's undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington, Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. PRIVATE TUITION must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that

MAGNETO-ELECTRICITY.

"He is not the discoverer who first utters a truth, but he who says it again and again until he compels mankind to hear him!" So said Sydney Smith.

The importance of a discovery should make its persistent advocacy a duty, and the facts in support of it should be intelligently advocated, so as to be appreciated and accepted.

Can any discovery be more important than one that relates to the physical and mental well-being of man?—a discovery derived from the Creator's own provision for man's wants, by which all the faculties are rendered capable of correctly performing their respective duties. Whoever doubts the possibility of so strengthening the physical powers as to enable them to overcome the tendency to chronic ailments, should read the following statements, and while doing so keep before their minds the fact that the essential curative value of any or all of the forms of electricity hitherto employed in the art of healing are centred in that form of it termed Magneto-Electric.

If this statement came from a mere theorist or speculatist, it might be open to question, but as I have names of undoubted authority in support of the facts, they remain still stubborn things, too stubborn to be talked down.

From Mr. J. ROBINSON—

"36, Dungiven-road, Londonderry, Jan. 1, 1883.

"Sir,—I received your letter containing a tractate on Healing by Faith, and while I approve of much that some teach concerning healing by faith, I must say that you deserve some praise and many thanks for your 'Magnetic treatment.' It is more than one year since I stated my case to you, and you then sent me a Magnetic Suit. By God's blessing your treatment has cured me, and this day I am a new man, better in health than I have been for years. My nervous system is good. My hair, which was falling off, ceased to do so; it was also turning grey, and that also ceased, I became dark again: so much for second means, 'faith and works.' You may use this report of mine, which contains facts. I only wish that I could extend a knowledge of the means amongst those who are suffering. Wishing you, Sir, a happy new year, and that you may be very successful in curing many, who, like me, were nearly past curing, and your reward will be thanks from thankful hearts.—I am, your obedient servant,

"J. Robinson."

From J. BASHAM—

"Bassaley, Newport, Mon., Dec., 1882.

"I am very happy in being able to state that before I left London on the Thursday after I was with you on the Monday, I was very much better, and have improved ever since; so much so that the pain in my leg is entirely gone. I have put aside the appliance, but have it in readiness if the pain returns; at present my leg and knee are as strong as ever.

"Some time since Mrs. Basham informed you that she had not suffered from flatulent spasms, and had had very little indigestion with its consequent and distressing symptoms since wearing the Nerve Invigorator.

"I have now to add that the additional help you sent by me for her has effected a wonderful change for the better; she is now able to take any kind of food with impunity, and has not been so well for years past as at present.

"I have the satisfaction of seeing others similarly benefited by your treatment, which leads me to say that you can rely upon our recommendation whenever opportunity occurs."

Copy of letter from Mrs. PRICE to Mr. Brown—

"9, Alexander-street, Stanley-park, Liverpool,
"Oct. 17, 1882.

"My dear Sir,—I have your favour of yesterday. I am delighted to reply thereto, because, first, I know what suffering is, and secondly, because I shall derive real solace if I can be of any use to another sufferer. After suffering for years, and spending time and money, and trying this nostrum and another, I at last through a lady once bed-fast (but since married) heard of B. C. Garratt's Odo-Magnetic Appliances, purchased one, shortly after the use of which I felt a different man. I still wear it; it is not the least inconvenience, not any more so than the ordinary chest protector. One thing, though, I should like to impress you with; I would not purchase any other than B. C. Garratt's; others are in the market here in Liverpool. I am confident if you purchase it, put it on, and wear it you will soon find relief.

"Had it not been I am very busy here at the office, I would have written more. Don't ... state a moment: it is the remedy in the hands of God for indigestion and all its concomitant evils. I should be delighted to hear again from you, and think it no trouble; therefore do not spare me. Believe me, yours faithfully,

"Mr. J. Brown." "(Signed) J. Price.

Experience has demonstrated how marked and speedy as well as permanent, are the benefits obtained by a large class of chronic sufferers, whose ailments have been pronounced incurable. See list of 800 patients to whom reference is permitted.

BACKBONE.

AMONG the evils from which the Church of Christ is suffering much in these days, indefiniteness and indistinctness of religious thought and belief is one of the most prominent. The drift of the age in this respect seems to be in the direction of looseness and unsettledness. Questioning truth, and holding it in solution, rather than substantiating and reducing it to solid form, appears to be the prevailing tone of modern feeling as to points of doctrine and matters of faith. The sacredness of truth, and the claims of revelation to assert in fixed and dogmatic form its inspired and inspiring facts, are but lightly regarded; many live, in consequence, emasculated and impotent lives, so far as spiritual power and influence are concerned.

A leader in the columns of The Times the other day, in reference to the present state of political parties, said:—

> Nothing is more remarkable than the complete extinction of that keen interest, that intense faith, and that eager hope which manifestly inspired the politicians of half a century ago, and made their influence felt among all classes of the community, and, again, the public has learned to look with easy and almost contemptuous indifference on the professions and outcries of both parties, and the reason is, that neither side at present possesses convictions of the kind that lay hold upon men's minds. There is a great deal of earnestness in politics, but very little of sincerity. Any principle is good enough to be trotted out for the purpose of making a point against an opponent, but none is great enough to command the loyal and unswerving obedience of its advocates alike in Office and in Opposition.

The same words would apply to much of our religious teaching through the Pulpit and Press; and the fact largely accounts for the indifference of masses of outsiders to sacred themes and Church systems. Truth has come to be looked upon through the kaleidoscope of speculation rather than the telescope of faith, and so it is supposed to be anything and everything by turns, rather than as it really is, the harmonious and uniform transcript of the mind of God. The result is a loosened and loosening hold on the public confidence and interest in relation to our Churches and their ministries.

Men in this age of earnestness and push require something clear and definite to be put before them, and it is not so much the general public who are intolerant of dogmatic forms of thought on religious subjects, so long as they are supported by a show of reason and solid argument, as the half-hearted believers and timid or careless apologists, who either neglect serious investigation and reflection on the teachings of the inspired Word, or else hesitate to avow their convictions if they have them, or their real scepticism if they have them not.

The tame and vapid essayings on high and holy themes, which go round about the truth rather than enter into its depths, weary and disgust the minds of men who have to do with the stern realities of life, and whose hearts secretly sigh for some solid ground for faith to rest upon. The neutral tints which many strive now-a-days to give to their presentation of the Gospel of God have no charm for the practical and utilitarian spirit of the age in which we live; hence men turn away from teachers who lack the accent of conviction, and brand the multitude of lukewarm professors with insincerity or unreality in their beliefs.

The early Apostles and preachers of Christ adopted no apologetic or hesitant tone in their testimony to his grace and declaration of his truth; boldness and assurance characterised all their work. "We believe, and therefore speak," was their unvarying principle and rule of action. It would be well for all of us who are enlisted in the service of Christ to pause awhile, and, in all solemnity of purpose, to ask ourselves what we believe? how far we believe? and why we believe? so that in each case, as Christian workers, we may know precisely the position we occupy in relation to the truth of God. Better one clear unmistakable truth, definitely asserted, and honestly and earnestly believed, than twenty others half understood, and uncertainly held.

For unprejudiced inquirers, who come to the word of God with simple, child-like minds, there is no occasion to remain in ignorance or even semi-enlightenment on any great truth of our holy religion; the promise, "He shall guide you into all truth," is for ALL who come to that infallible standard of appeal and unerring source of light, seeking and depending upon the Holy Spirit's aid. None therefore need be deterred from the inquiry by a consciousness of weakness, or a fear of inability to arrive at safe conclusions. If every one who professes implicitly to trust Christ as a Saviour would with equal implicitness trust Him as a Teacher, indefiniteness and indistinctness of thought on the truth He reveals would soon be taken from them. "None but Jesus," for the salvation of the soul, suffices to give assurance and rest, clearness and force to the heart, and its confession unto salvation. "None but Jesus" for the mind in its search after truth, and sure anchorage for confidence in matters both of doctrine and of practice, would also suffice to bring many a wavering one to firmness and assurance, clearness and liberty, in reference to mental conviction, and verbal testimony to the verities of God.

And it is just here that we stand in greatest need of revival and awakening. The Church can only regain its power in the midst of and over the world by presenting to it the aspect of a company of believers animated by an intelligent faith which will not shrink from outspoken avowal of its well-ascertained convictions, aspirations, and hopes. Signs are not wanting of a movement within the Church which will compel a rallying together of the whole-hearted and the true-hearted confessors of the "faith once delivered to the saints," and that around the common centre of belief in a plenary inspiration and a divine Christ, in the power of a spiritual experience, and uncompromising adherence to spiritual truth.

The spirit of doubt and so-called free-thought which obtains in many Christian communities threatens to eat out the life of Christianity altogether, even as it destroys all evangelistic fervour and force, and it can only be met by an earnest, prayerful resolve on the part of all who believe that Christianity is directly come from God, and that it contains within itself the only remedy for human sin, as well as the only possible solution of questions which vitally affect the eternal destinies of man, to make their grasp of its great principles, and their faith in its eternal truth, too firm to be loosened, and too sure to doubt. In another paper we hope to show the tone we deem essential on the part of the ministry to gain the ear and reach the heart, more widely, of the world.

THE CHINA INLAND MISSION has just received a sum of £3,000 as an anonymous contribution to its funds for foreign work.

OUGHT GOVERNMENT TO RECOGNISE GOD?

THIS is a question that current events compel us to regard with earnest and careful consideration. As Christians we cannot fail to see that our relations to it are of a special character, and our responsibilities of solemn weight. It appeals to us not as pertaining to the political programme of a party, but as affecting the glory of Him whose name and cause are paramount, and admit no rival claim.

Thus far in our history as a nation we have always recognised the Divine Being as the Almighty King of kings, to whom all monarchs and governments, judges and magistrates, are responsible. We have for centuries enjoyed the Divine favour beyond any other nation on the earth, and been identified, nationally, in the eyes of the world, with the confession of the Divine name and the possession of that Sacred Word which our beloved Queen once declared to be the secret of England's greatness. Hitherto it has been held that an avowal of belief in a Supreme Being was essential to holding rank as a member of our Legislature. If men of atheistic sentiments have gained admission there, it has not been with the connivance of the State, but in violation of its statutes, and by a course of evasion for which they themselves alone are responsible. Now we are threatened with a change of all this. A Bill is to be passed removing the necessity for any belief in God, or recognition of his existence, on the part of our national representatives and law-makers. He, by whom kings reign, and princes decree justice, is no longer in our Senate to be looked upon as essential to righteous rule and wise administration. Government is to be divorced from God, and that which disowns his very existence is to be legalised by special Act on its behalf.

The question therefore cannot be shirked, least of all by those to whom God is a reality and his service a delight. We are told the question is a difficult one, that political freedom should be extended to all, irrespective of creed or religious opinion; that religion is a spiritual matter pertaining to another and a higher sphere than the political world can take cognizance of. This reasoning seems to us beside the mark. The question is not whether the State shall pronounce upon a man's religious opinions, or endorse this, that, or the other form of belief; but shall the State proceed in its action upon the assertion of belief in God as a fact inseparable from its constitution, or shall it abandon this position, and so altogether shift the ground of our national policy? The difference is great between recognising one or other varying forms of belief in God, and no God at all.

Besides, in such an inquiry, we are surely bound to ask what is due to the Creator, as well as what some may deem due to a portion of his creatures who choose to disown his existence. The question cannot be limited to a political sphere, but takes of necessity a far wider range. This was recently shown by one who spoke from the opposite side altogether to our own, and it is important to notice that those for whom this special legislation is proposed rejoice in the movement, not merely or mainly for its political bearing, but on account of the triumph of their religious, or rather irreligious, sentiments, which it tends from their own point of view to herald and promote. In a sermon by Mr. Henry Crompton, delivered in the Church of Humanity, Lamb's Conduit-street, referring to Mr.

Bradlaugh's position in relation to the House of Commons, the speaker said :—

What I wish to point out is, that this struggle is by far the most important work that has been done in Parliament for many years, because it has been gradually instructing the mass of the people, who had never thought on the subject, what the real nature of the transition is. The lesson is being taught throughout the kingdom and throughout Europe that all theological restrictions and theological rule have almost ceased to be; that theology henceforth has nothing to do with government, either industrial or political, nothing, in fact, to do with the direction of human activity. So far from wishing for a speedy settlement of the question, the prolongation of the struggle has been most desirable, as preparing and ripening the public mind for the great changes that lie before us in the future.

Are we prepared for these changes? Can we accept such a conclusion? May we take action in favour of a step tending in such a direction, or remain silent and inactive, though it may be saddened, spectators of the action of others? If, as Englishmen, we heard measures proposed and saw steps being taken to deprive our sovereign of her prerogatives, and to permit haters of her person, and enemies of her reign, to be raised to posts of honour and responsibility in the realm, we should indignantly repudiate the action taken, and clear ourselves of all complicity by denouncing those concerned in it as traitors to the throne. Allegiance to God should surely lead those who are his servants to resist attempts to dethrone Him from his kingly seat in our midst, and to resent the insult to his name which legalised atheism flings in his face.

We assert, unhesitatingly, Government ought to recognise God, and the legislation required at this juncture, if any is required at all on the matter, is, as we believe Lord Redesdale suggested in the Upper House some months ago, a renewed declaration that avowal in the belief of a Divine Being is essential to a seat in the English Parliament. Never did our nation stand more greatly in need of Divine guidance, protection, and beneficence than now, and we believe never was its relation to the God of all good more seriously imperilled or its own best interests more solemnly endangered.

Mr. Gladstone is reported to have said during his stay at Cannes, "No progress can be real and lasting in a nation which has not deep religious convictions." The progress aimed at by this Affirmation Bill certainly has not these, and we cannot believe, widely as error and unbelief prevail to-day, that the country, if appealed to on this vital question, would decide in favour of its action. It may be that public opinion runs strongly in the opposite direction, that we are helpless to prevent the swelling tide of atheistic sentiment and influence. Be it so; the signs of the times undoubtedly are portentous and dark, the hosts of evil are evidently gathering thick and strong to the fray, and sharply will the battle rage. But all the more should the servants of Christ, as "children of the day," "cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light." Let us stand firm to our faith, and be found contesting and repudiating to the last point the claim of infidelity to displace the Most High. Let us not be deterred by a false cry of narrowness and intolerance concerning such a line of action on our part. This is no question, we repeat, of rival sects or conflicting creeds of religious faith. Where God is reverenced and his Word consulted, let there be the fullest liberty of thought and action conceded, but charity ceases to be charitable when it extends the hand of sympathy and co-operation to that which all history shows to have ever been pernicious in the extreme to the social, moral, and even political interests of humanity.

What did atheism do for France, when, in obedience to the dictates of Voltaire and his coadjutors, her people abandoned themselves to its influence, and placed the reins of government in its hands? Let the dark page of the French Revolution and all its attendant horrors answer the question. What is it doing for ourselves now? Let the recent case of the prosecution of The Freethinker aid us in our reply—poisoning the minds of young and old by its ribald blasphemy, and insulting the good taste of all moral refinement, to say nothing of sacred belief, by its revolting caricatures and gratuitous insults of Him whom believers and unbelievers alike have looked upon as the greatest Teacher and purest Exemplar the world has ever known.

Infidelity, in the nature of things, all history being witness, saps the foundations of law and order, overleaps the barriers of truth and righteousness, and invades the liberties of man, as it disowns the claims of God. Surely, then, the Christian elector can have no part with the infidel, nor ought to be found upholding in any way his cause. In all matters affecting his just rights and claims as a citizen, so far as his personal position is concerned, let justice be equally accorded to him as to ourselves, and as a man let us extend to him the goodwill and the kindly offices we should to any others where it is in our power to do so. It is not a spirit of hostility to him which prompts our position in this question, but to the action he takes in reference to what to us is dearer than life. In reference to his character and standing as an infidel we dare not, cannot, take any other position than that of entire separation. The voice of the inspired Apostle rings in our ears the old injunction, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?" (2 Cor. vi.)

As lovers of God, as loyal subjects of the State, and as those to whom the prosperity of our country is dear, let us be found on the side of uncompromising adherence to the fundamental principle of all good government, that God shall be recognised, and his kingdom acknowledged, as ruling over all.

CIVIL SERVICE PRAYER UNION.

THE members of this Union entertained upwards of six hundred messengers in H.M. Civil Service at Exeter Hall, on the evening of the 7th inst. Such a hearty response to the invitations issued was most cheering and encouraging. Thanks to the zeal and ability of the Y.M.C.A., the whole of this large number were with ease served with an excellent and tastefully-arranged tea.

At seven o'clock Mr. Stevenson Blackwood took the chair. He was well supported by members and other gentlemen in the Civil Service. Addresses were given by the chairman, Major Owen Hay, and several of the members. Each was loving, courteous, and faithful. Christ was the theme. That theme warmed and gladdened many hearts—some, we trust, that had never known the love of Christ before.

ALGIERS.—Those of our readers who were specially interested in the work begun here by the late Miss E. Beamish will learn with pleasure, on the authority of Lady Sebright, that it is still being carried on. The soldiers' meetings flourish, and the meetings for ladies are also continued, though on a more limited scale. God has raised up workers to take the place of her who has gone to the rest she so nobly earned. A young English lady and a Belgian gentleman address the weekly meeting for French soldiers, lovingly setting forth to them the glorious Gospel of Christ.

CLEANSING BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

By REV. EVAN HOPKINS.

THE attention of God's children is just now much occupied with the subject of an inward cleansing of the heart from sin. Not a little confusion exists in the minds of many, partly from a misapplication of texts, and partly from not clearly distinguishing the various aspects in which cleansing through the blood is presented to us in Scripture.

There are three distinct aspects of cleansing from sin through the blood of Christ, as it seems to me, put before us in the Word of God.

First, there is THE CLEANSING THAT BELONGS TO OUR STANDING.

That passage in Heb. i. 3 clearly sets forth this: "Who being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his Person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when He had by Himself purged our sins" (or according to the N.V. "when He had made purification of sins") "sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."

This we see clearly was a purification Christ accomplished before He sat down. A work therefore done not in us, but for us, more than eighteen hundred years ago. The phrase "made purification of sins" is an unusual one. How are we to understand it?

It has been understood by some that this "cleansing" refers to that "moral renovation" of the human race which Christ effected in consequence of his ministry; that Christ is here set forth as "a moral teacher, who by precept and example incited men to amendment."

But surely the inspired writer meant something far more than this. That he refers here to Christ's atoning death, and not to his teaching, seems perfectly clear, from a comparison with other passages in the same Epistle. But let us observe, he speaks here of a cleansing of sins, and not a propitiation for sins. How is this to be understood?

Christ was identified with our sin in all its aspects. Sin is not merely a load, not merely a transgression; it is an uncleanness. He was identified with our sin as a load, and so He bore it away. He was identified with our sin as a transgression, an offence towards God, and so "He was wounded for our transgressions." And He was identified with our sin as an uncleanness—with its very nature as a defilement—and so He "made purification of sins."

Here then the cleansing He effected is to be understood in a judicial sense. We are not only delivered from the penalty due to our sins, we are accounted before God as free from its very defilement by virtue of Christ's atoning death. In Christ we are regarded as absolutely free from sin's uncleanness.

This aspect of the atonement is set forth in type in Lev. xvi. 30. Touching the great day of atonement, it is said, "On that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sin before the Lord." "Clean before the Lord;" not clean absolutely in themselves.

So we who are in Christ, stand judicially acquitted of sin in all its aspects—as a debt, a transgression, and as a defilement.

This is what Christ accomplished for us, and secured to us, before He sat down on the right hand of God.

Here, then, is the cleansing by the blood that relates to our standing.

Second, THE CLEANSING THAT BELONGS TO OUR WALK.

This is put before us in Heb. ix. 13, 14: "If the blood of goats and bulls, and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling them that have been defiled, sanctify unto the cleanness of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the Eternal Spirit offered Himself without blemish unto God, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?"

Without enlarging on the Old Testament type of the "ashes of the red heifer" here alluded to, I would however observe, we must keep before us two or three points in connection with that ordinance which will enable us to understand the special aspect in which the antitype is presented to us in this passage.

Let us ask, for whom was this provision made? For sinners or for saints? For strangers or worshippers? Clearly, it was for a redeemed people; for those who were in the Covenant. For those who had been delivered from bondage and brought nigh unto God. But it was a provision that met a special need. It was for worshippers who had become unclean—"that have been defiled." That is, defilement contracted after having come to God on the ground of the sacrifice on the day of atonement. What we have here then is not God's method of bringing a sinner to Himself in the first instance for salvation, but his provision for restoring the defiled worshipper to communion and fellowship. It was intended especially for those who through contact with death had become ceremonially unclean, and who therefore needed to be purified before they could draw nigh for purposes of worship.

Bearing the teaching of the type in mind, we see what is the special aspect of the Cross of Christ here presented. The blood of Christ is God's provision of restoring the soul that has become defiled to a condition of fellowship with Himself. "Dead works" must not be interpreted as referring exclusively to the works done by the unregenerate soul. Duties performed by the converted soul, with a defiled conscience, that is, out of fellowship with God, are also "dead works."

Here, then, we have the cleansing of the blood of Christ in its restoring aspect.

This does not set before us the blood of Christ in its progressively sanctifying efficacy. For this we must turn to another passage, and this brings us to our third point.

THE CLEANSING THAT BELONGS TO OUR INNER BEING.

That is, cleansing in the sense of purifying our thoughts and desires. This I believe is the meaning of 1 John i. 7: "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." And for the following reasons: Because it is a cleansing that is conditional, momentary, and progressive.

(1) Conditional.—"If we walk in the light." The cleansing that belongs to our standing can in no sense be said to be conditional on our walk. Walking in the light is something more than being in "a state of right knowledge," as some would define it. It points surely to a course of practical obedience, which characterises the life of one who is in a state of fellowship with God, abiding in Him who is the light, and is expressed by the term walking, and not merely knowing. That such a course can be followed only through the blood in its justifying efficacy is true. And, therefore, walking in the light pre-supposes the application of the blood of Christ in that sense. Now, it is objected by some that to interpret 1 John i. 7, in the sense of sanctification rather than of justification, is to assume a fresh application of the blood, which is not borne out, it is said, in Scripture. I would say in answer, not a fresh application but a fresh apprehension of the virtue of that blood. That which has been seen to meet the need of justification, is now seen to meet the need of purification.

But it is as we walk in the light that this cleansing is to be known and realised.

Huther justly observes, "As walking in the light is given as the condition (not as the means, which the blood of Christ is) of the cleansing, and as the subject here therefore is not the change, wrought by the blood of Christ, of man from a child of darkness into a child of light, but the growing transformation of him who has already become a child of light, the present καθαρίζει (cleanseth) is not to be turned into the preterite, but is to be retained as the present. Spener: "He purifies us ever more and more until the final perfect purity." *

(2) Momentary.—It is not a state of purity but a maintained condition of purity as we are walking in the light. The force of the present teaches us this—cleanseth. It is not an act accomplished once, as forgiveness or the act of justification, but is a continuous process—it is ever cleansing us from all sin.

(3) Progressive.—This cleansing must not be confounded with that which we have set before us in Heb. ix. 13, 14. There, as we saw, we have cleansing in its restoring aspect. That supposes the communion to have been broken, defilement to have been contracted. But here we are supposing the case of one walking in the light, one abiding in Christ. This is a cleansing that goes deeper than the removal of defilement through actual transgression. It penetrates into the evil habits and desires of the man. This does not involve the erroneous doctrine of the eradication of the sinful principle which the Scripture calls "the flesh." That remains in us to the last. But it does reach those evil habits of mind and heart which have all the power of a second nature over the soul in the daily life and defile the conscience. These evil habits may be removed, cleansed away. The sanctifying power of the blood of Christ may be so apprehended by the soul thus walking in the light as to introduce it, so to speak, into an altogether new experience.

But some may ask, How can this cleansing be progressive if "all sin" is cleansed? If all sin is cleansed, how much sin remains to be cleansed? But let us observe, it is literally, "is cleansing us from every sin." Not from all sin, as if the concentrated mass of sin were once for all removed. But from every sin, as day by day and moment by moment the need of purification is felt and realised.

Each succeeding event and circumstance in life is an occasion for the manifestation of a new development of sin. But it matters not how manifold the phases, or how varying the character of the tendency to evil may be, here is a remedy which is able to meet every need. To make this clear, take the case of one who has acquired the habit of drunkenness. The power which this sin has over him lies in the fact that he has learned to love it. Let us suppose the man becomes converted to God. He sees that he is not only forgiven, but that he has received a Saviour who is stronger than his evil inclination for drink. He trusts Christ to keep him from yielding, and so long as he continues trusting he finds that he is kept from falling, although underneath there lurks this strong desire for drink. But after a while he is brought to see a fuller deliverance. He sees he may be freed from this very love of drink, which, through yielding to it so long, has become a second nature in the man. He is brought to experience the cleansing efficacy of the blood of Christ in reference to that besetting sin, so that this very desire is removed. This is to bring him into a new and far more blessed experience. And what is true of this special sin, surely is true of every other evil habit. So, as we walk in the light, we shall be finding progressively, that the blood is cleansing us from every sin.

I would observe, in conclusion, that as to the meaning of "the blood of Jesus Christ" here, I accept the interpretation that Ebrard has so ably given in his exposition of this passage, a quotation from which I venture to add: "That by 'the blood of Jesus Christ' we must understand 'the real blood of Jesus poured out upon the cross.' And, yet, 'it is not the matter or material substance of that blood in which a magical power lay, whether to forgive or to cleanse from sin. Not in virtue of its material constituents, or of any magical power inherent in these constituents, but in virtue of its having been shed, has the blood of Jesus the power to cleanse from sin. Hence, in St. John, the blood of Christ is most certainly equivalent to the death of Christ. But, this death of Christ, or his blood as poured out, has not less power to cleanse our hearts from sin than it had to furnish a propitiation and obtain forgiveness: the latter, because in the blood of Christ guilt was reckoned for, and grace obtained; the former, because in the death of Christ sin has been condemned. He who livingly believes in the atoning death of Christ cannot love sin—the sin which brought Jesus to the cross. Thus the blood of Jesus continues to exercise a purifying, sanctifying influence, until the heart is cleansed from all sin.'"

CLEVEDON CONVALESCENT HOME.—We are informed that the Rev. E. Forbes has purchased Ellacombe, the house adjoining the Convalescent Home, with a view ultimately of increasing the accommodation of the Home, and providing private rooms for patients when required. The usefulness of the Home continues to expand, and it is earnestly to be desired that the good work may grow and prosper from year to year, extending the benefit of sunny situation and strengthening food to many of the weak and suffering toilers who so often pine for rest and change of air.—Clevedon Mercury.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

CHAP. X.—(Concluded.)

THE young people once saved, every facility should be afforded for UNION WITH THE CHURCH.

Only by this can the bad be dwarfed through sheer inactivity and the good be developed by being constantly appealed to. The School is tempted to form a corporation totally independent of the Church, with its own funds, laws, and demands on the time. A gulf between itself and its parent is slowly formed, and the transference of the converts is not properly forwarded. This is a fatal mist ake There can not be too many covered ways between the school and that Church with which it should be vitally united. The passage of converted scholars into Church membership ought to be quite a natural procedure.

Sunday-schools do not reach all the children. Markedly those of the "better" classes are outside this sphere of work. Can they be claimed and conserved for Jesus? At least one man has solved that problem. Residing in a suburb of a populous city, he carries on a children's service on Sunday afternoons for the young people in families whose social position is the same as his own, and also for some who are a few steps lower in social degree. Much singing, sparkling addresses, an esprit de corps among the younglings, a prize-giving and summer outing—such is the curriculum followed; and, as the result, an untold number of those dear young hearts have been yielded to God and kept in God. My friend did not say, "If they won't go to Sunday-school, let them alone," but he rather girded himself for what he felt to be his special work, and now he rejoices "as one that has found great spoil."

As to the younger members of pious households, a word or two will be in place. While all unchristly freedom is eschewed, there is no less need that undue stringency be avoided. Let sacred music take its position in the usage and interest of the home; let family devotions be conducted with cheerfulness; let all speech against Christian people and ministers be disallowed; let domestic piety be free from cant on lip and cloud on brow, and there will be scant fear of defection from the faith of the younglings of that household. Past prayers and self-forgetfulness will in them find ample recompense, and these jewelled and embroidered spoils will be kept for the Master's use.

And now the important topic of the generally claims attention. Only those intimately related to the Lord's business have any idea of the percentage of loss. Let any list of inquirers be scanned a year after it was made out and the likelihood is that many names will require a stroke of the pen through them. Some have not been heard of again; some have declined to join in fellowship with God's servants; some have already proved themselves stony-ground hearers. Stragglers are somewhat numerous and are soon snapped up by the wily foe.

Not that there have been no attempts made to keep and utilise the fruits of past victories. It is clearly understood that the sheep recovered from the winter's storm must be housed and cared for. The tracts and pamphlets headed "Counsels for Young Converts" are ever multiplying. The attention of pastors and office-bearers has been lavishly given to the whole subject, and not in vain. But much remains to be done, both for those who drop in quietly and for those who are noticeably impressed in some special effort to do good.

Now, new converts cannot live on excitement. Excitement is all very well in its place, but we are not to depend upon it or to mistake it for religion. The perpetual drainage of nerve-force will, in the end, militate against healthy happiness of mind and soundness of moral sense. The writer has tried the experiment, and has seen it tried by others, and he is convinced that though the reaction may be long deferred, it is sure to come sooner or later. Some eleven years since, he was privileged in being usefully employed in connection with an outbreak of the work of God. For many months after the inrush of converts had subsided, he strove to keep up the excited feelings of both old and new disciples. His ill-success is evident to him now. The preferable course would have been to form Bible-classes, and to try to make the fervent in spirit as thoughtful as fervent. But by the other methods was fostered a morbid appetite after religious emotion, to the exclusion of attentive meditation.

THE HARDEST WORK COMES AFTER CONVERSION.

Each Epistle to the Thessalonians shows how much they needed instruction of conscience and consolidation of character.

Inquirers must be dealt with very wisely—how wisely Mr. Aitken's work on "The Difficulties of the Soul" most clearly shows. So much depends on the nature of the promptings given at the beginning of the Christian life. The after experience often takes much of its shape from them. These accreated ones should be taught to walk on their own feet. If always incited to lean upon others, the removal of any one prop may mean a serious catastrophe. Yet is it very natural that some should get into the habit of always wanting to be nursed, and to have a "fuss" made edith them.

One way of curing them is to set them to nurse others. More than any of the rest, weak believers should be interested in some department of religious duty. They will live more strongly themselves by pouring their lives into others, and will "keep themselves in the love of God," while endeavouring to increase that love within their companions.

"EACH FOR ALL AND ALL FOR EACH"

is a Swiss proverb which the nurslings of the Church need to ponder. Many who have been re-captured by the world would have been among the secured spoils still if only they had been directed into a sphere of usefulness. Every convert becomes part of God's capital, and from Him is a good rate of interest expected.

An enlargement of the number of sub-pastorates would be helpful. To a young man or woman some name or selection of names is given. "This is your sacred charge. Give to this a first place in your petitions. Make sacrifices. Shelter this beloved soul. Then shall it become part of your glory and your joy."

And those newly found in God may be taught to hold little prayer-meetings for each other in the event of any signs of lassitude appearing. A young man who now preaches the Word was some eighteen months after his conversion in grievous danger of falling back into folly. His companions knew this, met together, pleaded with God for him, and just succeeded in checking his retrogression.

GATHERINGS FOR RELIGIOUS CONVERSATION

have done good work in securing spoils. These meetings will be useful if characterised by rationalness and frankness. Without great care they will get conventional and frigid. But if meetings for witnessing and prayer be of the right stamp they can scarcely be too highly esteemed. There is an art in conducting such assemblies, as, indeed, there is in conducting social religious meetings in general, but by earnest study even the formal may acquire it, and the awkward may exemplify it.

It is wise to follow up rapidly and carefully all good impressions. One good man has issued a leaflet containing appropriate passages of Scripture, and also the titles of helpful religious books, and has distributed these among the "lambs." Another insists that the step into ordinary Church membership is too great for low-class converts to take at a stride. He tries to provide for them a half-way house. And he is right; for it is manifestly imprudent to push such people suddenly into scenes and habits so alien to all their antecedents. They require acclimatising, and ought, like some missionary converts, to be brought more slowly towards the full privilege of membership. They may then be secured for the Church of the future.

In a Staffordshire village might have been seen by the side of a stove on a cold winter's day a venerable Christian lady. Around her was and to their owners she was talking earnestly about the deep things of God. What did it all mean? Just this: that these men had come under the power of a remarkable work, and, though the very pariahs of the place, had been brought to thought and prayer; and she had felt it her duty to give them a course of instruction before their lips pressed for the first time the cup of the Lord. I have heard of no unfaithfulness to vows in that village.

In another locality similar to this, a work equally gracious took place. A cultured gentleman and his no less cultured wife were prompted to give up much of their book-pleasure and enjoyable society, and to care for the souls who had been launched into a new life. How gleesome were their tones as they said, after a considerable lapse of time, "Not one has gone into sin or severed himself from our Church."

Finally, any evangelism which does not inculcate the necessity for retirement and on spiritual things contains in itself the germs of fatal disease. Our one great end is to help the Spirit of God to endow the soul with that truth which is his one means of sanctifying the soul. Religious excitement is valuable, chiefly as it brings sundry natures under the influence of healthily-convinced saints and the truths they impart. And so, "walking in the fear of the Lord and the comfort of the Holy Spirit, will the Churches be multiplied," and their hardly-gotten spoils will be secured.

LEGHORN.—Rev. A. E. Carey, English Chaplain, Leghorn, states that the Gospel literature sent by our readers for the Sailors' Reading-room has been very serviceable and much prized. He is endeavouring to get a room nearer the quay so as to secure the attendance of a larger number of seamen. He asks us to say that parcels of papers, magazines, and books for the Reading-room, if sent to the care of Messrs. Laming, 8, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C., will be taken out free of charge.

ITALIANS IN MARSEILLES.

DEAR FRIEND,—For the last three years I have been working all alone amongst the Italians of Marseilles, of whom there are about fifty thousand. I now purpose carrying on my mission in the suburbs, near to the large manufactories, such as soap factories, tanneries, oil and sugar refineries, &c., which give employment to thousands of my countrymen. These men, being congregated in masses, adhere to the use of their own tongue, and preserve their nationality far more than the Italians engaged in the city itself. The latter are engaged as artisans, servants, commissionaires, coal dealers, &c., and from constant intercourse with those around me quickly acquire the French language. Many of them then attend the Evangelical "conferences" of M. Saillens, whose addresses they easily comprehend.

A year ago I opened a room at the Boulevard National, near to some factories employing about 1,700 Italians. From the time of its opening this room has been constantly filled, and there are not a few regular hearers whose faces we recognise every Sunday night and at the Bible-class on Wednesday evening. Most of the men congregated here are Tuscans, who are much addicted to drinking, gambling, and swearing, but who are consequently in the greater need of evangelistic effort. We pray for a special blessing on this station, and hope soon to gather good fruit therefrom. We have in very humble fashion started a reading-room for the working men. We also intend carrying on an evening school for the benefit of those who until now could neither read nor write.

At Les Crottes I reaped the first fruits of my work in Marseilles; and there eighteen converted Italians meet every Sunday morning to worship in spirit and truth the Lord who has graciously redeemed them. I am seeking a hall or room for public testimony and Gospel preaching in a very populous district, in which there are some fifteen manufactories and foundries, but I find the rents in that neighbourhood very high.

I have been praying for some assistance in the work, in order to be able to give more time to preaching amongst the Italians. Last autumn, during my visit to Italy, I met with a young Christian, M. Auguste Lenzi, who was warmly recommended. He has the confidence of all who are acquainted with him, and would be extremely useful in taking charge of the school and reading-room, besides assisting in visiting and preaching. My difficulty is to arrange for his support, and in this I should be thankful for help. Surely two labourers are not too much for 50,000 souls. I may add that it is the opinion of several Italian brethren that work in Marseilles has the promise of more abundant fruit than evangelisation in Italy itself, as the Italian sojourners in Marseilles are less under the hostile influence of their families and relatives than when in their own country. The first step in confessing Christ is far less difficult.

HOME FOR LITTLE BOYS.—Alderman Fowler, M.P., writes from 50, Cornhill, E.C., Feb. 21:—"I to-day visited the institution at Farningham, and wish to express how much I was pleased with what I saw. There are ten houses, each containing thirty boys, managed as separate families, under the charge of a master and his wife, where the boys are boarded and taken care of. The boys, though poor and destitute, do not belong to the criminal classes, and it is the object of the Home to give them a Christian education, and teach them to earn an honest livelihood. I believe it is an object thoroughly deserving of support, and I would appeal to you to assist the Committee to carry on their useful work, and to extend the benefits of the institution." The office of the Home is at Ludgate-circus, E.C., Sec., Mr. A. O. Charles.

REV. WILLIAM HASLAM AT BATH.

A TWELVE days' Mission at St. Mark's, Lyncombe, from the 16th to 28th of February, has been concluded. On each day at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., Mr. Haslam has delivered earnest and heart-stirring addresses to large and attentive congregations, and the interest sustained throughout, as marked by the daily increasing numbers, and the distance from which many strangers came, was very evident.

The morning discourse was more immediately addressed to believers. In the evening was preached the message of salvation in all its fulness and simplicity. It is not as a highly-finished speaker or a master of logical eloquence that Mr. Haslam draws such earnest crowds to hear him, but he has the valuable gift of impressing his audience with the fact that he himself implicitly believes every statement he makes, and that the arguments he brings forward would be the very ones he would yield to in his own case. There is also an old-fashioned quaintness in many of his remarks that do not fail to hit the mark and deepen the impression, thus tending to produce much more than mere passing emotion, solid and lasting results.

On the last Sunday (February 25), the church was literally packed—even to the pulpit stairs—every available form from the school being brought into requisition and placed in the different aisles. The subject of the sermon was, "Paul before Festus;" and the appeal to "the almost persuaded" was made with a solemn earnestness and loving entreaty that will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it.

Mrs. Haslam has also given a Gospel address to women only, every day at three o'clock, in the Temperance-hall adjacent. The building was too small to accommodate her hearers, and we hope to see a commodious Mission-room erected in the parish at no very distant period. From the numbers who attended the after-meeting, and still more from the many who have subsequently given their own direct testimony to the benefits they had received during the Mission, we may confidently state that Mr. Haslam's visit has been as abundantly blessed as it was last year.

It was very gratifying to notice the hearty union of God's people during the Mission. Many of the Nonconformist ministers were present, and believers of all denominations joined heartily in the services and pressed forward for a final shake of the hands with the preacher who had endeared himself to them by his labours twenty years ago amongst the poor of Corn-street and Milk-street.

AT A MARKET-STALL.

BY A COLPORTEUR.

"ON Friday morning I started for —— Market, as usual, though suffering from a violent cold, and spread out my books on my stall. I meet with many here whom I cannot reach in my ordinary house-to-house visitation, and have many blessed opportunities of speaking a word for the Master, as the people come to the stall.

"My first sale was 'Jessica's First Prayer,' then 'Songs and Solos,' and 'Christie's Old Organ.' Then came a little pause, and I turned to speak to the man who occupied the next stall. I found he did not believe in the Bible, nor did he possess one. I had now to attend to a customer, who bought two children's books; another bought 'Heavenly Love,' and a third purchased a volume of 'The Infants' Magazine.' To each of these I was enabled to speak a word for Jesus, while serving them. I turned again to my neighhour, and resumed the conversation by saying:

"'Well, neighbour, I can't think how you can live.'

"'Why?' said he.

"'Why, not having a Bible in the house. I could not live a day without the Bible in my house, and, better still, in my heart too.'

"'How is that?" he asked; 'I have not got one in my house and I live very well.' 'No,' I replied, 'you are dead while you live;' and turning to Ephesians, I read, 'you hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins.'

"He said he had his own relations who professed to be converted, but they were a set of humbugs, and he did not believe there was anything in it. I said, 'But will you dare to throw away your own soul because there are counterfeit Christians in the world? You do not act so in regard to your business. You do not refuse to sell those articles on your table because there are others very similar which are an imposition. And what would you think of me condemning your goods because I had found others of the same kind very bad? Yet if I did condemn them that would not alter the character of your goods, neither do you alter the truth of God's Word by saying you do not believe it. If you don't believe it now, the time is coming when you will find that your unbelief has not altered the word of God at all, for 'He that believeth shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned,' and if you remain in unbelief that will be your portion."

"He listened while I read several portions of the Word to him. Presently another customer came up, who bought a packet of leaflets for distribution; then another bought 'Ministering Children;' and a third a two-and-sixpenny Bible. Many came to look at the stock; and though they did not buy, I always seize the opportunity to say a word for Jesus. May the Lord cause the seed sown to spring up and bring forth fruit. Now a poor old soul came and turned over a book, 'When to Trust Jesus;' so I talked to her of the blessedness of trusting Him for our salvation, the joy it gave in this life, and the fulness of joy hereafter. She bought the little book. Then a Sunday-school teacher came and bought ten sixpenny Bibles for his class in the school, and my soul seemed to be a partner in his joy, as he, a labouring man, spent 5s. out of his own earnings to supply his scholars with the Bible.

"A young man next bought a penny 'Jessica,' and the little book, 'Safety, Certainty, and Enjoyment.' After a pause a 2s. Bible was sold, followed with a silent prayer for blessing. Then a 'Peep Behind the Scenes;' and another 'Christie.'

"Thus the time passed on, and whenever I had an opportunity, from a pause in the business, I talked with my neighbour about the blessing he was losing in this life, besides having no hope beyond the grave. As the market was closing, this man's state lay heavily upon my heart; and the thought of his dear children, too, with a father who could not tell them about Jesus, and no Bible in the house for them to read. So, lifting up my heart to God for a blessing to follow, I asked him to accept a Bible for his children. He took it, and thanked me.

"I have seen him since, and he told me he had set his children on wet days to learn a chapter of the Bible, and repeat it to him when he went home at night. May the Lord add his blessing."

"GOSPEL TEMPERANCE."

"GOSPEL Temperance" is to hold
All within us well controll'd;
Not from one thing to abstain,
But, with self-correcting rein,
By the conscience, to subdue
Spirit, soul, and body too.
"Gospel Temperance" is a Queen,
In whose words, and ways, and mien,
Gospel-Temper's always seen.
"Gospel Temperance" is a grace
Which in none can have a place
But the highest saintly race.
Still, when drunkenness is rife,
Cankering the nation's life,
When, too, many Christians fall,
It were well if one and all,
For the Church and nation's gain,
Would from that one thing abstain.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY IN MANCHESTER.

PREVIOUSLY to Messrs. Moody and Sankey's present visit to Manchester, a committee of forty laymen was formed, from whose number an executive of eight were chosen, who made all the necessary preparations for the coming of the evangelists. Then they called together the ministers of the Established and Nonconformist Churches, who responded to the invitation to the number of 150, to whom a statement was made of all that had been done. Some, perhaps, were disposed to ask why they had not been consulted at the outset; but when it was explained that it had been thought the preliminaries could be managed without troubling them they were content. Such a spirit of amity was never known in Manchester before, and Prebendary Macdonald remarked that to have had such a meeting was itself worth all the trouble that had been taken.

Mr. W. H. Newett, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and Mr. Alex. McDougall, Jun., have been the efficient and active secretaries of the committee, of which Mr. Jeremiah Garnett, of the Grange, near Bolton, is chairman, and Mr. Thomas Carter, of Marple, treasurer.

Prior to the meetings 50,000 "Bible Truths" were circulated, containing three pages of passages of Scripture, and on the fourth page notices of the meetings about to be held. Thus the distribution of soul-saving truth was secured, even though those receiving it should not attend the meetings.

The occasion of this second visit brings to many in Manchester which are crowded with memories of the intensest interest. We note a few of them.

A remark of Mr. Moody led a lady (Mrs. Grimké) to go away with the determination to seek out one lost girl, to reclaim her to paths of virtue, and to lead her to the Lamb of God. She fulfilled her purpose, but did not stop there. She went on and on until a Home was opened, into which, during the intervening years, 500 girls have been received. Nor was this all the work of this earnest Christian lady. Her illuminated texts in many languages have been distributed by hundreds and thousands, carrying the Gospel to multitudes in the various European nations. Nor is this the only home that has been opened for the rescue of the lost as an outcome of the previous visit of these evangelists. Mrs. Grimké, we understand, began a weekly Bible-reading for ladies yesterday.

At one of the meetings eight years ago, there was a poor fallen girl among those seeking mercy. It was very desirable that she should not return to the house where she had been living, but should be provided for elsewhere. A member of the committee and his wife went in their carriage to the house for the girl's clothes, and then placed her in the care of some kind Christian people, until a suitable Home was found in Liverpool. She lived for two or three years, bearing a truly Christian character, and exercising a powerful influence for good on those around her, and ultimately died a triumphant death, trusting in Him who had redeemed her soul.

Several Mission halls and rooms have been built in and around Manchester, in which many hundreds hear the Gospel every week.

The meetings last week continued with growing interest. The Free Trade Hall was packed nightly, and an overflow-meeting, held in the Circus, was addressed by various ministers, among them Rev. H. Bone, Rev. J. Watson (Church of England), and our old friend, Rev. T. Champness, whose brief but telling addresses, when he was settled in London, are vividly remembered by those who attend the Noon Meetings there.

CONFERENCE OF MINISTERS.

On Monday week, at ten o'clock, the clergy and ministers of the town were invited to meet Mr. Moody in conference. The points discussed were the attendance of ministers at each service, a number promising for each of the several days; and the appointment of workers to assist in dealing with inquirers at the after-meeting. It was mentioned that the Manchester City Mission had instructed their missionaries, nearly a hundred in number, to attend all the evening meetings, and to afford whatever assistance they could in the good work. Mr. Moody expressed it as his opinion that where men spoke to women, or women to men, they should always be older persons who did this, and that young people should be quietly advised to speak only to persons of their own sex in the inquiry-meetings.

WHAT "THE RECORD" SAYS.

The correspondent of The Record says: "Two things are already very noticeable in this visit of the evangelists as compared with their visit in December, 1874. The first is the vastly increased attendances. This is especially remarkable at the afternoon Bible-readings. Eight years ago there would be about 2000 persons present; now tickets are issued which are taken up quite two days in advance, and though the Reading is announced for 2.45, by five minutes after two the large hall is packed with its 5000 people. In the evening the hall is full almost as soon as the doors are thrown open at 6.30, and the overflow fills the Circus in Chepstow-street. The meeting is supposed to commence at 7.30, but Mr. Moody, very wisely, does not keep his audience long waiting. About 7 p.m. Mr. Sankey enters and leads them in singing, whilst his companion is not long behind him. Indeed, as soon as the doors are opened the members of the Sacred Song Association begin singing hymns, the choruses of which are frequently taken up by the whole assembly. From and after Monday the after-meeting was held in the large hall of the Y.M.C.A., which is close to the Free Trade-hall, and not far from the Circus. It was found that the going out of those who were not able to remain blocked the passages and made it difficult for inquirers to come forward.

"The second point to be noticed is that there is observable a distinct progress in spiritual knowledge, and a deeper grasp of spiritual truth in Mr. Moody's addresses now than eight years ago. Some friends felt then that although faith was exalted to its proper central position, scarcely enough was said about repentance. Now the full outline of spiritual life is drawn out and carefully illustrated. This is especially the case in the Bible-readings. For example, on Monday the subject Mr. Moody chose was Prayer, and he said there were eight "elements of prayer"—Reverence, Confession, Restitution, Thanksgiving, Unity, Forgiveness, Petition, and Submission. Each of these he in turn enforced, and illustrated with his usual felicity. Very touching were the stories he told, both about restitution and the curse of an unforgiving temper, whilst he beautifully showed how prayer might be answered long afterwards, and delay did not mean denial.

"The Nonconformist ministers throng to these meetings in large bodies, but there is, perhaps, scarcely as large a muster of the clergy as might have been expected. It must, however, be remembered that Lent is a season of many parochial engagements, and that the time of the clergy is then occupied more absorbingly than at any other season of the year."

We are told, however, that five times as many clergymen and ministers have taken hold of the work this time as were identified with it eight years ago, and, in every way, the interest is double what it was at that time. If there are any Churches which were not increased by the former work, or which will not add to their numbers by the present one, it can only be because they are not identifying themselves with the work, and laying themselves open to the blessing which God is showering down upon the city.

At the noon-meeting held in the hall of the Y.M.C.A., Mr. Moody last week gave a series of addresses to workers on the way to deal with various classes of inquirers. As may be supposed, his long and large experience enabled him to give invaluable instruction. We have reports of these, of which our readers will have the benefit in due time. The necessity of such instruction may be seen from the fact that a minister is said to have remarked that he could speak to 3000, but could not take the responsibility of dealing with a single soul.

On Thursday night the Free Trade Hall was engaged for another purpose, but it was a stormy night, and on that account the work suffered less from the want of the large hall than it would have done on any night during the fortnight. This was one of those coincidences of which there are many, and which those who recognise the hand of God in little things look upon as a providential arrangement.

On Friday afternoon the Bishop of Manchester was present, accompanied by Archdeacons Anson and Birch, Canons Tonge, Birley, and Pitcairn, and Prebendary Macdonald. Several other clergymen and ministers of Nonconformist Churches also occupied seats upon the platform. Probably from 200 to 300 ministers were amongst the audience. In the evening a profound impression was produced by a solemn appeal to those who are not far from the kingdom of God. The subject was enforced by reference to Herod, who observed John the Baptist, and did many things, and heard him gladly, but would not give up his darling sin—and to many others whose sad history has been handed down for our warning. On this, as on other nights, a large number thronged to the inquiry-room or were spoken to in the hall.

On Saturday the evangelists have no meetings, but on that evening the held their anniversary gathering in the Circus.

Mr. Sankey, who had been spending the day in the country, arrived during the meeting, and after the singing by a quartette of the fine hymn, "Oh, to be over yonder," to the new tune composed by Mr. Stebbins (Songs and Solos, No. 6), said that his heart was greatly cheered to know that the Gospel was being carried to many places where it could not be made known except by song, and he hoped the Church would take hold of this talent which had lain dormant too long. A leading man in Newcastle had told him that some of the best ladies and gentlemen in that city go to the infirmary and hospital to sing the Gospel to the sick and weary ones; and the same thing was being done in many other places, particularly in Manchester. A friend had handed him a book from the Chinese printing press. They are not a musical people, but they had learned to sing these hymns, which, he added, are now translated into fifteen to twenty different languages. When he visited Switzerland a few years ago a place as large as the Free Trade Hall was filled, and he in English, and they in German, sang these sweet songs together. They were printed in parallel columns, and he sang in English and the people in German. On the Alps a party heard others singing "Safe in the arms of Jesus." They responded in the second verse; and though neither party could see the other, the former replied by singing the third verse. Thus there was true Christian fellowship between believers in Christ, who might never know each other until they met in the land of everlasting song.

In America a man will sometimes be seen sitting down and reading these Gospel hymns. A stranger will recognise him as a kindred spirit and a fellow believer, and perhaps in a few minutes a party of fifty will have been drawn together, singing the old, old story, in the ears of the health, or pleasure-seekers.

All that Jesus did was simple and unassuming. When the Passover was ended He and his disciples, after they had sung a hymn, went out into the Mount of Olives. The last thing before his agony in the garden, and his being betrayed by Judas, who went out before the hymn, was to sing one of the sweet songs of Zion with his few but faithful followers.

Mr. Sankey concluded by congratulating the Association and hoping that they would be doubled in number and in their power for good.

MEETING OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

Sunday morning found the Free Trade Hall filled with its 4500 hearers, of whom a well-informed Christian merchant estimated that half were workers, and that half of these were the fruit of the visit in 1874, either as converts or revived Christians, and now engaged in active Christian work. The first hymn was, "Bringing in the Sheaves." Then Dr. Macfadyen prayed, repeating Rom. xii. 1: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice," and praying in accordance with the spirit of those words. Then the congregation sang, "Work, for the night is coming," and Mr. Sankey followed with Frances Havergal's stirring battle-song—

Tell it out among the nations that the Lord is King!
Tell it out, tell it out!

Then Rev. Thos. Wallis offered prayer, and we sang—

When Jesus comes to reward his servants,
Whether it be noon or night,
Faithful to Him will He find us watching,
With our lamps all trimmed and bright?

Oh, can we say we are ready, brother?—
Ready for the soul's bright home?
Say, will He find you and me still watching,
Waiting, waiting, when the Lord shall come?

This was followed by "The crowning day is coming." Then the notices were given out, and Mr. Sankey sang as a solo—

It may be at morn, when the day is awaking,
When sunlight through darkness and shadow is breaking,
That Jesus will come in the fulness of glory,
To receive from the world "his own."

O Lord Jesus, how long?—
How long—ere we shout the glad song?—
Christ returneth! Hallelujah!
Hallelujah! Amen!

The meeting was now ready and eager for the words of counsel and wisdom which they had come to hear, and Mr. Moody said it was sometimes charged against this work that after a little time there was nothing left. Well, if we don't get beyond the meetings, very soon there will be nothing left; but if a few hundreds of God's people get a fresh grip of the Word, and the Word of them, it will not be possible to make that charge. A man said he wanted to get a fresh grip that would last his lifetime. There would then be a constant revival. But nothing would do it but a love for the Word. Some people were like a heap of shavings with kerosene poured over them and set fire to—there was a fierce blaze for a few minutes, and then nothing left. These were the class who were always trying to be kept up by outside excitement. Those who are always running to meetings and neglect the Word of God are one-sided, good in spots, but they have not an equal and consistent Christian character. Prayer, in which we talk to God, is very important, but it is no less important to listen to God talking to us in his Word.

Mr. Moody then replied at some length to those who say they believe the New Testament but not the Old; and showed by numerous important facts that they are so interwoven that it is unreasonable and indeed impossible to believe one without the other, for it is all one book. In the eighty-nine chapters of the four Gospels there are 140 quotations from the Old Testament. Another class said they did not believe anything that was supernatural. Then you must give up the whole Bible; for there was not a book that had not something supernatural. In Genesis, the flood; in Exodus, the Red Sea divided; in Leviticus, fire from the Lord devoured Nadab and Abihu; in Numbers, the healing by the brazen serpent—and so on. Some hints were then given as to

HOW TO READ THE BIBLE.

Divide it into history, type, prophecy, miracle, parable. Take a parable, find the key to it; that will help you to unlock other parables. Study the lives recorded; learn the spiritual lesson taught in each. Take a concordance and consider all that is said about any one subject—faith, atonement, heaven. Nothing will quicken the Church without feeding upon the Word of God. Not read it only, but meditate, praying, "Open Thou mine eyes to behold wondrous things out of thy law."

At this time a number of persons rose to leave, and Mr. Moody said, "I'm glad to see these friends going out. Do you know where? To their classes in the Sunday-school, or to some other work. God bless you. Let us sing while they are retiring." Mr. Sankey, always ready with a suitable hymn for an emergency, immediately started—

Sing them over again to me,
Wonderful words of life."

Mr. Moody got the people seated to sing the last verse, and, thus enabled to see who were without seats, he made them take the places vacated by those who had retired. It might be thought that this habit of watching the outward condition of a meeting would distract his mind from his subject. Not at all. It is the quick sympathy with his hearers, that is concerned for their comfort, which wins their affection and their attention, and keeps him en rapport with the audience, and they with him and with his subject.

Among other shrewd advice, he advised them to adopt the habit of taking notes of sermons. If the preacher sees you with pencil and paper, but taking nothing down, he will see that his sermon has not a thought in it which strikes you as worth recording, and probably will study more closely; so you will be helping to make better preachers. If he brings out beautiful and useful thoughts put them down, and pass them on to somebody else. Try to gather up what is good rather than what is useless; take the wheat and leave the chaff. Study the types. Adam, Noah, Isaac, Joseph, and nearly all the great names of Scripture, were in some way or other types of Christ.

Do not make hobbies of some special truths or doctrines. Some men so shut themselves up to one subject that they become tedious, because whatever the conversation may be about, they are sure to bring it round to their pet subject. Don't always harp on one string. The notes you take will be useful in days to come; when you are going to speak, they will suggest other thoughts. If you thus study to make yourself useful, people will come to hear you, for they know you have something to say. This world will never be saved until all the people of God give themselves to the work.

The meetings during the day, says the Manchester Guardian, attracted larger congregations than ever. Numbers came many miles, some of them only to find the doors closed, because the halls were full. The meeting at eleven was for non-churchgoers. Mr. Moody urged upon them what Christ wanted to be to every man, and at the close 170 expressed by rising their desire to be saved. A similar scene was witnessed in the afternoon. The overflow-meeting in the Circus was addressed by several speakers, and the after-meeting effectively conducted by Mr. Sankey, when over a hundred rose. During the day at least five or six hundred thus expressed their wish to be remembered in prayer.

The meetings on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday evenings have been for men only. It was arranged that yesterday, at the noon meeting, Y.M.C.A., reports should be rendered of the results of the past eight years, which we hope to give in our next.

"A PRINCE IN ISRAEL."—It is said that some years the benefactions of the late Wm. E. Dodge averaged 1,000 dols. a day, and that for many years he gave 250,000 dols. yearly for benevolent purposes. At no time within several years did his annual contributions aggregate less than 200,000 dols. His life in all respects was that of "a prince in Israel."

OBITUARY.—The deaths are reported of Rev. H. Bazeley, of Oxford, of Rev. T. E. Thoresby, of Spafields Chapel, and of Rev. Julius Benn, of Stepney. The circumstances of Mr. Benn's decease at Matlock are mournful in the last degree. He died by the hand of his son William, who has lately suffered from mental derangement, and whom he had taken to Matlock with a view to the restoration of his health and vigour.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY ON TEMPERANCE.

A MOST instructive gathering took place at the Royal Victoria Coffee Hall, Waterloo-road, on Friday evening last. Some dozen prominent members of the medical profession were on the stage, every one of them ready to prove that the use of intoxicating liquors, even in moderation, is injurious to the mental and physical health of mankind.

In a powerful address, Dr. Norman Kerr (Chairman) alluded to the good work done in the Hall in which they were assembled. After citing many medical opinions against moderate drinking, he said that patriotism, humanity and true religion alike urge us to prompt and efficient action towards the total suppression of the drink traffic.

Dr. Kerr read a letter from Dr. S. Wielobycki, who is in his 91st year, and has been a total abstainer for half-a-century. He wrote: "After forty years' practice in the medical profession, I firmly believe that total abstinence is best for the human frame. . . . I have been in thirty-six battles. For nine months I never saw the inside of a room. I slept in the snow, with my saddle for a pillow and my cloak for a covering."

Dr. Alfred Carpenter said that as soon as the public of this country comprehended the force of the scientific facts with respect to this question, we should have the whole of the medical profession agreeing that there is nothing in these beverages to warm, strengthen, or nourish. The speaker said he had successfully treated disease for a number of years without having to call alcohol to his aid at all; he condemned the habit of administering alcohol to the dying, throwing them into a state of semi-unconsciousness.

Dr. J. J. Ridge, Dr. Harrison Branthwaite, Dr. C. R. Drysdale, Surgeon-General C. R. Francis, Surgeon-Major G. K. Poole, Dr. H. W. Williams, and Dr. Kellog (America), gave a like testimony to that of the previous speakers.

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.—The Worshipful Company of Grocers have generously given a donation of £100 to the funds of this institution.

THE CITY POLICE.—On Monday week Mr. Russell, the newly-appointed missionary to the City Police, in connection with the London City Mission, welcomed a large number of that splendid force, with their wives and lady friends, to a tea and entertainment in the lecture hall of the City Temple. Mr. F. A. Bevan presided at the meeting held after the tea. Earnest and practical addresses were delivered by the Chairman, Rev. L. B. White, D.D., rector of St. Mary Aldermary, City; Rev. T. S. Hutchinson, M.A., one of the Secretaries of the London City Mission; Mr. R. Paton, Mr. James Johnston, and Mr. Russell, the missionary. Such gatherings must have a most happy and beneficent influence on all concerned. We earnestly pray that Mr. Russell's self-denying labours amongst the members of the City Police may be abundantly blessed of God, and that the noble society under whose auspices he labours may be more prosperous than ever in the great work it is attempting to achieve.—Christian Chronicle.

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE READING ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of branch secretaries and correspondents of this Association was recently held at the Sunday School Union, 56, Old Bailey. Tea was provided, and subsequently the chair was taken by Mr. A. Benham, who offered a few words of greeting, and stated his opinion of the importance of the movement. Mr. Waters (Honorary Secretary of the Association) stated that the organisation was commenced last year, and that its object was to secure more general use of the Scripture portions selected as "home readings," and which had been published since 1873. Its distinguishing feature was that the selections for each day of a verse had relation to the subject of the "International Lesson" for the following Sunday. During last year 9200 cards of membership had been issued. For 1883 the number had already reached 18,500, and in addition 3000 had been sent to Australia and New Zealand. From the correspondence, he judged that only a very small proportion of these members had previously any plan of daily Bible reading.—Sunday School Chronicle.

CHURCH, PARENTS, AND CHILDREN.

IT is not often, we presume, that the leading columns of The Record and of The Nonconformist are found in close accord, but in their recent utterances on the Salvation Army episode in connection with Miss Charlesworth's case they are perfectly so. The Record says, referring to Mr. Booth's assertion, "that all home interests, rights, and duties, and all relationship obligations are to be subservient to the interests of the Salvation Army":—

These words have a startlingly familiar ring about them, but not in this context. They remind one of a story, published but a few weeks ago, of a daughter of a Protestant family seeking counsel of Cardinal Newman, and being by him referred to a priest in her neighbourhood, who, unknown to her father, admitted her to the "Roman obedience," and irrevocably fastened upon her the iron fetters of his Church. The same sad tale has been repeated again and again in numberless instances, until the public have grown almost listless; but it is terribly new in connection with a body of Evangelical Protestants. Mr. Charlesworth's letter bears irresistible testimony to the fact that an overwhelming influence over the mind and heart of his daughter had been gained by the directors of the Army, at first without his knowledge, and subsequently in spite of his wishes.

Similarly The Nonconformist of the same date says:—

We are sorry to see Mr. Booth putting his justification upon a principle which has often been invoked in the name of religion, to the detriment as much of religion as of morality. The Christian religion teaches us to sacrifice ourselves—a very different thing from sacrificing others by ignoring their rights.

Both papers speak in terms of reprobation, as indeed we think every right-minded observer must, of the practice of putting young English girls to the work of hawking Salvationist papers in the streets of Continental cities and towns. The words of our Nonconformist contemporary on this point are worthy of close reflection:—

We know the answer—"It is all for the Lord." And in all ages of the Church there have been those who have practically held that the means are justified by the end. But the character of every process lies in its method as truly as in its end. At the present time there are thousands amongst us most impatient of this truth. Schiller's apologue of the river, which pursues its course round the hill, wandering between fields and villages, and carrying health and fertility as it flows, and the cannon-ball, which goes straight to its end, but shattering as it flies, is lost on them. It is like the comparison of "What is Seen and What is Unseen" in Bastiat's celebrated tract. They see the end, possibly, in the reclamation of some reprobate persons; but how much has been lost to religion, in the alienation, through disgust, of men equally in need of salvation, and perhaps nearer to the Kingdom of God, they do not care to consider.

The conclusion to which The Record brings the whole matter appears to us also wise and true:—

It seems to us that Mr. Booth and his system are seriously to blame on three distinct grounds: for permitting and encouraging the growth of their own influence in the minds of the young, until it becomes supreme over every other; using that influence in disregard and even in defiance of those whose authority they have superseded; and, lastly, for using that influence for purposes which we should have thought no sane man of respectability could approve.

The accord of these two organs, of widely different sections of ecclesiastical thought and action, is a testimony to the substratum of agreement which, after all, is to be found beneath the surface of our common Protestant faith where principles of vital and eminently practical character are involved, spite of all our divergences on minor matters.

THE TRIALS FOR BLASPHEMY.

IT is a lamentable fact that in some quarters the tone of the public Press should appear to be in sympathy, to some extent, with the defendants in The Freethinker trial, so far at least as to allow that there is ground for their complaining of persecution for opinion. In so far as this allowance is made, their cause is sustained, and their influence increased. It seems to us a grievous thing that any warrant should be given for this really unwarrantable complaint. The Judge, whose noble protest against the offence committed, we count worthy of all honour, and of hearty endorsement, demands not censure but commendation. His expression of opinion, called by one of our journals "theological animus," was given after the verdict, and could not, therefore, prejudice the issue of the trial. For an English judge to declare that blasphemy is a service of the Devil, and infidelity part of the Devil's work, is a matter, as we think, that reflects honour on the Bench on which he sits, and is a credit to the high office he adorns.

As Sir Hardinge Giffard and others have contended, Christianity is "a part and parcel of the law of the land," and we deprecate any attempt to make it otherwise. As a revelation from God we cannot regard it as on its trial. Its triumphs and trophies, in every age and every clime, compel us to regard its recognition as an essential part of any well-ordered code of laws, and we have no sympathy with those who are clamorous to place it on the level of secularist and speculative discussions. For English law to surrender its endorsement of Christianity as a Divine revelation, would be a fatally retrograde movement which we earnestly hope it may not be our lot to witness.

So long as rejecters of this Revelation keep within the bounds of decency and morality there is nothing in our law to interfere with their liberty of thought; but to expect that the law should be altered to elevate their sentiments to the platform of equality with Christian truth, is to expect what, until we have become a nation of infidels, ought not for one moment to be conceded, and what only an extravagant liberalism would plead for and uphold. When we see the adherents of truth taking up the position of advocates for a change of law in order to make infidelity more free and tolerable in our land, we can but feel that Christ is being "wounded in the house of his friends."

MILDMAY MISSION TO JEWS.—On Wednesday evening, March 7, 370 children gathered together to a "Robin tea," given by this Mission in the German School-room, Leman-street, and afterwards listened attentively to short but telling addresses given by several of the workers and friends. Most of those children attend or have attended the night school in connection with this Mission, and their familiarity with the Scriptures is surprising. The Lord Jesus seems to do wonderful things by this Mission; very recently Mr. Wilkinson baptized another Jew on profession of faith in Christ.

THE FRENCH WALDENSES.—"Who are the French Waldenses?" is a question asked and very ably answered by Mrs. Lucas-Shadwell. Her books are already sufficiently well known to guarantee that any interested in the subject will be both pleased and rewarded by reading the short account of "The Church in Dauphine and its Last Martyr," that she has, through intercourse with French Protestant pasteurs and others, been enabled to give. The book is small, but concise, containing at the end a short account of French Protestant work at Barnave, in the South of France. It is sold at 3d. per copy, for the benefit of the same. Copies can be had from Mrs. Lucas-Shadwell, Woodcote, Fairlight, Hastings; or Miss Charlotte Murray, Manor House, Hastings.

Notes and Comments.

THE House of Lords was occupied with a most valuable piece of legislation when discussing, the other day, the Bill for Prohibiting the Payment of Wages in Publichouses. There can be no doubt that this practice extensively prevails, and is the source of untold misery and want to multitudes of families throughout the land. Personal knowledge and observation on the matter induce us to believe, with Lord Shaftesbury, that "seven-tenths of the men, and every one of the women, would cry out in the name of God to give them this legislation."

If the Government, instead of regarding this Bill with what Lord Rosebery called "benovolent neutrality," would adopt the practical advice of the chief constable whose words were quoted in the debate, and "press it on, and pass it as soon as possible, no greater boon could be given to the public," and they would earn the grateful confidence of many thousands of the people for whose benefit the reins are entrusted to their hands. We are glad to see that Earl Cairns spoke in support of the measure, and that the second reading of the Bill was carried by a majority of 38.

The movement for the suppression of the gaming-tables at Monaco continues to extend; fresh arguments are constantly being found in the steady flow of evil that issues like a foul stream from this European plague spot. The social state of the town of Nice, through the congregating of people of evil repute, is declared by competent authorities to be as bad as can be. "The streets and promenades are unsafe at night, and most people carry pistols." All who can aid the efforts of the International Association for suppressing this nuisance should communicate with the Secretary to the Committee, Mr. R. S Clough, 8, Adam-street, Adelphi, W.C.

We are glad to see that the noble course adopted by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, in reference to the cruel practice of pigeon-shooting for sport, is bearing fruit in the support given to Mr. Anderson's Bill, known as "The Cruelty to Animals Acts Amendment Bill," which passed the second reading last week, as well as in awakening public feeling and stimulating thought on the whole subject, to an unprecedented degree. Such firm and gracious action as that taken by our Sovereign and other members of the Royal house on behalf of humanity, and in the interest of helpless sufferers, does much to establish and deepen their hold on the hearts of the people, and to strengthen the cords of loyalty and affection by which the nation is bound to the throne.

The Rev. E. H. Bickersteth, in a letter to The Record concerning the proposed Church Mission in 1884, suggests Lent as the best season for its being held, and gives among other reasons for this opinion, "that London is then full, and a Mission is as much needed for the upper classes as for the lower, for Belgravia as for Bethnal-green." This is a statement as true as it is outspoken, and it would be well for the fact to be borne in mind, so that one-sided action be avoided in the field of Christian service as well as elsewhere. The voice of the Gospel message, whether for invitation or reproof, addresses every creature, and it says, "Hear this all ye people, give ear all inhabitants of the earth, both low and high, rich and poor together." There is danger lest in some quarters all the sin and all the sinners should be thought to exist in the East-end, and among the outcasts, and the poor.

Our sympathy with the much that is good and calculated to be useful in the Salvation Army only makes us the more sorry to be compelled to record our conviction as to the mistakes and errors which have sprung up in connection with its development. We regret the mercantile spirit which has been imported into its management, believing it to be utterly contrary to the principles upon which the work of God should be carried on. The warning of "A Chartered Accountant" in The Times of Wednesday, 7th inst., should surely not be called for in connection with a work such as the Army has undertaken. Yet it is worthy of the attention of all who might, under the sacred impulses of a fervent desire to serve the interests of Christ, be tempted to comply with Mr. Booth's invitation to make him their trustee, and place their little capital at his disposal. The correspondent says :—

Now before any one "invests" in the Army, or purchases an annuity from it, he or she should carefully consider that two things are essential to a safe investment—viz., security for the principal and a reasonable certainty of the interest or annuity. What security can the army offer? Practically none. It may have certain leasehold—and perhaps freehold—premises, but these are apparently already mortgaged to building societies. At any rate, it is not proposed to give investors any charge even upon the reversions. If this were done the investments would have to be limited to considerably less than their free market value. In fact no limit is placed on the amount asked and no security is offered. In the event of the Army getting into financial difficulties, the investors and annuitants would have to rank side by side with other creditors, and their prospects of any return of capital (to say nothing of future interest) would be small indeed. As the "army" does not employ its capital commercially, it does not gain money, and therefore current interest and annuities can be paid only out of fresh investments, donations, or subscriptions, after providing for the heavy current expenditure of the Army. Should the inflow of money, from any cause, be insufficient to cover current expenditure, the promised repayments of capital at fixed periods could not be made, and the payments of interest and annuities must cease. I write in no unfriendly spirit to the Salvation Army, but as a man of business, to warn "friends of the army" with capital, lest their zeal should outrun their discretion.

The reply of the General to the above, which appears in The Times of Friday last, does not seem at all to meet the case. The proposal to receive deposits at a fixed rate of interest affects a large class of persons open, on the ground of their spiritual sensibilities, to such arguments as the proposer employs, to induce their compliance, and it is either commercially sound or unsound. If the latter, then none should be asked to adopt it as though they were acting on business principles in so doing, but the risk incurred should be clearly pointed out. As it stands, apart from outside criticism, many would make their deposits with an idea of doing service to the cause of Christ, under the full impression that the security was at the same time at least as good as in ordinary investments. We do not wonder that one of the journalistic critics should say that "this banking scheme is exceedingly likely to ruin him, his Army, and his depositors." Better and safer every way to trust in God's ability to provide means for carrying on his own work.

"I seek not yours but you," was the maxim of the great Apostle ; and we can but think all these schemes for getting money on worldly principles are likely to lead the very classes whose conversion is sought after to look upon religious organisations as being, after all, more carnal than spiritual, and as really prompted by worldly policy rather than unselfish and Christ-like zeal for souls.

The proposal to devote St. Patrick's day, March 17th, to special prayer for Ireland, is one, we trust, which will be widely adopted. There are not a few earnest and devoted servants of Christ in the Emerald Isle who in these days of trial and social turbulence stand greatly in need of the prayerful sympathy of the Lord's people. Their position is one of no little difficulty, and in many cases danger. Signs are said to exist of a better state of feeling on the part of the people, and of some degree of relief from the distress which has prevailed in many districts, and we may hope and expect that in answer to fervent prayer, our heavenly Father may yet pour down blessing on the country which has so long groaned under the weight of many ills. We trust it will be laid on the hearts of all our readers to remember Ireland with special intensity of desire and exercise of faith on the promises and grace of God, on the day when so many throughout Christendom will be in the same attitude and spirit.

The "Fourth Decennial Statistical Tables of Protestant Missions in India, Burmah, and Ceylon," have been published within the last few weeks, and are full of encouragement to the friends of foreign evangelisation. We have no reason to be discouraged or depressed as we review the results of the past, or look forward to those we may reasonably expect in the future. The ratio of increase, as shown by these tables, has risen with each decade. The reports for 1851 and 1861 were prepared by the late lamented Dr. Mullens ; that for 1871 by the Revs. M. A. Sherring and W. H. Shackell, of Benares, both of whom have since been called to their rest ; but the work of their successors, the compilers of the report for 1881, has been pre-eminently cheering, inasmuch as it shows ever increasing progress, and deepening vitality in the results of the work.

In the first decade the ratio of increase was 53 per cent. ; in the second, 61 per cent. ; in the last, 86 per cent. ; so that if no greater progress were made in the next ten years than the proportion of the past, an increase of 121 per cent. may be looked for, a ratio which it has been truly said far exceeds that of the churches in England and America. It should be remembered at the same time that outside these statistics, results of which no earthly account can be rendered, are surely recorded in heaven.

Some of our readers are desirous that we should enter into a discussion of the theory of Conditional Immortality, which has of late been brought into fresh prominence by the action taken by the Church Missionary Society and those differing therefrom. If we hesitate and even decline to do this, it is not because we are in sympathy with the doctrine, or fear to meet its assertion. We strongly feel that the subject of future punishment is far too solemn and momentous for mere argument, and we fail to see that to open the controversy as such in our pages could answer any good end.

Doubtless there are few Christians whose minds have not been painfully exercised on this solemn subject. But let us remember that when Abraham was troubled respecting the threatened destruction of the Cities of the Plain, he fell back on God : "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right ?" There let us also seek rest, and we shall surely find it. And let us obey the injunction, "Preach the Word." We are not commanded to interpret it. Let us preach it, and leave the Spirit of truth to interpret it to those who hear. But let us preach the word in its due proportion. It is the word of the kingdom ; the gospel of the grace of God ; the good news of Christ ; Jesus and the Resurrection. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great "salvation ?" "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ : who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power ; when He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe."

We have received the following communication from a correspondent, and are sure that the information it contains will be read with interest by many of our friends, who may not have seen the Scotch paper to which reference is made :—

It will be gratifying to many of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN to learn (as they may do from the Edinburgh Daily Review) that our exemplary and benevolent Queen has done more than merely express her aversion to the inhuman practice of Vivisection. She has "made her handsome subscription to the New University Buildings, Edinburgh, contingent on vivisection being banished from the curriculum of the medical school." Lady Burdett-Coutts has done the same thing. We may hope many others have acted on the same principle. The statement goes on to say that "for lack of funds the University Museum, and the great Hall, with campanile tower, &c., cannot now be proceeded with, whilst the rest of the building languishes from the same cause."

Notwithstanding this, it would appear that whatever else may go to the wall, vivisection shall in no way be hampered. We are further informed that the "Physiology department of Professor Rutherford is at the end of the corridor, and may be said to occupy two floors of the south and west portions of the building. Every arrangement to suit the requirements and convenience of the lecturer and his assistants has been made. The lecture-hall, on the ground-floor, is seated for between 400 and 500 students. The hall is a fine, lightsome, airy apartment, every seat commanding a full view of the lecturer's table, &c. Immediately opposite is the Professor's museum . . . while behind are several particularly constructed rooms, suitable as kennels for quadrupeds, bipeds, live frogs, &c."

In the midst of all this, "The Scottish Society for the Total Suppression of Vivisection" is setting us Southerners an example we shall do well to follow, having held meetings in various places, distributed numerous tracts and papers, besides presenting to Parliament, last season, between fifty and sixty petitions, that from Edinburgh bearing 20,000 signatures. This, but for lack of funds, would have been indefinitely extended. Sympathisers are asked to communicate for the Scottish Society with Capt. Waterston, 37, Sutton-place, Edinburgh, and for the London Society with Mrs. Heckford, 25, Cockspur-street, S.W.

BIBLE AND COLPORTAGE SOCIETY OF IRELAND.—DEAR SIR,—It has pleased God greatly to bless this society during the past year. Colporteurs have been sent to new districts, and everywhere the sales have been good. Many friends interested in Ireland have been inquiring into the working of our Society, and, satisfied of its admirable fitness to circulate the Scriptures and good literature among the people at very little expense, have become contributors to our funds. One gentleman, a stranger, has, after investigation, become a contributor of £10 per annum, and offers a donation of £50 if we get ten others to contribute £10 each. All contributions received up to the 3rd April will be acknowledged in our next report.—We are, faithfully, H. M. WILLIAMSON, Belfast ; JOHN ELLIOTT, Armagh, Secretaries.

MR. GLADSTONE ON THE BIBLE.

THE following is copy of a letter sent by Mr. Gladstone to a gentleman in Manchester who has charge of a men's Sunday afternoon Bible-class. It was written in reply to an enquiry on the study of the Bible.

"Hawarden, September 4, 1877.

"Sir,—It is wholly out of my power to reply to your letter in the manner which its purpose would recommend and its subject requires. But I am unwilling altogether to withhold a few words which may, at any rate, serve as an indication of sympathy with your desire to profit by the treasures of the Divine Word. I will not dwell on the need of light from above or the duty of seeking it, of being vigilant against the excuses of the private spirit, of cultivating humility, of bearing in mind that God has through all these long ages had a people whom He has led, that we are not the first who come to the wells of salvation opened by Christ and his apostles. I will also assume that you are strict adherents of method in this great study so as to make your results comprehensive. In this view, if you are Churchmen, or, indeed, if you are not, I recommend you to consider whether the table of lessons, old or new, may not be of much use.

"Two things, however, especially I will commend to your thoughts. The first is this, Christianity is Christ, and nearness to Him and to his image is the end of all your efforts. Thus the Gospels, which continually present to us one pattern, have a kind of precedence among the books of Holy Scripture. I advise your remembering that the Scriptures have two purposes—one to feed the people of God in "green pastures," the other to serve for proof of doctrine. These are not divided by a sharp line from one another, yet they are provinces on the whole distinct, and in some ways different. We are variously called to various works. But we all require to feed in the pastures and to drink at the wells. For this purpose the Scriptures are incomparably simple to all those willing to be fed. The same cannot be said in regard to the proof or construction of doctrine. This is a desirable work, but not for us all. It requires to be possessed with more of external helps, more learning and good guides, more knowledge of the historical development of our religion, which development is one of the most wonderful parts of all human history, and, in my opinion, affords also one of the strongest demonstrations of its truth and of the power and goodness of God. I have sent you this very slight outline, all that my time allowed, with the knowledge that if I postponed my reply to make it fuller, it might, amidst the pressure upon me, end in me sending no reply at all. With every good wish, I remain, your faithful servant, "W. E. Gladstone."

The following paragraph, from a London paper, with respect to the present Premier, will be read with interest: "His readiness to succour all who appeal to his charity is only limited by his means, and he frequently returns from a country walk with his pockets cleaned out, thanks to his distribution of gold and silver among the sick or needy villagers. Some months ago he went out for a walk of about twelve miles, intending to return to Hawarden by train; but in the evening he found that he had given away everything, and had not money left to pay for his ticket, so he trudged home on foot, arriving so late that his family had become uneasy. Mr. Gladstone does more than give money away, for he has often been known to go and read the Bible to tenants who were bedridden, and this mission of charity he has always discharged in the most natural, unostentatious fashion, even when he was Prime Minister, and had work enough to occupy all the moments of such a sturdy toiler as himself."

AMONG THE PARISIANS.

WE have received for publication the following deeply interesting extracts from a letter by Pastor T. Armand-Delille, of Paris, to the Hon. and Rev. E. Bligh, of West Malling, Kent, who recently assisted the Pastor in his work:—

"I have but little space left to speak of the work which I took up after leaving the Rue Royale. You know that I sought in vain for some place like the English chapel where we used to be. But the Lord only shut up one door in order to open up for us another, and that a much larger one. In a word, when giving up my researches in despair for a fresh locale, I began to search in another direction, namely, of the Lord Himself, who found for me in one moment the spot which I had been looking for for several months.

"On the great Avenue which leads to the cemetery of St. Ouen, to the North of Paris, there was a piece of ground to let. I hired it for twelve years and constructed a chapel upon it. It was inaugurated Feb. 3, 1882. We hoped that our audiences might be double those of the Rue Royale.

"Our forecast has been exceeded altogether. Our building has only room for about 300, but we have had 500 at one time. The number generally diminishes during the week, but we have had 1000 and 1300 on Sundays. In order to reach all these hearers, we have had to hold successive meetings and give addresses for three hours and more—sometimes six or eight, or even nine addresses, one after the other, and in this way we have met the difficulty.

"Just at present a large number of funerals have been diverted in other directions on account of this cemetery being crowded; but in June or July, when more ground has been added, we hope there will again be an increase.

"Last November, on All Saints Day, there was an enormous concourse. According to official statistics, there passed along the Avenue past our gates on that day 110,000 visitors on their way to the cemetery. We distributed 12,000 tracts. We were kindly assisted in this by Lord Radstock and his sister, Miss Waldegrave, Mrs. Wilberforce (wife of the Canon), Miss de Broen, and some French friends. The next day the crowd had diminished, but we gave out 5000 tracts. We may say, in this way we had an audience of 200,000 hearers!

"But what rejoices us still more than the numbers is the sympathy which is evoked by our addresses. Persons in despair and with troubled spirits have been turned to Jesus, and form now quite a little body among our hearers. The general impression is excellent.

"An old lady said one day to her daughters and their friends, as they were going out of the little chapel, 'What a blessed chance that we should have gone in there!' A workman, who came in with nine comrades, and sat with his cap on, giving himself out a Freethinker, and mocking right out loud, after one of my colleague's addresses, came up to him, cap in hand, and said to him in the most respectful manner possible, 'Sir, all honest people will be with you.' A lady, accompanied by her daughter and a young lad, waited one day in the passage to accost one who had just spoken, and said, 'You have gained our hearts altogether, and so we come to hear you from time to time on our way to and from the cemetery.'—Yours truly,

"T. Armand-Delille.

ZENANA CARS are provided on the railways in India, in which native women can travel in seclusion. Missionary women often avail themselves of these cars for religious work.

THE SALVATION ARMY IN INDIA.—A telegram, dated Bombay, March 8, states:—"Major Tucker, who was recently arrested, together with eighteen other members of the Salvation Army, for persisting in marching in procession through the streets of this city, has been sentenced to one month's imprisonment, without the option of a fine. Four of the other prisoners were fined, with the alternative of one week's imprisonment, and the remainder were discharged."

For the Young.

AMONG THE YOUNG IN GLASGOW.

DURING the past fortnight, seven meetings for the young were held in Pollokshields Free Church, under the auspices of the joint committee of the Glasgow Sabbath-school Union and Foundry Boys' Religious Society. They were conducted by Mr. Mackeith and his assistants. The addresses were illustrated by Sir Peter Coats' magnificent lime-light views of the "Pilgrim's Progress." These pictures did more than ringing the bell and drawing the young folks together; they were effective object-lessons about Christian truth and life.

The service moved forward with remarkable ease and smoothness; the attendance was all that could be desired; the children were thoroughly interested, and their interest increased. All the details were made to contribute to the chief end of the service—namely, to explain the way of life, and urge the children to decision for Christ. The leading features of the meetings were brightness, cheerfulness, variety, and a large amount of solid Bible instruction. Now and again an appropriate text was thrown on the screen, or a verse of a hymn which the children joined in singing.

On three nights the meetings were begun with a "Search the Scripture" exercise, in which the children showed an eager interest. They brought their Bibles and read out the texts. The rustling of the leaves reminded one of a leafy forest in a windy day. The subjects taken up each night were Conversion, Justification, and Sanctification. Many of the children willingly waited for the second meeting, at which several avowed their desire to become Christians.

This effort has done good, for it has, at the least, awakened a fresh and hopeful interest in the Gospel in many youthful minds. The method here described is worthy of consideration by those gentlemen who have a heart for Christ's work among the young, and who are in quest of the most successful ways of doing it. I have not seen any other method of conducting evangelistic meetings among the young that was easier for the speaker, or better fitted to interest the youthful hearer. James Wells.

MISSION AT ST. MARY'S, WEYMOUTH.

THE first meeting in connection with this Mission commenced on Saturday evening, March 3rd, with a prayer-meeting in St. Mary's School, whereat a larger number were gathered than was ever remembered at a Saturday evening prayer-meeting in the town. The Mission preachers are Rev. W. Hay Aitken and Rev. J. Stephens; they are assisted by Mrs. Crouch and Miss Parker, both of whom are conducting Bible-classes and drawing-room meetings in the parish amongst ladies and young women.

There are three or four services every day in the church, all of which have been exceedingly well attended, the large church each evening being quite full, and many anxious souls at the after-meeting have been led to find peace with God. Mr. Aitken has been preaching most powerful sermons, which seem to have taken great hold upon the congregations. This has been especially noticeable amongst the men who have attended the Sunday and week-day services. Mr. Stephens has also received much encouragement in his work amongst the young.

Day by day the services have created greater interest and inquiry, and a rich blessing is expected before the mission is concluded. Mr. Aitken's morning addresses to believers have been very heart-searching, and cannot but bring forth fruit amongst his willing and attentive hearers.

The influence of the Mission generally has been widely and manifestly felt. The quiet earnestness, and the entire absence of any noisy demonstration or excited sensationalism, have impressed even those who were not at first most friendly. We cannot but believe that the blessing will abide and abound. J. H. S.

VISITING THE SICK.

IN connection with the Southampton Y.W.C.A. a Sick Room Mission Band has been organised, which has been as much blessed to the workers as to the sick and suffering who have been visited. It is quite in the hands of the young women, who on Sunday evenings meet in the Association Rooms, and in numbers of three to five proceed to the home of some invalid willing and strong enough to receive them; and there hold an hour's service consisting of singing, prayer, Bible-reading, and a short address.

Already over one hundred visits have thus been paid, to some who have been confined to their rooms for years and deprived of the privilege of public worship. Flowers with a text attached are taken each time, and where necessary a light pudding or jelly.

THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

ON Wednesday week a drawing-room meeting on behalf of the Evangelical Alliance was held at the residence of Mrs. Hitchcock, Norfolk-crescent, Hyde-park, under the presidency of Mr. George Williams. Notwithstanding the severity of the weather, a large and influential company of ladies and gentlemen assembled to hear addresses by Rev. Dr. Donald Fraser and Mr. A. J. Arnold, on the principles and work of the Alliance. Letters were read from the Earl of Shaftesbury and others, regretting their inability to be present.

The Chairman in his opening remarks referred to the warm interest which his revered father-in-law, the late George Hitchcock, always took in the operations of this society; he himself was glad to have this opportunity of testifying how heartily he approved of its objects and work.

Rev. Dr. Fraser briefly spoke of the great aim of the Alliance, to manifest the oneness of those who acknowledged the same Lord and Saviour. While they desired to promote union and brotherly love, there was no compromise of principle on the part of members. They did not give up their churches, but holding firmly to their different views on some points of minor importance, they combined to show the oneness of Christ's Church.

Mr. Arnold, Secretary of the Alliance, followed with a practical address, showing that God had blessed the Society in its efforts to promote union in our own country, while it had been permitted to do much on behalf of those persecuted for conscience' sake in many lands. The speaker referred to the world-wide observance of the Week of Prayer, and gave extracts from letters just received from Jerusalem, and other places of special interest, showing that the uniting together of Christians in prayer had been followed by great blessing in many cases.

Rev. J. Hargreaves, Mr. W. R. Ellis, and others took part in the proceedings, and, after the Benediction, tea and coffee was served in the dining-room.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.—The Twelfth Report of the work of the Free Italian Church up to December 31 last, has reached this country. It records some heavy losses, but, on the whole, a gratifying progress. The year has been one of trial, necessitating the curtailment of some departments of work; but the operations have become more consolidated, and the entire agency of the Church has never been in a more vigorous condition. The present strength is ten ordained ministers, sixteen evangelists, two colporteurs, 1666 communicants, 67,288 scholars, thirty-two churches, large and small, and sixty out-stations. Four serious impediments to the work are pointed out by Rev. M. McDougall, which all the friends of Italian evangelisation ought seriously to ponder. These are the want of really able workers; the rivalry of the Churches; the employment of unfit or unworthy agents; and the neglect of aiming at self-support among the Churches. The report is, however, one of great interest, and being in the form of a little guide to Italy, will be read with great satisfaction. A copy will be sent gratis to anyone interested in Italy, by sending address to the Hon. Sec., Rev. W. Paterson, Fraserburgh.

BRITISH SOLDIERS IN EGYPT.

IN a letter to Mrs. Evered Poole, dated Ras-el-Tin, Alexandria, Feb. 6, Mr. W. Roberts, Scripture Reader, says:—

"I feel so thankful to our Heavenly Father for putting it into the hearts of so many kind friends to help you in the Master's work, in responding to a call from this part of his vineyard. I received to-day two boxes with books, texts, &c. I was very glad to get them, as I was getting short, and the men are continually asking for God's Word. I am glad souls are being brought to Christ. During the last week our men have come out for Jesus, and told their comrades that by faith they have laid hold of Christ."

Mr. Roberts relates some interesting incidents of his work, telling of several to whom he had been able to minister consolation in the hour of death. Speaking further of the work, he adds: "You will also be glad to hear that, during the past week, two hundred and five have joined our Gospel Temperance Union. Any other books that you can send will always be most acceptable; if you could send me some Temperance cards they would be very useful. I should also be glad to receive newspapers, &c., for the sick."

WORK AMONG CHINESE WOMEN.

SIR,—As your readers are aware, the social condition of woman in China, as in other oriental countries, is one of degradation; unlike her more fortunate sisters in Christian lands, she does not hold her proper place in society. As a rule, the sexes in China are kept strictly separated, even brothers and sisters being prevented from freely associating after the former commence their studies. To the poorer classes of women there is, and has been for some time, an easy access, and native women are being trained by missionary ladies to go out and teach their neighbours. It is earnestly desired that greater efforts be put forth to reach the richer classes.

Only those who have lived and laboured among the Chinese are competent to say anything about the ignorant and darkened condition of the Chinese women. But all who are conscious of the influence of mothers over their children, and so over society at large, for good or for evil, cannot but feel a firm conviction that were the women of China gained over to Christianity the rest would soon follow them. The Church of England Zenana Missionary Society, working in co-operation with the Church Missionary Society, have been appealed to to extend the sphere of their labours to China and other places, and this they have consented to do, "if special funds are sent to them for these extensions, of sufficient amount to warrant their commencement of the work." I am informed that £2000 is needed.

I would also call the attention of your readers to an article that appeared in the Church Missionary Gleaner for February, 1883, entitled "Listen!" and to another entitled "The Root of the Matter," that appeared in the February number of the Monthly Packet. In each of these, which can be obtained from the Church Missionary House, Salisbury-square, E.C., there is to be found some account of the work that has been done, and is still in progress, in the city of Foochow and its neighbourhood. In aid of this object a sale of work and useful articles is to be held on Thursday, April 19, in the church room adjoining Eaton Chapel, by the kind permission of the Rev. Charles Fox. Contributions are earnestly solicited, and should be sent by the 12th April either to Lady Emily Dundas, 34, Onslow-square, S.W., or to Lady Beaujolois Dent, 20, Thurloe-square, S.W.—Yours faithfully,

GORDON S. NORTHCOTE.

STRATFORD.—A Conference was held at Stratford, on Saturday, March 3, to consider the best methods of promoting the cause of social purity in Stratford and the neighbouring districts of East London. Addresses were made by Revs. R. P. Pelly and R. A. Bullen, Mr. G. C. Malim, Mr. Boardman; a branch of the Social Purity Alliance was formed.

TRUSTING.

"I will trust, and not be afraid."

I WILL trust my tender Saviour,
Though the way be rough and wild;
For He walketh close beside me,
And He loveth well his child;
And He knows each upward pathway
That is difficult and steep,
So I lean upon his promise,
That He there my feet will keep.

Should He give me aught to carry,
I will bear it for his sake;
Feeling sure, when very weary,
He will then my burden take.
For He tells me I may ever
Cast my burden upon Him.
So I will not think of trouble,
In the future, grey and dim.

I will trust, if work be given
That appears too hard for me,
For I know that He hath promised
"As thy day thy strength shall be."
I will take that sweet assurance,
Nor allow a doubt to rest,
With its gloomy, dark foreboding,
Traitor-like, within my breast.

For I know the Lord will help me,
Day by day, as duties rise,
For He never is unmindful
Of his needy children's cries.
I shall only have to ask Him,
And He then will prove his power
To deliver and to comfort
In the sternest, darkest hour.

Then I will not be disheartened,
But with footstep firm and free,
I will tread whatever pathway
He shall please to choose for me;
Looking ever upward, onward,
Not afraid what'er shall come,
For I know that He will lead me,
By the best way, home, right home!

CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

DR. SOMERVILLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

LITTLE was it thought that in Sleepy Hollow such fine audiences could be attracted to religious gatherings as the attendance at the Gaiety Theatre have shown during the past week. It had certainly come to the knowledge of the citizens that the Doctor had made himself immensely popular, not only in the various countries in which he has travelled, but even in the Port of Durban, and hence he came to Maritzburg with every preliminary in his favour. Still, there were those who doubted that the Gaiety Theatre would be the scene of such large meetings as have characterised the Mission so far. Notwithstanding these forebodings, however, the Mission quickly ingratiated itself, and every evening the Doctor has been listened to by large and intelligent audiences. His preaching has a ring about it which colonists have not often the chance of experiencing, but which they nevertheless appreciate. The amount of energy thrown into the whole service by the reverend gentleman is astounding for one of his advanced years. He is rich in originality, while his imagination is vivid and fertile. It is in this characteristic that he excels, and it is this that enables him to drive home the Gospel truths that he expounds.

In addition to the evening services, prayer-meetings are held every day at noon in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, and these are addressed by the Doctor, besides the service in the same place for "inquirers," after the evening service in the Gaiety. Arrangements have been made for a children's service, an address to Christian workers, a lecture on "The Bible for the World," and an address to natives. So far, the Mission has been a great success, and before it is concluded it is expected that it will be a great means of the revival of religion in the city.—Natal Witness, Feb. 3.

Y.M.C.A., WEST BRANCH.

LAST Thursday evening the members of this Branch, with their friends, came together in Burlington Hall, Savile-row, for another anniversary meeting. Though it was the wintriest night the year has yet seen, a goodly company were gathered under the presidency of Sir William Muir, who opened the proceedings by a brief invocation of the Divine blessing upon the meeting. After an opening hymn and further prayer,

Mr. James Pearce, secretary of the Branch, in the name of the Committee, rehearsed God's dealings with them through the year, in their important work among young men. While they aimed at making the rooms a place of pleasant and useful resort for the young men of the neighbourhood, the chief purpose set before them is the conversion of those with whom they come in contact. The Secretary is privileged now and then by personal talk and converse, as well as through the Bible-class, to lead young men to a decision. The Christian young men also receive much benefit from the consecutive study of the Scriptures. The special addresses given periodically by ministers and others have been a source of no small blessing to many. The instruction classes and the social gatherings have been very serviceable as handmaids of the more spiritual departments of the work. Young men attached to the branch as associates find this to be a stepping-stone to full membership. Not content with receiving good, the members of the Association engage in active temperance and gospel work, and find ample scope for their energies. There are some 250 members on the roll, and forty associates.

Coming to matters of finance, the Secretary said that the £900 needed to sustain the year's work had not, up to that time, been met by about £70. It was the first time for many years there had been a deficit, and he hoped the liberality of friends would be shown at this juncture.

The Chairman rejoiced in such successful efforts as those of which they had heard for strengthening the young men of London in their Christian warfare. Everybody, he said, recognises the benefits of association in matters of worldly concern, and it is also found to be of inestimable benefit in the spiritual life. He gave an illustration of this, by referring to his personal observation of the advantages derived from membership in the Civil Service Prayer Union. Looking around in this vast city, where danger in its varied forms lurks at every step, what a boon to young men to be able to unite in resisting the evil and pursuing the good. Sir William also commended the intellectual departments of the work as of great value in equipping them for the work of life. Above all, he rejoiced to know that they were workers for the good of others—desiring to follow their Master in the blessed mission of seeking and saving the lost.

In formally proposing the adoption of the report, Mr. George Williams gave his young hearers three watchwords for the year—industry, frugality, temperance. He dilated upon these points with much geniality and force. Dwelling on the first with reference to its bearing on the social life of young men, the speaker humorously remarked that he hoped to see many "Evangelical alliances" between members of the Y.M.C.A. and those of the kindred institution, the Y.W.C.A. He gave some recent interesting cases of conversion of young men in London through the Y.M.C.A., and closed by announcing that Mr. Allison, of Regent-street, and himself, as employers of young men, would share between them the deficit named in the balance-sheet.

Capt. Seton Churchill spoke of the value of those Associations in giving a helping hand to those who are fighting against the worldly currents that are all around. He entreated his young friends to be heroes in the fight.

Rev. Joshua C. Harrison extolled the value of "holding fast" that which is good. There is too much holding fast of that which is evil—bad habits, bad doctrines, or the love of gold. Against all these he gravely warned young men. He urged them to study the Scriptures; nine-tenths of the doubt about its truth that exists in these days comes from ignorance of the substance of the Book.

A very warm reception awaited Canon Fleming, who said he regarded the Association as one of the glories of the Metropolis, and one of the best safeguards of its young life. It has no password but Christ; that is one great reason why God has so greatly blessed it in the past, and caused it to extend. Such an institution deserves the sympathy of parents, specially of all the mothers in the land. Do these parents in the country places sufficiently know of and value its worth? All employers of labour, too, ought to be keenly alive to the benefits, even to themselves as well as in other ways, of such institutions. Above all, young men themselves should show their appreciation of it. How can they do that better than by drawing their fellows within the scope of its influence? Can we not find out some better means of commending the Association to these three classes of the people—parents, employers, and young men? London life, as we all know, has its many dangers; but, on the other hand, it is a great field for the training and discipline of moral life, where young men may be fitted and moulded for good work among their fellows, to the glory of God.

Mr. Charles Allison, in a brief but pregnant address to those who were not doing much, exhorted them to wake up, to get up, and to do something. All are not gifted as public speakers, but all can find some outlet for their Christian energies.

The secretary announced that a week's Mission to young men was contemplated in the Hall shortly after Easter.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

READING.

ON Sunday, March 11, Mr. William Noble addressed a meeting in the new Town-hall, which was crowded to overflowing by an audience of over 3000 persons. Mr. Joseph Huntley presided, and the singing was led by a choir of upwards of 200 voices. The meeting was most impressive, and was blessed to many.

PLYMOUTH.

Dear Sir,—On this, the last evening of Major Evered Poole's Mission here, I write, out of the fulness of my heart, to tell you of the great blessing that many of us have experienced in connection with the work. Upwards of 6000 have put on the blue ribbon, and not a few given their hearts to the Lord. The above figures do not represent the widespread influence of this Mission in the town and the adjoining counties. Prayer has been the secret of the success of the whole work.—Yours truly,

J. H. P. Anderson,
March 11. Lieut.-Col. R.A.

TAVISTOCK.

A week's Mission has been held here, resulting in a goodly number of adhesions to the total abstinence pledge. The movement is said to have originated in a young Sunday-school teacher having recommended the wearing of the blue ribbon to her scholars. Inquiry was excited; organisation was resolved upon, and the outcome was this special effort, preceded by a week of prayer for God's blessing upon it. Mr. W. Noble spoke at several of the meetings, and his impressive, earnest words deepened the interest that had been aroused. Special meetings were held for women and children, and the good cause has received a strong impetus in the town.

ANNAN, N.B.

My Dear Sir,—A short but most successful series of Gospel Temperance meetings has been conducted here, by Rev. Adam Scott, of Lancaster, who has carried them through with extraordinary energy, as well as with great ability. The largest hall in our small town was nearly full at the first, and was greatly crowded last night, when the five nights' meetings were brought to a close. Six hundred new pledges have been taken, and, besides these, a good many old abstainers have put on the blue ribbon. There had been much prayer, which the Lord has graciously answered. May He now give guidance and help, that the interest may be sustained!—Ever yours truly,

E. Young.

MR. T. E. MURPHY IN WINDERMERE.

A six days' Mission in Windermere was begun by Mr. T. E. Murphy on Monday, Feb. 25, under the most favourable circumstances. The meetings were held in the Assembly room of the Institute, which seats about 500 people. On the first night of the Mission the room was densely crowded, the audience being a larger one than had ever been seen in the building before. On the succeeding evenings the hall was crowded long before the hour of service, and hundreds were unable to gain admission. The children's meetings, of which two were held, were also well attended, some 300 being present at the first, and perhaps double that number being present at the second meeting. Some 500 new pledges were taken, and nearly 1000 blue ribbons were donned.

The village of Windermere has been stirred to its depths by the fervent eloquence and pathetic appeals of Mr. Murphy. His genial and hearty manner, his singleness of purpose and the thoroughly spiritual tone that pervaded all his addresses, succeeded in winning the hearts of the people. We believe on good grounds that in many instances where the pledge was taken and the blue badge donned, the heart that beat beneath the blue ribbon was led to penitence and prayer, and that many souls are now seeking their Saviour. We thank God, in common with many hundreds in this neighbourhood, that we have been privileged to hear the words and look upon the happy, loving face of such a man of God.—Yours truly,

R. B. Evatt, Congregational Minister.
Park Range, Windermere.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY IN LONDON.

After his abundant labours in the North, Mr. Murphy has been spending a brief season in the Metropolis before entering on the Swansea campaign, which commenced on Sunday last.

Though devoting a portion of this interval to much needed rest, he has not been altogether out of harness. By the kindness of the Hon. Misses Kinnaird and those actively engaged in the work of the Y.W.C.A., he had the privilege of addressing a large company of young women from West-end shops, in Steinway Hall, on Monday week. It is no easy task to interest and sway such an audience, with reference to a subject that has now become rather hackneyed and commonplace. But Mr. Murphy acquitted himself with remarkable skill and success. By touching the sensitive chords in the female heart that always respond to the memories of mother and of home, and by appealing to their sense of responsibility in the formation of social customs, he was able to warn them of the dangers of dallying with the tempter, and to commend the practice of complete abstinence from the alluring cup. With much faithfulness, and yet with becoming delicacy, he touched on the special phases of temptation to which they were subject, and earnestly entreated them to employ for wise ends the undoubted and well-nigh unlimited powers they possess, in influencing the other sex towards habits of sobriety and godliness. His words of cogent reasoning were full of tenderest pathos, lit up by flashes of genuine wit, so that both the heads and hearts of his fair hearers were made to feel the spell of his homely but eloquent speech.

About seventy young women signed the pledge after the address, and others donned the blue ribbon. In some brief remarks at the close, Mr. R. C. Morgan said he thought there was much real common sense as well as divine wisdom in wearing the blue badge. It is not only a continual testimony to the world, but a manifest bond of sympathy between all who are banded together in this holy cause.

Mr. W. Forbes has held a six days' mission at Dickleburgh, Norfolk. About one-fourth of the population put on the blue ribbon.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

SOME extracts translated from our French contemporaries will be read with interest:—

"A pastor was settled at Montluçon in 1874. At that time it was a question whether there were any Protestants to be found there. An order of the Prefect authorised a service in summer, because foreigners were then to be found at Néris-les-bains, thus showing that Protestantism did not exist in the town itself. All the parishes of the district have now been visited either by preachers or by colporteurs. A church has been formed in the chief town of the district, Montluçon; two principal branches, Commentry and Bézenet, have been founded: in six smaller ones service has also been legalised by order of the Prefect. There are five primary schools, six Sunday-schools, one preaching hall, one school held on Thursdays, one class for adults, and eight libraries for the people."

After an evangelising tour among the mountains of Morvan, M. C—— thus writes:—"All these populations desire to forsake Catholicism; they desire to worship God in spirit and in truth. Among the hearers at one place was the Mayor of S——, a superior and intelligent man, who begged me to go and hold meetings in his district also.

"Shortly after this tour M. Ch —— returned to Morvan, accompanied by M. Réveillaud. In his report he says: 'The meetings we have held were greatly appreciated, and through them a door has been opened to us in many new parishes.' In the face of so important and extensive a movement, the Committee of the Central Evangelization Society have decided to place an evangelist in Morvan, to reside at Monlins-Engilbert.

"One day an inhabitant of Neuvy had business to transact at V——, in Morvan. He found himself there just at the time when a Gospel meeting was being held. He entered it, and was so much interested and touched that he became filled with one desire—to introduce a pastor into his village, there to proclaim the same teachings as he had heard at V——."

Mr. George Müller, says L'Evangéliste, continues his evangelistic tour in the North of Europe. He has been a fortnight in St. Petersburg, where, with the approbation of the Minister of the Interior, he has preached every day and twice on Sundays.

All the French religious papers seem more or less occupied with the doings of the Salvation Army; some speak strongly against the unfair method of criticism adopted by Mdme. de Gasparin. The Evangelical papers strongly disapprove the action of the powers at Geneva.

According to Le Christianisme au XIX. Siècle, the journal of the French Reformed Church, there is a contest between the Evangelical party and the Liberal party as to the maintenance of the rule that "every candidate for the holy ministry shall, before being set apart, declare his adherence to the faith of the Reformed Church." The Evangelical party is unanimous in wishing to maintain the rule, and the Liberal party in repudiating it.

The observance of the Lord's Day as a day of rest from ordinary labour is being much discussed in several Continental nations. At the International Congress held last September at Geneva the observance was advocated by medical men and others of various lines of thought, on philanthropic and hygienic grounds. God, who made man, made the Sabbath for man. The following resolution was recently passed by some compositors of journals at Vienna: "In consideration of the resolutions of the Hygienic Congress at Geneva, the compositors of Vienna declare themselves energetically opposed to Sunday work"

WEIGH HOUSE CHAPEL.—Rev. A. Sandison lately announced that the last services in that place of worship would be held on Sunday, the 25th inst., on which occasion there would be a Communion service.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

LLANELLY.

A MONTH'S Mission has just closed at the Athenæum Hall, the speakers being Mr. John Wood and Mr. Charles Edwards, of the Evangelisation Society. Souls were saved and Christians stirred up and brought together.

BOREHAM, NEAR CHELMSFORD, ESSEX.

For several weeks past Mrs. Yeoland has been holding Gospel services in the Mission Chapel situated in this village. Meetings have constantly been held which have always been crowded. A building close at hand has been kindly lent for the purpose of holding overflow meetings, and these, too, have been well attended. In fact, the whole village seems stirred from one end to the other. Some mock and many praise. The work still goes on, Mrs. Yeoland being engaged to remain till April. The prayers of God's people are solicited for Boreham.

BELFAST.

Rev. Thos. E. Cleworth, of the Church Parochial Mission Society, has been following up the work of Mr. Moody in Belfast, and gives the appended short description in a letter to the Secretary:—

"Our work began with wonderful success, and it has been more remarkable every day. The numbers have steadily increased, and I never saw more general and deep conviction under the word. I shall never forget Friday night's service. The church was packed to the ceiling with over 2000 people, who listened with breathless interest, and 500 or 600 remained to the meeting for personal dealing. When it was asked that those who had decided that night or who were anxious should rise, more did so than I was able to count.

"All ages and classes have been reached in a very marked way. Many young men have decided, and an unusual number of old people. I know of one in a very respectable position who is over ninety years of age. The Bible-readings have drawn from four to five hundred of the best class, and have been greatly blessed, while every day seemed to bring more wonderful indications of the Holy Spirit's working. On the closing night we concluded with a gathering of 2500 professing Christians and converts, of whom over a thousand remained with the avowed object of consecrating themselves fully. I was never in such a meeting before."

WASHINGTON, U.S.

I drop you a line from the Capitol city of our nation, touching the religious state of affairs in our midst. Our city has a population of very nearly 200,000, and churches in abundance; but the masses are not reached by their influence. "The harvest is white" indeed, but the labourers are few who are engaged in carrying the word of life to the lost ones. We have plenty of religious form, but alas! very little of the power of God.

Nevertheless, in the midst of this reigning spiritual desolation are some devoted servants of Jesus, who are doing what they can to reach those who will not enter our costly and magnificently-furnished religious temples. A blessed work of grace is now going on in the 6th Street Presbyterian Church, Rev. Mr. Burdick pastor. Waugh and Reyland Chapels have witnessed a gracious work in the past few months; and we are praying that a mighty revival may sweep over our city, burying forever out of sight the Pharisaic formalism that is cursing so many of our Churches, and we may gather in thousands of the "lapsed masses."

Will you not ask the readers of THE CHRISTIAN to pray for a mighty outpouring of the Spirit upon all the Churches of my beloved country, and so hasten "the coming of our King."—Yours in Him, J. E. WOLFE, 1241, 6th-street, N.W., Washington, D.C., Feb. 27.

P.S.—There is no religious paper I take that I like so well as THE CHRISTIAN. God bless it to others as it has been blessed to me.

AMERICAN NOTES.

Fully 100 of the 600 students at the Ohio Wesleyan University have been recently converted, and scores are still seeking.

Rev. E. P. Hammond has sailed for Bermuda, where he has an invitation to conduct meetings for a month. His last labours in the United States were in Newark, N.J., where several hundred are counted among the converts.

The Rev. E. A. Whittier has held revival services in the vicinity of Burlington, Vermont, with remarkable results. There have been over 300 converts and inquirers. Mr. Whittier is one of our most judicious and successful evangelists.

The revival which is in progress at Decatur, Ill., under the ministrations of the Rev. Mr. Harrison, is remarkable. It has been in progress over ten weeks, and 1200 persons have professed conversion. The first meeting of the day is held at 6 a.m., and as many as 600 persons have been present at that hour. Persons have come a distance of 100 miles to attend the meetings.

The evangelist, Rev. A. B. Earle, has been holding several meetings daily for different classes in the Lee-avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn (Rev. W. F. Crafts, pastor). The Church and Sunday-school have been quickened, and about 100, of whom sixteen are heads of families, have expressed their purpose to begin a Christian life. This church was formerly the scene of the Rev. Edward Eggleston's "Christian Endeavour."

In looking over the last number of The Observer, we were agreeably surprised by the number of revivals of religion mentioned. From fifteen to twenty were recorded with reported accessions to the Church of ten or more, up to one hundred. We observe, also, that other papers call attention to the increase of revivals in many parts of the country. Some of these revivals have been in progress for several months past, but most of them have followed the Week of Prayer. The fact ought to be a stimulus and encouragement. —New York Observer.

REV. W. H. AITKEN'S ENGAGEMENTS.—March 4 to 19, Weymouth; March 31 to April 16, Wareham; April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY'S ENGAGEMENTS ARE: March 11 to 23, Swansea; April 1 to 15, Manchester. Applications for Mr. Francis Murphy and Mr. Thomas E. Murphy's services should be made to "The Secretary," 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.—Mr. Banaster at Dorking, Mr. Hutchinson at Newark, from March 18 till March 23; Mr. Spiers at Brixham, South Devon; Mr. Dennes at Friends' Meeting House, Kingston-on-Thames, April 2 to 6. Fourth anniversary meeting of the Children's Scripture Union, Monday, April 2, Exeter hall (Lower hall), at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m.

A LIVERPOOL BETHSHAN.—The Liverpool "Bethshan" (161, Islington) was opened last week by special services; addresses were delivered by Mrs. E. E. Stroud Smith, Admiral Fishbourne, Dr. Woods Smyth, Mr. C. A. Hall, and others. The interest in this movement was such that overflow meetings had to be arranged. Meetings for the promotion of holiness will be held every Tuesday evening at 7.30, and Friday afternoon at 3.30.

BIARRITZ MISSION.—DEAR SIR,—In the letter which you have been good enough to insert from me, inviting Christian workers who may be in this part to give a little personal assistance to this Mission, I omitted to say that Mr. Auguste Saillens' address here is "Maison Montestruck, Rue Chemin de Champs," and the Hall is No. 18, Rue Mazagran. Last Sunday at the Scotch Church, after service, I mentioned our need, and the result was, that a Bristol merchant, a Christian and an excellent French scholar, who had only arrived the night before for a few days, has attended with his family and given us two addresses. May I not say to others similarly circumstanced, "Go thou and do likewise."—Yours faithfully,

Biarritz, March 7. T. R. TUFNELL.

Notices of Books, &c.

A number of very chaste and artistically designed floral cards, with mottoes and texts suitable to the Easter time, are issued by Messrs. Marcus Ward & Co., Chandos-street, W.C.

We notice with pleasure that Mr. Fisher Unwin's admirable collection of brief, pointed, and practical essays on many every-day topics, entitled The Way to Fortune, has reached a third edition.

Another packet of Gospel Leaflets has been issued by the Stirling Tract Depôt. Price 6d. They consist of short poems, by Mr. W. Luff, setting forth various aspects of the Gospel message. Our readers have frequently been indebted to Mr. Luff for original and useful poems, frequently in the interest of the children and of the poor, and we trust they will buy and distribute these Gospel leaflets.

Legion; or, The Modern Demoniac. By W. Gilbert. Tinsley Bros. The design of this singular work is to show that the recorded effects of indulgence in alcoholic drinks, in all their deplorable and varied ramifications strikingly resemble the symptoms of "demoniacal possession" in New Testament times. Whether or not the author has conclusively established this link (which is a matter of secondary import), he has at any rate brought together a body of facts that may well startle and alarm reformers and philanthropists of every hue. We do not know that we have ever before met with such a terrible indictment of the drink. If anyone thinks that Temperance advocates indulge in exaggerated diatribes when condemning the drinking customs of the day, let him calmly peruse this collection of well-ascertained facts; if he is not then convinced of the fearful ravages of the alcoholic demon, he can scarcely be open to conviction. Mr. Gilbert has done good service to the cause of total abstinence by this painstaking effort.

Egypt, Palestine, and Phœnicia. By Felix Bovet. Translated by Canon Lyttleton. Hodder & Stoughton. This work, which has passed through eight editions in the original French, ought to find acceptance with multitudes of those who prefer it in its English dress. As a mere record of observant travel in lands that have become famous, it is of surpassing interest. The vividness and colour that M. Bovet has thrown into his sketches make them at once pleasant and informing to the reader. The illustrative and corroborative side-lights cast on the Scripture narratives by the experiences and reflections of the writer, make his work additionally valuable to the Christian. A revived interest is being awakened throughout Christendom, by the march of recent events, in these "sacred lands" and their peoples. This English edition of M. Bovet's book is therefore a timely one. Professor Godet's short sketch of the author prepares the reader for the rich feast that is to follow, and which we cannot but feel is all the richer by reason of the excellence of the translator's handiwork.

The Old-Fashioned Book on the Old-Fashioned Religion. By An Old-Fashioned Man. 1s. Passmore & Alabaster. In these days of new-fangled notions and modern refinements of thought it is quite refreshing to meet with a book full of old-fashioned truth, presented in plain, homely style, and yet without anything offensive to any reader who can appreciate solid reasoning spiced with pleasant humour and critical sarcasm. Unitarianism is the foe with which the author deals, and with good sturdy blows, well-aimed and boldly struck, he demolishes, one after another, the earthworks of his antagonist, and halts not until he has entirely overthrown the citadel in which the foe had been entrenched; at the same time exposing the flimsiness of the defences behind which he had been wont to hide. The book will do good service, and should be widely circulated, being well adapted for popular use as a refutation of the plausible subtleties of Socinian and rationalistic theories in general. We congratulate the venerable author on his being enabled when nearly fourscore to enter the lists and so valiantly acquit himself in the holy war.

Handbooks for Bible Classes. The Epistle to the Romans, with Introduction and Notes. By David Brown, D.D., Principal and Professor of Divinity, Free Church College, Aberdeen. T. & T. Clark. 1s. 6d. Those who are acquainted with the excellent Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans written by Dr. David Brown twenty-three years ago will welcome its appearance in a new form and so re-written as to be virtually a new book. It is indeed a cause for thankfulness that so important a volume in this series of handbooks for Bible-classes as that containing the Epistle to the Romans should have been committed to so sound and experienced a writer as Dr. Brown. We lately expressed a similar feeling of thankfulness with regard to a somewhat similar series published in England—the Cambridge Bible for Schools—that in it, too, this Epistle should have been undertaken by so able a scholar and so deeply spiritual a Christian as the Rev. H. C. Moule, Principal of Ridley Hall. It is interesting to compare the two books, and to note their substantial agreement upon almost all important points. Although the writers represent different countries, and reflect the training of different universities, and belong to different ecclesiastical organisations, they both substantially agree upon those deeper truths which are so fully set forth in this Epistle. The ruin of man, the righteousness of God, the free and full salvation wrought by Christ, the electing love of God, and the walk, life, and triumph of faith. Moreover, they both regard the seventh chapter as the experience of a Christian, and they both believe in the national restoration and conversion of Israel as taught in the eleventh chapter.

We regret to see some remarks in Dr. Brown's comments on the allusion to baptism in the sixth chapter, which remind one of the fact that the Presbyterian Churches were committed by the Westminster Assembly to the recognition of affusion as the only lawful form of baptism, and that by a majority of only one. Had it been otherwise, and had they been in consequence free to recognise immersion as being the original and full form—as does the Church of England by wisely owning immersion as the rule and affusion as the exception—we hardly think a writer like Dr. Brown would have committed himself to the statement that "it is by no means certain that baptism by immersion was practised in apostolic times." When he adds, "in the case of the 3000 on the day of Pentecost it would have been impossible," it shows that he has not read the elaborate and careful examination of this very point by the late Baptist Noel, who comes to the opposite conclusion. How he can affirm that "in the case of our Lord and of the Ethiopian eunuch it was certainly by affusion, not immersion," it is hard to understand, in the face of Scripture, which conveys so very opposite an impression to the ordinary reader. But these are blots which are not to be compared with the excellencies with which the book abounds, and on account of which we wish it heartily God-speed, and a large circulation.

The Lamb of God. By W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A. Macniven & Wallace. This is a charming volume consisting of expositions in the writings of the Apostle John, bearing upon Christ as the sin-atoning Lamb. The beautiful simplicity of its style, blended with much depth and originality of thought, makes it altogether unique as a treatise upon the sacred theme it discusses. It is issued as one of the series of works known as the "Household Library of Exposition," and is worthy to rank with the specially valuable volumes by which it has been preceded. It consists of seven brief chapters, and deals for the most part with the Revelation, and its references to the Lamb as in the midst of the throne, opening the seven-sealed book, making war against the beast, receiving the Bride to heavenly bliss, and finally displaying wrath upon his impenitent foes. A book more likely to induce faith and strengthen confidence we have never seen, or one which deals more reverently and honestly with the solemn issues of persistent unbelief.

We append a few brief sentences illustrative of the author's doctrinal position, and richness of expression, assuring our readers they are but a few gems from an unusually rich mine of sanctified thought:—

"Should we be able to make good any charges, even the least, against the moral perfection of Christ, the whole scheme of salvation vanishes like a dream, and He Himself needs redemption instead of being a Redeemer."

"The gentleness of Christ was not softness of temper, not moral indifference or weakness. To confound the majestic and solemn tenderness of Christ with weak good-nature is profoundly to misconceive it. The Lamb of God has seven horns."

"Jesus Christ, as a sacrifice, is to be viewed as satisfying Divine justice and reconciling men to God. We must, indeed, exclude the idea that He produced a new disposition in God toward us. But what He did was to reconcile the Godhead within itself, and so to alter the judicial relations of God towards us that He can deal with us upon a new footing."

"The condition of salvation is to behold, and if we consider the nature of salvation we shall see the condition is not arbitrary, but lies in the very nature of the case." "The look is the look of longing, of desire, of trust. It is the look that takes hold of Christ. We take hold of Him, He takes hold of us, and the great old word is fulfilled—He sent down from above; He drew me; He took me out of many waters." "One of the ground thoughts in the Book of Revelation is that Jesus Christ who died upon the tree sits upon the throne of the universe." "The Lamb rules, and He rules as the Lamb."

"Our confidence in the spread of religion depends upon this, 'I believe in the Holy Ghost.' All opposition outside the Church, and all scepticism within it are met by this answer." "The one inexplicable thing in the universe is neither God, nor hell, nor sorrow, nor sin—it is unbelief." "The wrath of the Lamb is primarily the wrath of a rejected Redeemer."

THE NEEDS OF RUSSIA.

According to notice in our last issue, Dr. Baedeker was at the noon-day prayer-meeting in Aldersgate-street on Saturday. The audience was anything but cheering as to numbers, yet the loved evangelist went into the matter with all his heart. He told of the growing power of the Germans in the towns of Russia, of the zeal shown by the German Baptists, of the wretched condition of the Jews in the villages allotted them. He spoke of the blessing he received among the people in the Baltic provinces; how they are thirsting for the Word of life, and would welcome true-hearted workers. Everywhere there is a desire to get the Gospel.

Dr. Baedeker also told how the friends of religious freedom are hindered and hampered by the chief of the Russian Church in St. Petersburg, and how much reason there is for prayer that God would sustain those tried disciples. The needs of Russia grew upon the speaker as he described its steppes for hundreds of miles, with villages scattered here and there: no Gospel in the ministry of the Church, no life in the services. The fields are indeed white, but there are no reapers. Who will go? After speaking for forty minutes he poured out his heart in prayer for Russia and the Jews.

DR. MURRAY MITCHELL has left India, after his long tour of visitation, and returned to this country.

ERRATUM.—In our last issue, in the article "Salvation Army," page 9, the ninth line from the bottom of the first and second columns were erroneously transposed.

MISS ELLICE HOPKINS continues courageously to prosecute her crusade in the North against the prevalent evil of social impurity. Many are enrolling themselves in the "White Cross Army," which seeks to do battle with this particular form of vice.

SHIPWRECKED FISHERMEN AND MARINERS.—During the past year relief has been extended by the Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Society to 13,145 persons. During the current year, the demands upon its organisation and resources from nearly all parts of the coast of the United Kingdom, owing to recurrent storms, have been unprecedentedly excessive.

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.—The House of Representatives in the State of Maine, by 104 votes to 37, have decided to amend their Constitution so as to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicants throughout the State.—Mr. McLagan, M.P., is to introduce a Local Option Bill for Scotland.—A successful blue-ribbon meeting was held last week at Blackheath.—In Toronto the liquor shops are closed at seven on Saturday evening and remain closed till five on Monday morning.

ARMY AND NAVY PRAYER UNION.—The annual meeting of this Union took place on Saturday, at the Cannon-street Hotel. General Copland-Crawford presided. Major Owen Hay, R.A., gave a short address, taking as his subject Ps. xxxvii. 23, 24. The God-man's steps were ordered by his Father from Nazareth to Calvary; the steps of his servants are likewise ordered in that way in which He delights, as they traverse it—a way of trial, often, but not of defeat, for the Lord upholdeth them. A solemn and memorable hour and a half was spent in prayer and praise by nearly 300 officers, after which a conference was held respecting the life of the Christian officer, Colonel Puget being Chairman.

Letters to the Editor.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN IN BIRMINGHAM.

Dear Sir,—"H. S." is not alone in his sympathy towards the hundreds of poor, ragged, and ignorant children; my heart bleeds for them. I am quite sure if a few earnest Christians would make a start and band themselves together, the sympathy of the majority of our townsmen would easily be won.

I, for one, would be glad to co-operate in this matter. Neither in the East of London, nor anywhere else where I have visited, have I been so much pained at the numbers of street-arabs as in Birmingham. H. Cope.

BIBLE CLASSES.

Dear Sir,—In answer to the question on this subject in last week's Christian, I beg to say I have had a Bible-class of sixty to eighty men for the last twelve years. I gave them a cup of hot coffee and a little roll as they came in, and made them comfortable; it is of no use talking to people who are cold, and with empty stomachs. I then gathered them in a warm room round a large table and had a little talk with them.

I made each new man learn the 1st Psalm (a verse at a time), and told him to look by the river side and see how fresh and green the trees looked, &c. I gave each of the men the four Gospels and the book of Psalms in the little portion form in which they are now printed. "Now," I said, "keep one of these in your pocket and take it out when you have a minute to spare and read one verse." I laid these portions before the Lord before giving them out, asked God to bless them, and to give me the word for any poor wounded heart who might be present that day. His Spirit answered this request, and special teachings were accorded to me and to them.

I loved them much and they loved me as their mother, and I believe I shall meet them all in heaven. And I taught them to sing, and showed them "singing" was "worship."

March 9.

Sir,—In answer to a note of inquiry in The Christian of March 8, from "F.," I am happy to give a few suggestions about men's Bible-classes from my own experience, as I have been engaged as lady teacher to a class of men for fourteen or fifteen years.

In starting the work quite fresh in a parish, I should say it would be a good thing to introduce the subject to the men's attention at some parish social gathering, say a tea-party, which working men enjoy quite as much as women. Write cards of invitation to men likely to attend a class, and get the district visitors to offer them with a word of friendly invitation.

Have a nice clean-looking room (if a Mission-room is not available) ready, and a good bright fire; have large-print Testaments or Bibles on the table, and hymn-books, with well-known hymns, arranged round the table. Have chairs (not forms), and let the teacher have, perhaps, on the first occasion of meeting, an illustrated paper or little book to give to each. They like "Friendly Greetings" (Religious Tract Society) very much; these are 6d. a packet.

Begin punctually at the hour fixed, and leave off punctually. Probably the time fixed for the class will be from 8—9, as that suits most working men best.

Let the men read round their verses found out as proofs during the preceding week on a subject given them. As soon as I have allowed them all the time I can spare, I collect their text papers, and give them a subject to search out for next time. This I consider the most important part of the work, as it leads them to spend very much time over their Bibles at home.

I encourage them to ask me questions, but make it a rule they are not to talk to each other, as this is an annoyance and interruption to the other members of the class. This cannot be too much insisted on. It is also a rule that discussion on all controversial points is to be avoided, and the time given exclusively to the consideration of the passage of Scripture before us.

Let the teacher visit at the homes of the members, specially after the first attendance.

Gather the members together certainly once a year for social evening tea, with their wives.

B.

A CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

Dear Sir,—With all my admiration for Mr. Spurgeon, I cannot help feeling that his remarks which you give on "A Call to the Ministry," in The Christian of the 8th of March, will have a misleading effect. Down our way we find the greatest evil in connection with the ministry of the Word is that most people have an idea that no one can be a real minister unless he has had a human training, in much the same way as is needed for the medical profession or the army, and this in spite of the fact that most of the conversions which take place are through the instrumentality of those usually called laymen.

What is peculiarly misleading in the remarks referred to is, that only labourers, artisans, and shopmen are mentioned as mistaking their calling, whereas certainly the greater part of useless ministers come from the more educated class. I suppose what is needed more than anything else is to grasp the fact that the power of the Holy Spirit is the grand thing needed for the ministry.

It has always appeared to me unbecoming for the followers of the Carpenter to sneer at artisans, and it is worthy of remark that while in Old Testament days there were training places for prophets, God passed them by, and called his messengers sometimes from the plough, to go and break up the fallow ground of the soul; and in the New Testament we see that Paul could stitch up tents as well as build up the saints; and the blessed Master Himself came forth from the carpenter's shop, and erected a spiritual house—the Church, which will endure for ever.—Yours very truly,

Thos. D. Saunders.

PARLIAMENT AND THE OATH.

Sir,—May I trespass on your space to urge your readers not only to give themselves to earnest and united prayer that the fear of God may deter the House from passing the measure on this subject now before Parliament, and thus a great national sin be averted, but to accept most fully their individual responsibility in the matter. It appears to me to be the bounden duty of every believer not only to protest, and so be clear of all personal complicity in a course so daringly opposed to God and his truth, but also to act, unhesitatingly to act. No time, strength, or money should be grudged to bring to bear every grain of influence at command on those who stand in high places. Let as many petitions as possible be signed, and sent up to both Houses. Let the God-fearing throughout the country write privately to their respective representatives on the subject. I have just seen that a petition from Exeter has been presented, signed by 4000 persons.

If this were done from one end of our land to the other, a marked effect would be produced. Let not the cry (true in some respects, false—utterly false—in others) that "Christians have nothing to do with politics" deter for a single moment. When mere party or personal interests are involved we can afford to be indifferent; nay, we must needs be, as those whose portion is above; but when the honour and glory of our God are at stake silence is sin, and inaction a shame.—Yours faithfully,

Frank H. White.

164, Westbourne Terrace, March 10.

I would urge my fellow-Christians to procure and circulate far and wide a four-page letter, entitled, "Shall Atheism force on us an Alternation of our Laws?" To be obtained of Messrs. Shaw & Co. 7d. per dozen, post free.

"JESUS ONLY."

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 15th instant you have a short but most important letter under the heading now given, "Jesus Only." The subject is one of incomparably greater moment than the majority of those dealt with in your own or any other columns. It is to be approached with awe, and handled if at all as reverently as Moses would handle the vessels within the veil.

In very thoughtful and weighty words your correspondent says: "It is to be feared that many well-meaning persons, carried away with the phrase 'Jesus only,' are practically making Him the only object of their love and worship. Instead of coming through the Son to the Father, they fall before the Son and forget the Father. And when this is not done entirely, it is done partially. In our popular songs of praise the Father is put in a very subordinate position" (if, indeed, He be not entirely ignored).

Here the thoughtful Christian has many things to say, and some of them hard to be uttered; not because the truth is obscure, but because certain hasty conceptions, struck off (as some one has said) "at a white heat," have proved very captivating, and thrown into the shade the more sober and scriptural beliefs of the wise and prayerful of other days.

You will not need to be reminded that precisely here is the point of departure which has widened out into Swedenborgianism. Hagenbach says: "Against the one-sided doctrine of God the Father, whom many supposed they could approach without the Son, he brought the equally one-sided doctrine of God the Son, whom he placed undeniably in the place of the Father. He [Zinzendorf] bids us to know no God but the Saviour, and thus he not only ignored the existence of God the Father, but lost the great doctrine of the mediatorship of Christ." I must be allowed to say that I touch the question with reluctance. In a long course of years I have seen it rekindle again and again the warmth of a very barren and unprofitable controversy. Better that nothing should be said about it at all, than that we should go forth in search of distinctions and limitations which would set Christian against Christian, and Church against Church. Let the teaching of the Bible in its simplicity be allowed to make its natural impression upon the believer's heart, and we shall find ourselves in harmony with each other and with the most ancient creeds; as well as equipped for all our need, both in respect to work and prayer. John xiv. to xvii. suffices for all this.

If we cannot clearly understand how our truly, though not exclusively, divine Redeemer can be "Lord of all;" and yet that He should be sent of the Father, given of the Father, accepted of the Father, appointed of the Father as man's mediator and final judge, we may at least be thankful for the great and various light gathered on these subjects by the divines of the past—light which they have brought into a focus when treating of the "covenant relations" of the persons of the blessed Trinity. Those teachers, as every day is proving, were nearest to the Scriptures and to common sense when fixing landmarks which were to guide and to help the thoughts of all subsequent ages.

I am, very truly yours,

Clapton, Feb. 24. Presbyter.

MR. HENRY HOLLOWAY.

We learn with much regret that this earnest evangelist has been for some time laid aside from active service through feeble health. He has consulted many physicians, but as yet the treatment prescribed has failed to restore him to vigour.

We commend our brother to the sympathies and prayers of believers, if so it may please God, in response to their united petitions, to restore him. There are many calls for his services in Scotland and elsewhere, and his heart's desire is to be once more telling out the story of salvation to his fellow-men. He is now in the Hydropathic Institution, Matlock Dale, Derbyshire.

"THE DAY OF SMALL THINGS."

Only a little burden,
Left at the Master's feet,
Only two words, "He careth,"
Making the rest complete.

Only a tiny token
From the tender Heart above;
But faith sat still and strengthened
'Neath the canopy of Love.

Only a glimpse at riches
In the Treasury of God;
And the heart leapt out in gladness
To follow where He trod.

Bit by bit He giveth,
Tender, patient, wise;
Never too much, too little,
He grants or He denies.

Bit by bit He taketh
Out of the crowded soul,
Knowing so well the hindrance,
The space between the goal.

Line by line He teacheth,
When He sees the heart can read
His meaning in the lesson,
Its purpose, and its need.

Compassed about with blessing,
Shut in on every hand,
And all in the children's pathway
The Father's heart hath planned. A. S.

A. HALDANE, 118, Westbourne-terrace, London, S.W.

A special appeal is being circulated by the Irish Society, which seeks to promote the Scriptural education of the Irish-speaking population, chiefly through the medium of their own language. The Society has enlarged its sphere of labour, and asks the help of all who approve of its objects. The Secretary is Rev. THOMAS KEANE, 32, Sackville-street, London, W.

Rev. J. N. WORSFOLD, Haddlesey Rectory, Selby, Yorkshire, writes to say that he has received an urgent request from the moderator of the Waldensian Church for help in meeting a deficit of £700 in the income of the College at La Torre for educating the pastors and missionaries of the Vaudois Church. Mr. Worsfold will be glad of the co-operation of Christian friends in this and other lands.

An earnest plea is sent to us by a friend of the Christian Day and Boarding School at Lodiana, India, in connection with the Society for Promoting Female Education in the East. Funds are needed to meet the salary of another teacher (£50 per annum). The school is doing good work in training the native girls for Christian usefulness. Contributions may be sent to Miss WEBB, 267, Vauxhall Bridge-road, London, S.W.

H. Cook's Seamen's Mission—9 Comforters and some Books from a Sympathiser.

THE ANCHORAGE.

Hebrews vi. 19.

SPECIAL BRANCH of the MISSION OF HOPE AND HELP

For the reception of the more respectable class of young women in trouble.

Conversion of heart, according to the simple Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, is the one thing prayerfully and faithfully sought.

The young women are fitted for resuming their position in life, by thorough instruction in household duties, cookery, dressmaking, fine laundry work, &c. &c.

A full description of the work of the Mission, with regulations for admission to the "Anchorage," will be sent on application by letter to Mrs. H. STUART-WORTLEY, Rosslyn House, Grove End Road, N.W. (President of the Ladies' Committee), to whom, or to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, subscriptions may be sent.

Dock Labourers' Mission,

26 and 32, Chamber-street, London Docks, E.

With regret, a portion of this useful Mission will shortly be taken down for Railway improvements; therefore a New Building is required, which will cost about £9,000. We are praying for the needful funds.

That Little Bow of Blue.

IN FOUR VERSES.

(Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN).

MY heart was very heavy, for my children cried for bread;
I wept to see my little ones go supperless to bed;
I listened for a footstep, as I'd often done before,
Waiting for a staggering man to stumble through the door:
But his step was firm and steady, and his eye was clear and true,
And on his ragged coat he wore a little bit of blue! Extract.

A CALL TO CHRISTIANS.

By CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

IN THREE VERSES.

(Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN).

COME forward, Christians, young and old,
Oh help us in our fearful fight against the tyrant's sway!
A cruel master he has proved to many in our land,
And now we hope to set them free; oh, lend a helping hand!
We go not forth to rescue them in feeble human strength,
But trusting in our Saviour's power, we hope to win at length,
He doth bless—ay, grandly bless—each effort that we make;
I matters not how small the deed, if done for His dear sake. Extract.

CONTENTS OF NO. 1.

Where is my wandering boy to-night?
One there is who loves thee
The mistakes of my life have been many
Long in darkness we have waited
Are you coming home, ye wanderers?
A ruler once came to Jesus by night
Fierce and wild the storm is raging
Why do you wait, dear brother?
Say, where is thy refuge, my brother?
Wny perish with cold and with hunger?
From the riven Rock there floweth

CONTENTS OF No. 2.

What can wash away my stain?
Come, thou weary! Jesus calls thee
Should the death-angel knock at your chamber
The Gospel bells are ringing
Have you any room for Jesus?
Oh come, sinner, come! 'tis mercy's call
Make room for Jesus! room, sad heart!
Oh, do not let the Word depart
Brightly beams our Father's mercy
O Christ, in Thee my soul hath found
Light in the darkness, sailor!

CONTENTS OF No. 3.

When my final farewell to the world I have said
Standing by a purpose true
When the storms of life are raging
I have read of a beautiful city
Ring the bells of heaven! there is joy to day
I have heard of a land far away
"Land ahead!" its fruits are waving
Oh, tender and sweet was the Master' voice
'Tis the promise of God full salvation to give
When storms around are sweeping

CONTENTS OF No. 4.

Of course you know that to a d fro, throughout our glorious land
She only touched the hem of His garment
Our Master has taken His journey
Tempted and tried
Father, don't you hear the ange
The prize is set before us
There is a Fountain filled with blood
Would you lose your load of sin?
Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

ADVANCED CASE OF CONSUMPTION.

The patient's name, JOHN LEACH, of 50, Back Hartington-street, Barrow-in-Furness. He was recommended to me by Miss Ellen Farmer, of 6, Parker-street, Hindpool, who had herself been under my treatment, and known of other cases cured.

J. L. had been ill for eleven months, since rupturing a large vessel in the right lung, and had been under medical treatment all the time without avail.

In three months this patient resumed his employment, saying: "I feel strong now, only a little shortness of breath. The liniment you prescribed for me has been of very great service, and I hope another supply of your medicine will make me all right."

About six weeks after this, in his last letter, he says:—"I am now in good health, and continue to follow my employment. I will do all I can to recommend others to you."

In a recent letter from Miss Farmer she says:—"I am glad to tell you that Mr. Leach has quite recovered. I recommended your medicine to him, lending him my book on Consumption,* when he had been off work for eleven months, and was in a far advanced stage."

It would be well if every patient would do the same.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. The Christian Colportage Association

FOR ENGLAND

Now employs over 90 Colporteurs in Town and Country. They visit the homes of the people, carrying Bibles and carefully selected Christian publications for sale.

During the past year the Society has circulated over 18,000 copies of the Scriptures, and 400,000 Christian books and periodicals.

By this means a great many people are reached with the Gospel who are otherwise inaccessible, with most blessed results.

Owing to the continued increase of the Society's operations, the Committee are anxious to raise a Special Fund of £1,000 to augment the small working capital now in hand. Toward this £100 is promised if the whole be raised within three months. Total to date, £220.

The Committee makes an earnest appeal for help.

Contributions may be sent to the Office of this Paper; to Messrs. RANSOM, BOUVERIE & Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; or to

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

A BROKEN HEAD versus A BROKEN HEART.

There is an anecdote told of Whitefield when at Exeter, where his preaching provoked in a man who was present such an extraordinary degree of anger that on the next occasion he loaded his pockets with stones, with the intention of injuring him; but instead of doing so he listened, and after the sermon was finished he went up to the preacher, and said to him, "Sir, I came here to hear you this day with a view to break your head, but the Spirit of God has given me a broken heart"! and his after-life proved this to have been a case of real conversion. THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION. Office: 56, Haymarket, London, S.W. This Society is employing 120 Scripture Readers amongst the poor and destitute of London. They go from house to house, and from room to room, reading the Word of God, pressing its precious truths on men's acceptance, pleading with God in prayer for a blessing, and directing all with whom they come in contact to Jesus the Saviour of Sinners. We want to multiply Scripture Readers, for nothing, we believe, can supply the place of house-to-house visitation, and as surely bring the Word of God into immediate contact with individual souls. Funds are urgently needed, and will be thankfully received by either of the undernamed: Marcus Rainsford, Clerical Secretary; J. Roddam Tate, Lay Secretary; or Messrs. Morgan & Scott.

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of harder Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that

Words of Truth and Soberness for tried and afflicted ones, from B. COPSON GARRATT'S Diary of Correspondence.

Copy.]

From R. H. TOWNEND, Esq., Tabley House, Ealing, W.

March 13, 1883.—My anticipations are more than realised; the magnetic apparel has had a marvellous effect. My medical man called the other day, and said I appeared to have taken out a new lease of life. I should be glad to lead everyone needing a remedy to exercise the same faith in your invigorating treatment which I did, by testing it, and their faith would then be confirmed by their experience, as in my case. I can truly wish you great success in your operations.

Copy of Letter from Mr. PRICE to Mr. BROWN.

"9, Alexander-street, Stanley-park, Liverpool, October 17, 1882.

"My dear Sir,—I have your favour of yesterday. I am delighted to reply thereto, because, first, I know what suffering is, and, secondly, because I shall derive real solace if I can be of any use to another sufferer. After suffering for years, and spending time and money, and trying this nostrum and another, I at last, through a lady once bed-fast (but since married), heard of B. C. Garratt's Odo-Magnetic Appliances, purchased one, shortly after the use of which I felt a different man. I still wear it; it is not the least inconvenience, not any more so than the ordinary chest protector. One thing, though, I should like to impress you with; I would not purchase any other than B. C. Garratt's; others are in the market here in Liverpool. I am confident if you purchase it, put it on, and wear it, you will soon find relief.

"Had it not been I am very busy here at the office, I would have written more. Don't hesitate a moment: it is the remedy in the hands of God for indigestion and all its concomitant evils. I should be delighted to hear again from you, and think it no trouble; therefore do not spare me.—Believe me, yours faithfully, (Signed) J. Price.

"Mr. J. Brown."

There are mistaken conceptions abroad respecting the Hygienic influence of Magnetism which at times would be amusing, only that coming as they do in some instances from persons who should know better, are ridiculous and mischievous, because untruthful. Even medical men at times, when interrogated as to the value of Magnetism, have very plausibly admitted that Galvanism and Electricity have their remedial uses, but assert that as far as the inquirer is concerned it would not meet his case, while at the same time they may not have read two pages to inform themselves of the essential difference between Magnetism and Galvanism. The interrogator may have observed again and again its marked results on some of his friends, yet has allowed his own convictions to be overruled by the doctor's remarks. We should have replied, most emphatically, "Well, doctor, I have been under the treatment of yourself and others for some years without deriving material benefit, and if you say this is not calculated to afford me relief, please give me what will, or else, from what I know of its vitalising effects on others, I am disposed to make use of it." We do not wish to be severe in our criticism, but we have good reason to believe that many a hopeful patient has been hindered from using the remedy by well-intended but mistaken replies. One physician gravely assures his patient that the appliances are far too powerful to be beneficial on a delicate constitution; another that they are too weak to to be of any service; one that they are no more use than mere flannel; another that there can be no Electric flow since it is interrupted by the material encasing the magnets. Amidst such conflicting statements we can prove that there is a direct relation between this subtle force Magnetism, and our still more subtle life force; consequently there could scarcely be a single instance of chronic or organic weakness in which it would fail to render essential service when judiciously employed.

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of names as referees to any address.

The Christian.

"THE NARROW LEDGE OF THEISM."

"THE narrow ledge of theism," to quote our Premier's term, is not so narrow as it might at first sight appear to be. Theism is not Christianity we know, but it is the foundation on which it rests. Take that away, and all sacred truth falls to the ground. "In the beginning—God," accounts for all things, both in the world of matter and in the sphere of religious belief. Granted that God is, the difficulty of advancing beyond this initial step in inquiry as to divine realities is not great; a firm foundation is laid on which to stand, and from which to rise to further knowledge of Him with whom we have to do.

The proposal to do away with this so-called "narrow ledge" brings us face to face with what the acceptance of the Divine existence, as an indisputable fact arising out of the very necessity of the case, involves. A well-known writer has said, "We owe modern atheistic philosophy sincere thanks for having first made us vividly conscious how incomparably great a thing it is to affirm the existence of God."

Narrow as the ground may be to those who are resting in all the blessed fulness of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, it is yet in itself truly "incomparably great," and therefore, on no account to be abandoned. To endorse all the glorious truths of the revelation we believe and are sure we have received from God, is not within the province of an earthly Government composed of all shades of religious opinion—that is the Christian's position, as distinct from that of the human legislator or the mere politician. But to take the ground of the atheist, and declare that the very existence of God is a matter of insufficient importance to be made a condition of a share in directing the policy of a professedly Christian country, is to offend the moral sense of Christendom, and to inflict a wrong upon mankind. The vast majority of men not only admit, but actually proceed in their conduct of national life, amid much ignorance of the true God we grant, upon the definite assumption that a supreme power, to which all are responsible, does really exist, and is lodged in some Being they cannot ignore. The laws of ancient Greece and Rome acknowledged this and were based upon it; their greatest orators and philosophers agreed in their testimony to the wisdom of Plutarch's words, "In framing laws, religion is the first thing that claims attention, for you may as easily build a city without foundations, as preserve order among the citizens without belief in a Deity."

Atheism, with all its wide-spread efforts, and its rapidly advancing power, is not the creed of man, nor has it ever been. Underlying all the dark mass of superstition and ignorance which the vast domains of heathendom display, there is yet perceptible a human consciousness of God, and rarely, indeed, is this consciousness wholly lost, or, where felt, wholly impotent in its moral effects. Hence the advantage which the Christian teacher has in many cases as he goes forth to proclaim the message of salvation; his language is, "Him whom ye ignorantly worship declare we unto you." Mr. Gladstone said, a few years ago, "Men who have no belief in the Divine Revelation are not the men to govern this nation;" we believe so, too, and therefore protest against a Bill framed to make such men free to take part in our legislation.

We do not look at the matter as a personal one between Mr. Bradlaugh and the House of Commons, but as having a wider range, and including national recognition of the Theistic as opposed altogether to the Atheistic side of things. Mr. Bradlaugh and Atheism declare God and the Bible to be "fatal barriers to progress." We, owing all our national blessings, yea, our very national existence, to the possession of faith in both, claim that we are bound to maintain our national and constitutional allegiance to them, and strenuously hold fast at least the Theism of our position, "narrow ledge" though some may declare it to be. Better stand on that than lose our foothold, and fall headlong into the fearful abyss of infidelity and Atheistic despair.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

IN one of his Boston lectures, Mr. Joseph Cook has lately been discussing this deeply interesting theme. Many of our readers will peruse with interest his thoughts upon it. He says:—

Is Palestine ever to rise from the desolation into which she has been trodden down by six hundred years of the tyranny of the Mohammedan races? The hoof of the Turkish Power is said to wither every green thing it touches. When the tread of this hoof ceases to be felt in Palestine, will her vineyards bend once more with heavy clusters, will her valleys grow green again, will her deserts blossom as the rose?

My friends, I must be frank with you, and say that I am not one of those who believe that Palestine is likely soon to recover her ancient political greatness. She was a bridge between two great nations, and the opportunity of greatness came largely from her position. She never will be as great politically and industrially as she has been until the Valley of the Nile and the Valley of the Tigris and Euphrates are again as great as they once were in matters political and literary and commercial and religious. Fill up the Valley of the Nile with a better civilisation, let liberty and order be introduced into Asia Minor, let the historic soil between Mount Lebanon and the head of the Persian Gulf be traversed by a railway which would not need to be as long as the Pacific Railway from Omaha to San Francisco, and would by no means be as difficult to build; let the advance of the occident toward the rising sun bring noble industries into Egypt and the old lands once governed by the Medes and Persians; let either Russia or England, or any power to whom God in his providence may assign this huge task, regenerate the valleys of the Nile and Euphrates, and I believe that Palestine may again rise and shine politically and industrially, and, if God will, religiously. It appears to me that nothing can regenerate Palestine up to the extent of its capacity, in the present state of the Nile valley and the Euphrates, except the withdrawal of all Syria from under the Turkish power. How soon that withdrawal will occur I know not, but at the present the whole land is eclipsed by Islam.

Events, however, move rapidly in these days, and if it be the purpose of God, as there can be no reason to doubt from Bible testimony it is, to bring back the captivity of his people Israel, and to restore them again to their own land, and so to make Jerusalem once more "the joy of the whole earth," even as it shall be "the city of the great King," all the needful circumstances accessory to that end may occur in shorter time than the lecturer appears to deem probable. He asserts that already "Jerusalem is becoming the head-quarters of modern Israel," that "there are signs of improvement in many parts of the Holy Land," and that "there is a new Jerusalem springing up outside the walls of the old city."

Turkish power, so long on the wane, so manifestly doomed to utterly perish, may, by much speedier movements than we have yet beheld, be driven out of Europe and Asia Minor, and then Palestine and Jewish restoration cannot fail to be among the foremost questions of the day. In any case, even though still delayed, it must come, for hath not God said—

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt.

"And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

"And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

Remembering all that the fulfilment of prophecy on this matter involves for the Church, for the Jews, and for the world at large, we may well plead with God to hasten it in his time. "Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give Him no rest till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth."

MISSIONS TO THE JEWS.

WE are often surprised that greater interest is not taken in special Missions to the Jews. There is growth in this direction on the part of the Christian community, as shown by increasing sympathy with the work of the various societies, but by no means to the extent of the need and special importance of this eminently scriptural branch of evangelistic effort.

The report of "The Mildmay Mission to the Jews" for 1882, has recently been issued, and we warmly commend it to the attention of our readers. The opening pages are a glowing testimony to the faithfulness and loving kindness of the God of Jacob, as shown to those who have been engaged in carrying on the work, which has truly been on their part "a work of faith, and labour of love." The receipts for the year have amounted to £4890, although no public collections have been asked for, or deputations employed to gather subscriptions. Our friend the Rev. John Wilkinson, who directs this Mission, must be congratulated on the blessing God so graciously bestows on him and his coadjutors.

In the interests of Jewish Missions all round, we wish this report a wide circulation, as it can hardly fail to awaken many minds to the subject of Israel's claims on Gentile believers.

We have also read with much interest an article in The Jewish Herald for this month, concerning the work being carried on by the "British Society," in connection with their Mission House in Spitalfields. The various agencies employed there seem well adapted to effect such results as the Society aims at, while their work in other parts of England and abroad is of a very useful, and, we are glad to know, in many places of a successful character. We hail with joy the time when on a far wider scale this subject of Israel's relation to the Gospel, and also of Israel's future as a nation, shall occupy the mind and heart of the Lord's people. "Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion, for the time to favour her, yea, the set time is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof." "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem, they shall prosper that love thee."

VIGO.—Mrs. Wigston, writing on March 2, speaks of a visit paid to that port by some vessels of the Channel Fleet, and of interesting services held for the men. Other vessels were expected, and further interesting work anticipated.

"The Christian" Pulpit.

THE ATONEMENT.

A SERMON FOR GOOD FRIDAY.

By the Rev. HORACE MONOD, Marseilles.

"My God! My God! Why hast Thou forsaken Me?"—Matt. xxvii. 46.

EIGHTEEN hundred years ago, on one of the public places of Jerusalem, a man, a Christian, accused of blasphemy, appeared on trial before a fanatical assembly, already determined to condemn him. Without allowing him time to finish his defence, they furiously rushed upon him, and, gnashing their teeth, dragged him out of the city, and stoned him to death. At the frightful moment when they were about to seize him, this man, who had nothing more to hope for on earth, appeared not only calm and peaceable, but positively triumphant. Indifferent to the cries of rage which resounded in his ears, as to the stones by which they murdered his body, he fixed his eyes on heaven: heaven opened to his look of faith; and as he saw the place the Lord had prepared for him there, he cried out—not to brave his persecutors, for whom he felt nothing but compassion, but to bear testimony to the peaceful and glorious assurance which filled his heart—"Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God!"

In the way, all bloody and glorious, which Stephen, the first martyr, opened by his death, there was soon seen crowding a multitude of Christians, of every rank, of each sex, and of every age, who in their turn surrendered their lives in torments; and all these confessors of the faith died like Stephen, with peace in their hearts, and songs of triumph on their lips. Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, instead of flying from a cruel death, was so impatient to quit this world and go to his Saviour, that he ran to meet the ferocious beasts which were leaping from their dens to devour him. Felicitas, a woman of illustrious rank, with her seven children, remained unshaken by all the promises as well as by all the threatenings which they employed in the hope of leading her to save, if not her own life, at least that of her children; she turned towards them and said: "Look on high, my children, look to heaven, where Jesus waits for you with his saints; remain faithful in his love, and contend for your souls."

Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna, when the proconsul offered to send him back free, if he would only revile Christ, replied: "For many years have I served Him and He has never done me evil; how could I blaspheme my Saviour and my King?" Calmly he mounted the pile of wood, and from the midst of the flames, with which his head was crowned, as with a halo of glory, poured out into the bosom of his God a last song of thanksgiving. Perpetua, a young and noble woman, whom they tried in vain to shake, by presenting to her when in prison, at one time her aged father who was still a heathen, and at another her unweaned child, being left all bleeding on the arena by the beasts which had done but half their work, herself guided to the fatal stroke the trembling hand of the executioner charged to despatch her.

Time would fail me to speak of Irenæus, and Cyprian, and Flavian, and the soldiers of the Christian legion, and hundreds of thousands besides, who, in the early ages of the Church,* joyfully endured death agonies, not to mention those who followed them in the middle ages—those first missionaries who paid with their lives for the conversion of the heathens of the East; or later on, the Vaudois, and multitudes more, cruelly tortured and murdered by the Apocalyptic woman, "drunk with the blood of the saints;" or those in our days who have fertilised with their blood the battle-field of foreign missions: these all died in holy triumph, like that Christian woman who, at the moment of suffering martyrdom, exclaimed, "Crowns are being distributed to day, and I am going to receive mine!"

There is, however, in the long roll of illustrious martyrs, one strange exception—but only one. There was One who suffered for the truth, but who instead of meeting torture with heavenly peace and triumph, trembled at the thought of the fate which awaited Him, and cried out in deepest anguish: "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death." Instead of beholding with a holy joy the approach of the last conflict, it caused Him terrible agony, and wrung from his heart, with bitter groans and tears, the prayer: "Oh, my Father! if it be possible, let this cup pass from me" (Matt. xxvi. 39). Such was the inward fear and terror He experienced, that his sweat, changing its nature, fell to the ground like drops of blood. And in his last moments, instead of giving testimony, like all the other martyrs, to the divine power which not only sustained, but raised them above the feeling of suffering, He threw to heaven that cry of inexpressible misery: "My God, my God! why hast Thou forsaken Me?"

What then is the answer to this moral enigma, what is the explanation of this strange anomaly? Was this man, so troubled in presence of martyrdom, deficient either in submission to the commands of God or in love to the human race, which his death was intended to benefit? No; never was believer more perfectly submissive to the will of his heavenly Father: never was human being possessed of a more ardent and tender love to his fellow-men.

Had this man on his conscience some grievous sin, long ago committed, the remembrance of which awoke at his last moments and mingled bitterness in the cup of his death? No; never did man carry farther the exercise of all virtues; his heart was pure, his life was holy, and filled all through with works the most excellent; so that not even his enemies could convict Him of a single sin: therefore He alone of all the sons of Adam should have had the right of appearing before the tribunal of God, and of claiming from the sovereign judge eternal life as his reward.

Had this man a wavering and obscure faith? Were there in his mind doubts about the immortality of the soul, about the resurrection of the body, about the happiness and glory which awaited Him after death? No; quite the contrary, it was He who brought life and immortality to light; and He knew perfectly well, when dying, that He was returning to his Father and his God; that he should be that very day in paradise; that the Father was about to "glorify Him with the glory which He had with Him before the world was." Yea, much more, He knew that his glory would be augmented in consequence of his humiliation; He knew that on account of having humbled Himself "to death, even the death of the cross," God would "highly exalt Him, and give Him a name which is above every name;" He knew that a bright and glorious cloud, like a triumphal car, would bear Him on high, and that the heavenly world would, in a transport of joy, cry out at his approach: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates! and be ye lifted up ye everlasting doors! that the King of Glory may come in!"

Such were the moral conditions under which this man died, to whom alone, of all the martyrs, death was accompanied with fear and anguish, instead of being transfigured and rendered triumphant by the hopes of faith. What is then the solution of this awful mystery? Seek and find, if it is possible, a plausible explanation of the mystery of Jesus Christ's death, for doubtless you have all fixed on Him as that martyr who was the exception among all; tell us, if you can, the secret of that trouble, of that fear, of that horror, of that agony, of that bloody sweat, of that feeling of being abandoned by God; tell us how it was that He, among all the confessors of the truth, who had most reasons for dying in peace, for dying triumphantly, is the only one who is well nigh overwhelmed in prospect of death?

Ah! it is because there was something more in the death of Jesus than that of a martyr! it is because He did not merely give up his life to confess the truth, and to seal the doctrine which He had preached, or to leave us an example of the most wonderful, the most holy, and the most touching virtues. No! here is the key of the problem—it is because his death was an atonement for the sins of a guilty world! it is because He offered Himself a spotless victim to the strokes of divine justice in the sinner's stead. It is because the mountain load of all human sin was laid upon his innocent head; it is because as our Surety. He was made to know all the inexpressible anguish that there is in the doom of a soul abandoned by God; it is because He had to suffer (feelings of impiety and rebellion excepted) what we must have suffered in hell if we had been left under the power of sin. The preternatural darkness which, in his dying moments, enveloped the cross, was but the image of a darkness much more awful which enveloped his spirit, the shadow of "the outer darkness, where there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth."

The Atonement! such is the only possible explanation of that cry of anguish which we hear to-day from the cross; of that last stroke, the most poignant of all, which finished the Saviour's passion; of that keenest suffering which surpassed all his other sufferings as much as the torments of hell exceed the trials of earth. You have heard Jesus cry out, "I thirst!" and have shuddered at the thought of the horrible torments which He endured in his body. You have heard Him say to John, "Behold thy mother!" and to Mary, "Behold thy son!" and you have been deeply moved at the thought of the moral agony which at that moment must have pierced the heart of son and friend; you have heard him railed at, on the cross by his executioners, even by a brigand, and your heart has been oppressed at the thought of the countless humiliations which sharpened his death; but what are these humiliations, what is that filial and friendly grief, what are these tortures of the cross, what are all these united together, compared with that spiritual, unfathomable, inexpressible anguish which compelled the well-beloved Son of God to complain, as it were, of his heavenly Father, and to cry, "Why hast Thou forsaken Me?" What are all human sufferings in comparison with this divine forsaking?

Let us stand on the verge of this abyss and reverently worship, for in vain should we try to fathom its depths. Let us not imagine we can penetrate all the mystery of the atonement; let us not demand to know how the innocent could have taken the place of the guilty before divine justice; how the curse of sin could have weighed down, even for one moment, the perfectly holy nature of Jesus Christ; how the only begotten Son of God could have made atonement for the whole of a guilty race; how, intensity compensating for duration, and the sufferings of the divine Victim having an infinite value, the eternal punishment of sin could have been condensed into a moment, and become wholly exhausted in the Redeemer's passion; how the Lamb of God could have felt the anguish of sin without being touched by its defilement; whether the divine nature could really suffer, or only give an infinite value to the sufferings of the human nature which was united to it. All these questions, and all the others which might still be raised on the subject of that mystery of mysteries, are, in our present state of existence, unanswerable; let us consent to be ignorant of what the Scriptures have not revealed, and let us abstain from attempting to explain what is inexplicable to us, at least in this life; let us retain with an unshaken faith the fact of the atonement, that fact which it is impossible to call in question when we have once stood by the scenes of Gethsemane and of the cross; and have heard escape from the Saviour's dying lips that cry, the only one of the kind in the whole history of God's servants: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?"

This grand truth, which is supported by a multitude of Scripture declarations,* is moreover in perfect harmony with the data of Christian philosophy, as also with the strongest and deepest wants of the human heart.

It is the only means of pardoning sin which leaves the perfection of God's character intact. God would not be perfect, He would be at variance with Himself, if his justice was not absolute in its demands; if He could "hold the guilty as innocent;" if, after He had said, "The wages of sin is death, cursed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the law," there could be sin without its being followed by death and malediction. Men can be indulgent, and ought to be so; they can pardon without atonement, and they ought to do so, because they are sinners. God cannot, because He is holy. Without doubt there remains for us an impenetrable mystery in the substitution of the innocent for the guilty; but it is a mystery which leaves the holiness of God intact. Who does not see also that the atonement, if it exalts the justice of God, does not less exalt his love: for how much greater is the love which does not pardon without having to make sacrifices, than that which pardons unconditionally, without being put to any cost by it?

If the atonement was required with respect to the demands of God's character, it was not less so with regard to man and the moral creation all through. It was necessary that punishment should be irrevocably attached to the transgression of the law, in order that the eternal hatred of God against sin might be proclaimed in the sight of men and of angels, and that moral order might not be shaken in the universe. If sin had been pardoned without atonement, the moral idea would have received in the intelligent creation an irreparable injury; the rule of good and evil would be neither absolute nor inflexible any longer; man might then love the sin which God would no longer hate, and God would have nothing to answer the sinner who should say, "Let us sin, that grace may abound!" The sacrifice of the cross prevents these injurious consequences, and grants pardon without danger; punishing transgression in the person of the Son of God, the cross proclaims the hatred of God against sin in a manner much more striking than if it had been the sinner himself who had suffered.

We must add that the atonement is the means of pardon best calculated to produce, in the case of the saved sinner, a sense of the pardoning love of God. Pardon heightened by sacrifice is far more touching, and will give birth to many more wonders of love and devotedness, than pardon unaccompanied by sacrifice. That a father should pardon his guilty son without being put to any cost by it, would lead that son no doubt to love so tender a father; but if that father, to save him from deserved chastisement, has been obliged to sacrifice his property, or his health, or his life, what will not take place in the heart of the son, and how will he ever believe himself able sufficiently to acknowledge a love so marvellous?

Finally, the atonement was necessary to appease the cry of the human conscience, in order that nothing might be wanting to the security of the pardoned sinner. If there is one profound and universal want in the heart of man, it is that of an atonement; we find it written everywhere in the history of humanity, from the fanatical Indian who gives himself to be crushed under his idol's car, to the murderer who, pressed by the sting of remorse, comes and voluntarily declares a crime which has remained a secret—as has many times been seen—in order that he may make atonement on the scaffold. There is in the heart of every man an immense, an irresistible craving that sin should be punished. If sin were pardoned without an atonement, the pardoned sinner would not be tranquil, his peace would not be complete and without reservation; he would have the feeling that moral order, disturbed by transgression, has not been solidly and decisively re-established; he would not be content with a salvation founded solely on the love of God, and which would leave in the shade his justice; he would carry as it were a vague fear that that justice, not yet satisfied, would some day awake, and that an account would be demanded from him of those sins which have remained unpunished. The sacrifice of the cross answers that deep and imperious want of our hearts. In virtue of that sacrifice our peace is founded on the justice of God as well as on his love, and all the perfections which constitute the divine character are interested at once in our salvation.

My brethren, let us appropriate by faith a salvation so great, a salvation so complete, so perfect, so marvellously adapted to satisfy our conscience, to sanctify our soul, to penetrate our heart with love to Him who has saved us. We have now the secret of the cross, and we can answer that terrible "Why?"—that cry of anguish which escaped the dying lips of Jesus Christ: "My God, my God! WHY hast Thou forsaken Me?" Thy God has forsaken Thee, O Jesus! that we might not be ourselves forsaken. Thy God has let the curse lie upon Thee in order that the blessing might rest upon us. Thy God has abased thee even to hell, that we might be elevated to heaven. Thou hast felt the bitterness of eternal death, in order that eternal life might be our portion. How should we possibly want from henceforth, and how should we be any other than "in all things more than conquerors," when we have to sustain us, in the combat of life, the cry of exhaustion uttered by our surety: "My God, my God! why hast Thou forsaken Me!"

THE BIBLE IN SPAIN.

DEAR SIR,—I should like your readers to be well acquainted with a few facts about the Spanish Reference Bible.

As stated in my preface, this Bible is not a New Translation, but a revision and correction of what is known as the Valera Version. This so-called Valera Version is also a revision of the translation made by Casiodoro de Reyna in the year 1556. Since their publication these editions have passed through multiplied revisions, corrections, and transpositions of the text. None of these have been substantially altered, but through the richness of the Spanish language some of these revisions have gained in taste and point, particularly when made by spiritually-minded natives, such as Professor Lucena, who corrected the Valera Version for the British and Foreign Bible Society, and Usoz de Rio.

Our work has been chiefly directed to the correction of typographical errors found in the latest editions, some of which have whole verses omitted; also in adopting many marginal readings acknowledged in our own English version to be of undisputed value, and supplying many hundreds of references not found in any Spanish Bible.

The arrangement and type are most suitable, and are widely acknowledged to be a step onward in the important and onerous work of supplying the Holy Scriptures in the Spanish tongue. Dr. Gilman, Secretary of the American Bible Society, says: "I think you are to be congratulated on the completion of the folio edition of Valera's Bible with references, in so comely a form and at so low a price. . . . I know nothing of the merits of the version of Isaiah by Usoz de Rio, but it is a hopeful sign when native-born Spaniards interest themselves in the attempt to improve the version used by their own people."

A gentleman much interested in the translation into English of the works of Spanish Reformers, says: "Your splendid Bible did cheer me. I had never previously seen so important a one, and its large type, and its marginal references, give it pre-eminence, and commend its circulation to all who desire to have the Scriptures effectively circulated."

Professor Boehmer, of Vienna, "Individual Member" of the Spanish Academy, whose name is known throughout the world in connection with the translation and collection of the MSS. and Bibles of the Spanish Reformers of the 15th century, inquires: "Your own Bible-work is entirely independent—not for some Bible Society? It is, at all events, admirable."

Our great need is, now, to bind these books in sufficient quantities to sell them at a cheap rate. The proceeds of sale of press, &c., together with many sums sent for personal expenses, went to complete the printing of the Bible.

Pastor Fliedner wishes fifty copies. He says: "If every Protestant family in Spain would take a copy the whole number would soon be disposed of."

My great hope is that the whole may soon be disposed of, and with whatever proceeds may result from the sale, to print another edition of this Bible, or one of the New Testament, in large type, so acceptable to Spanish eyes.

A MISSIONARY STEAMER.—On Saturday, the 10th inst., Messrs. R. and H. Green launched from their shipbuilding yard at Blackwall a pretty little screw steamer, built to the order of the Church Missionary Society, and intended for service on the east coast of Africa. Before the launch a short service was held, in the course of which Sir John Kennaway explained that the steamer had been built as a memorial to Mr. H. Wright, late Hon. Secretary of the Society. The money had been raised by contributions, large and small, in all parts of England.

CHAP. XI.—SIDE-HELPS.

"And all the widows stood by him weeping, and showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them."—ACTS ix. 39.

"Yet these are not the only deeds
Wherein Thou may'st be sought;
On homeliest work Thy blessing falls,
In truth and patience wrought.
Thine is the loom, the forge, the mart,
The wealth of land and sea;
The worlds of science and of art,
Revealed and ruled by Thee."

THE topics which fall naturally within the title of "Side-Helps" are: Systems of training in colleges for ministerial candidates, and in boarding-schools for young people; the ministry of women; the total abstinence movement; social and sanitary reforms; and the Press.

An amount of timidity and a want of conscientiousness are often manifested in the way in which are dealt with. If they betray an inefficiency which seems irreparable they ought to be courteously told so, and not tacitly encouraged to go on with their candidature. Better no ministry at all than a weakly or low-principled one. If sufficient pains be given to the obtaining of right men there is no fear of the supply failing. Many will enter the ranks if the cry, "short of good men" be raised, who else would have delegated the profession to others greatly their inferiors. The Holy Spirit will use means to bring forward chivalrous, talented souls, who will fill all vacant places. His "call" is chiefly an appeal to Christian men to exercise their love and discretion as to their future work.

The candidate once accepted, a course of tuition follows almost as a matter of necessity. An educated ministry was never required so much as it is now. To say that we can do without colleges approaches nearer and nearer to the ridiculous. In intelligence and general information the pastor ought certainly to be above the great mass of his people.

But it is impossible even for godly young men to be together in considerable numbers without exposure to special perils, and the more so as there are in the majority of colleges a few who are inconsistent, and who act as tempters to the less firm in the little community. Frivolity of speech among young men spreads rapidly, until it becomes quite an infestation. Sacred things having become common are spoken of with thoughtless flippancy. A consciousness of mental growth tends, in some, to produce conceit in odious forms. And so, if great care be not taken, the college life will be weakened by many a running sore.

Moreover, in these years the chosen of the Churches are kept a good deal apart from practical life. Classics and theology, lectures, and examinations, take up their days and months. Imperceptibly they get somewhat out of sympathy with

HUMAN NATURE AS IT IS.

The ideal gets more to them than the real, and the awakening, whenever it comes, will be rude and dangerous. They often form a strained and artificial style, and cannot walk in the pulpit without either crutches or stilts. They are apt to fall into plagiarism, both of idea and manner. Many students get buried in books when they ought to be living in men, and this, too, just when the life-habits are being created and the beliefs are getting "set." In these men the emotional and sympathetic not infrequently wither through long disuse.

Correctives to all this are greatly needed, and may be provided. At present, Home Mission colleges proper are not practicable to any Church. There would soon be comparisons made between their students and those of other halls of learning. The way may open in a while. But for this there would be no necessity, if only the committees and governing bodies formally enunciated the theory that the institutions over which they dominate exist for purposes of ultimate evangelism. The committee-men and governors who will move in this matter will need "the pulses of a Titan's heart," but they will deserve well of the Churches. Something of theological symmetry and classical finish ought to be sacrificed for the sake of practical acquaintance with surrounding realities.

To remedy the dreaminess and pedantry and other evils incident to a course of ministerial training, let earnest and prominent evangelists be invited to the schools of the prophets, from time to time, to deliver lectures and addresses on

EXPERIMENTAL EVANGELISATION.

It is well worth their while to do this. The inaugural speech of each session or year ought to reiterate the assurance that a margin of time will be provided, in which the brethren assembled may work tract-districts, conduct special services of various kinds, and plunge at will among the fallen and unhappy. Large populations are growing up not far away from most of our training-homes, and work among these will pay well. Literature of a soul-stirring sort may be recommended and amply furnished, and by this the natural or acquired zeal of the young men will be strengthened.

In one college, at least, all this and more has been done. The head of the House tells the tyros in theology that they are not there for mental processes only, but that the great object of their residence is future usefulness as Christian pastors, and he never fails to exhort them to watch jealously their hearts, and to prize and strive to intensify their fervency. As a consequence, the men sent out from that place are famous for their assiduity, spirituality, and seeking after souls.

It is not uncommon to hear a young man say, "As I walked up the avenue of the college for the first time, I trembled for my religious earnestness, and prayed to God that I might die rather than lose it." But if all facilities are afforded for Home Mission study and work, such fears will be scarcely known. Frivolity and pride will be checked. The pulpit style will be purged of its stiffness and artificiality. Brave young souls will buoy each other up, and the bad will be enfeebled by the habitual elevation of the good.

The question of the education of our youth cannot be taken up, as a whole, without reference to some vexed questions in politics, and that would not do at all. But may fittingly come in. One of a high class presents itself to me as a model. With its old pupils I frequently meet, and nearly all of them have left its corridors and dormitories thoroughly boyish, enthusiasts in athletic games, genial and unaffected, but, above all, decided Christians. True, no system of heavy cramming has been followed, and there has been no loud advertising of the honours gained in public examinations. But the inculcation of a high moral tone is the great thought of the authorities, and this design is certainly fulfilled. The Bible is revered always; a chatty visit from minister or godly layman is much appreciated; the masters must be men of character and piety; the boys are put upon their honour, and the school-spirit is all the healthier. Ambitious parents may be somewhat dissatisfied, but parents who have sense enough to put piety first are sufficiently thankful. If a like course were pursued in all our boarding-schools we should not have to deplore the lack of eligible candidates for Church offices, the number of really good citizens would be amplified, and the stricken and shrunken would be touched and remedied by kindly hands.

THE MINISTRY OF WOMEN

is a side-help of untold value. That was fully understood in the Early Church. The last chapter in Romans is the one which makes most reference to Christian women. The women's chapter is the work chapter, because they did so large a share of that work. And, to-day, they may be beneficially employed in Class Missions, such as those to cabmen and shop-girls; in visiting the hospitals and infirmaries; in conducting clothing clubs and teaching in ragged schools; and in most of the thousand and one labours of mercy which go so far to prove the truth of our holy religion.

It is, however, with the public ministry of women that we are chiefly concerned. What place may it legitimately hold in the evangelistic efforts of the Churches? It is evident that the Scripture intends some women to speak publicly. Paul's mandate against such speech, if not understood to proceed from local and exceptional reasons, would be at variance with the rest of Scripture. "Your daughters shall prophesy," as well as "your sons." And prophesying was not then—as nearly all are aware—so much *fore*telling as *forth*telling. The best comment on this passage is the citation of Philip's daughters, who, in Cæsarea, instructed the converts and strove to impress the wayward. The name of Priscilla, too, displaces that of Aquila in priority, which fact is all the more full of meaning when we consider the Eastern notions as to the subordination of the woman to the man.

On the other hand, such public exercises on the part of the sisters in the Church were not general, but were comparatively rare. The whole tone and manner of statement would lead us to infer that. And what was expedient then is expedient now. The strength of woman's public work consists much in its rarity. If it became general as that of man, its power would dimish in proportion as it grew more common.

But if a woman be endowed with supereminent gifts of soul, mind, and voice, is she to be debarred from extensive public usefulness just because of the accident of sex? Equally, if the attention of her hearers is to be drawn from herself, and fixed on her message, it can only be by these gifts being thus extraordinary, and by her personal saintliness being, not only superior, but truly superlative.

An old navvy told me that, when the railway to the Crystal Palace was being made, Miss Marsh used to go among the men on her mission of mercy. Only once was she insulted, and then the "ganger," in fierce tones, ordered out of the cutting the man who used wrong speech to her. And when a riot took place, and a rabble crowd of navvies and a serried array of policemen were approaching each other with hostile intentions, and just as the stones were beginning to fly, Miss Marsh had her carriage drawn into position between the contending parties. My informant, who was present on the occasion, said that instantly every navvy stood stock still, so much did they respect and love her. The riot was quelled by her presence alone. Very few men could have obtained that ascendency over those wild Britons, but a woman conquered by her voice and her glance. Devoted Bible-women can tell the same story. Not by the putting on of masculine airs, nor by the use of patronising words, but by the firm and gentle lovingness of consecrated womanhood have they broken in upon natures long steeled against the truth. Yes, womanhood! enlightened and sanctified, and clearly separated unto the work, can sway large crowds, pierce with homely silvery eloquence obdurate hearts, and save many from the error of their ways.

(To be concluded in our next.)

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.

THE following simple record of God's faithfulness to his promises, in providing for an orphaned family, was written at the request of a few Christian friends; It is now sent forth in the hope that others may be encouraged to trust in Him as the living God, that He may be glorified.

At the beginning of May, 1882, Thomas B——, aged thirty-five, and his brother James, aged thirty-two, were partners in a small way of business in the town of D——. Having industry and frugality acquired for themselves a position of comfort, and secured the esteem of all who knew them. Thomas had a wife and five young children; James was living with, and supported, their widowed mother. The former and his wife had for years maintained a consistent profession as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

About the date mentioned Thomas was suddenly stricken down by illness; and after six days died, intestate. His wife, who up to that time had nursed him tenderly, gave birth to her sixth child two days before his death. Great anxiety, was felt on her account; while much and earnest prayer was made that her life might be spared for the children's sake. But He "who sees the end from the beginning," and has said in Jer. xlix. 11, "Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive," had ordained it otherwise. After about eight days of patient suffering, and calm resignation to her heavenly Father's will, she too, was "absent from the body, and present with the Lord."

The brother, James, upon whom the family now appeared to be dependent, had never been very strong, and was unable to attend his brother's funeral. But fell ill, and in about another fortnight he also passed away, having, it is hoped, accepted Christ as his Saviour on his dying bed.

It needs but little effort of the imagination to picture the circumstances of the distressing case, as it then stood. The writer will not soon forget entering the house after the last funeral, and passing through the tenantless rooms of the so recently happy, but utterly deserted home. But it was no time for the indulgence of sentimental feelings: something had to be done. But what? None of the relatives, though willing to do what they could, were in a position to do much for the children. They were therefore distributed among Christian friends, who cherished them for the Master's sake, until however something could be arranged. We thought of years to come, and wondered where, and how, there should be found for those helpless children the needful care, and who would train them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

A very deep and solemn impression was made upon the townspeople generally; much sympathy was expressed, and many inquiries made as to what was going to be done Homes and asylums were, naturally enough, thought of and suggested. Thankful as we are, and must be, for such provision in many cases, we had experienced something of the difficulty, expense, and disappointment frequently incurred in obtaining admission into many of them, even for one child; that prospect, therefore, did not seem a very bright one. The whole matter was laid before the Lord, and guidance sought from Him and it soon was given. A brief advertisement was inserted in THE CHRISTIAN, asking if any Christian friends would undertake the sole charge of one or more? Many letters were received in reply. Most of them were offers to take the children for remuneration, but among them was one from a Christian gentleman, well known as an M.D. in practice in a large provincial town, and deacon of an influential Baptist Church. He and his wife, he said, had been praying for nine months that they might be guided to the adoption of an orphan son of Christian parents as a companion to their only boy, eight years of age. After a considerable amount of correspondence, exchange of references, and a personal interview, this seemed to be the answer to our united prayers. Matters were arranged, and guarantees given, for the entire adoption of the eldest boy, six years of age, and he was warmly welcomed to a happy Christian home. There he not only enjoys more than the common share of earthly privileges, and comforts, and receives a secular education suited to his position, but is greatly beloved, and trained up for Him who says, "Whosoever receiveth one such little child in My name, receiveth Me."

Another dear Christian man and his wife, living in the north of London, and having four children of their own, wrote, saying they had been asking the Lord to give them something to do for Him. They had it laid on their hearts to receive one of these children into their family, and ultimately the little boy of four years old was committed to their trust. He is most lovingly cared for, and very happy. A Christian doctor living in the neighbourhood has kindly undertaken to watch over his health, &c.

Other Christian friends living near D——, having no children of their own, were led, after much prayer, to the adoption of the dear baby girl, then five weeks old, whom they fondly love, and cherish with all the tender care of parents. Similarly the little boy of two was taken into the circle of another Christian family in the town, where he also receives the most devoted attention, and is loved by all for the Master's sake.

While these arrangements were being made, other kind friends were making efforts to get the two elder girls into an orphanage, with a fair prospect of success. A few friends met to thank the Lord for what He had done, and to seek his guidance, especially with regard to the said "Home." That very evening a lady living in Ayrshire, Scotland, taking up a back number of THE CHRISTIAN, saw the advertisement, and wrote immediately to make inquiries, stating among other things that she and her husband had been for some time praying and looking out for a suitable companion for their little girl nearly nine years of age, and asking if there was a girl about eight or nine. References, likenesses, &c., were exchanged, and much information gained respecting the family, who are widely known, and highly esteemed as earnest Christians, occupying a good social position. Ultimately a definite offer was made for the little girl of eight, and thankfully accepted. The only difficulty then was to get her conveyed there. This also was ordered by the Lord; under the care of kind Christian friends she arrived safely, and is very happy in her new relationship.

The eldest girl being the only one left unprovided for, was entrusted to the care of a Christian widow, who kept a small boarding-school in a neighbouring town, under the impression that some portion of the small property left would be available for her maintenance. Upon taking legal advice it was found that such was not the case, and thus a new difficulty arose. This also was taken to the Lord; and the matter being brought by the gentleman who has adopted the eldest boy, before his parents, who are well-known and earnest Christians, they at once came to the rescue, and generously offered to bear the entire expense of her support, education, &c., for two years at least, in the hope that before that time the Lord may be pleased to provide a home for her also. For this the prayers of the reader are earnestly solicited.

While the Lord's hand may be clearly discerned in the perusal of this mere outline of the facts and circumstances of the case, it was most strikingly manifested in connection with the many and varied details known only to those immediately concerned. It may be stated that thus far all had been done without any legal authority whatever (although it has since been obtained), and difficulties arose, chiefly in gaining the sanction of friends and other little matters which would never be thought of unless experienced; but a never-failing resource was found in Him who is indeed the "refuge and strength" of his people; "a very present help in trouble."

Much might be added concerning the settlement of affairs, disposal of business, and other family matters of a more private character, in which the hand of God was recognised; for although it at first appeared that there would be great difficulties in dealing with the estate, everything was satisfactorily settled in an unusually short time. Legal advice, even, was given by a highly qualified Christian gentleman, till then unknown, who paid a brief visit to the town, and who, having seen the advertisement, had been praying for the family.

It may be profitable to inquire whether the Lord's people, to whom He has entrusted the means, might not oftener know the blessedness of being "workers together with Him" in thus caring for orphaned children, and privileged to hear the Master say by and by, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me." The reader's prayers are requested that these little ones may still be blessed of the Lord, especially that they may be brought very early into the flock of Christ, and that the dear friends who have shown them so much kindness may have a rich reward. LAST DAYS AT MANCHESTER.

(BY OUR OWN REPORTER.)

AS the present campaign of the Evangelists in this country draws near its close, the public interest seems to increase in a corresponding ratio. I sometimes hear it asserted that the present Mission of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey is not causing such a stir among the English people as did the campaign of eight years ago. What the premises are from which this wonderful conclusion is drawn I know not. My own experience so flatly contradicts the statement that I cannot help assuming either the ignorance, culpable under the circumstances, or the wanton prejudice, more culpable still, of those who say such things.

What is the test of waning interest in any public movement? Surely it is to be found in a diminished attendance at the meetings. The element of "novelty" that may be said to have belonged to the Mission of 1873—75 of course has ceased to be; there might, therefore, be as much of genuine interest now with a smaller attendance than before. But what do we find? I need not recapitulate the history of the past weeks spent by the Evangelists in such places as Dublin, Birmingham, Belfast, &c., all of which they had visited before; the facts must be fresh in the mind of every reader. But what was the case at Manchester on these last days of the two weeks' Mission? Briefly it was this: the capacious buildings at the disposal of the committee were utterly inadequate to receive the crowds that would fain have pressed into them to hear the preaching and the singing Evangelist twice or thrice on a working day.

Coming to details, let me speak briefly of Tuesday, March 13, the penultimate day of the Mission. Having by special favour gained entrance to the Free Trade Hall half-an-hour before the advertised time of the evening meeting, I found the great building crammed from end to end with men—not a spare foot of seating space even on the spacious platform. What a magnificent audience! They tell us that in Popish countries the male section of the community are seldom, if ever, seen within the walls of a building devoted to religious uses. Yet here, in one of the busiest cities in the world, where time is money, and where commercial competition is one of the fine arts, the most popular place of concourse is packed with sharp, shrewd, calculating, wideawake gentlemen, who were apparently well content to spend a long period of waiting in order to be present at a Gospel service. Where is the philosophical and impartial critic who can square that simple fact with any theory of popular indifference to Evangelical truth, or of its unfitness to meet the truest and deepest aspirations of our common humanity?

While Mr. Moody held this vast company spellbound by his homely, graphic, and searching speech, the great Circus in Chepstow-street was the scene of an almost similar spectacle on a somewhat smaller scale. Having sung out the sweet music of the Gospel invitation to the men in the Free Trade Hall, Mr. Sankey picked his way through the swarming streets to the Circus, and assumed the command of the crowd that covered that big building with a sea of eager faces literally "from floor to ceiling." Here he repeated, in grandest and most impressive tones, that old, favourite song that never seems to grow stale, "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by." I observed lately that a Unitarian gentleman in Birmingham was severe in his censure of the sentiment of the last verse of this hymn. According to him, it is a monstrous reflection on the unchanging pity and compassion of our Lord to say that a time could ever come when He will spurn the sinner's "bitter prayer for pardon." But until we have some solid proof of that "probation after death," which Mr. Joseph Cook so logically and scripturally controverts, orthodoxy must continue to defend and reassert the teaching of this verse, however tragically solemn and fearful it may be.

The after proceedings at the Circus on this Tuesday evening were most singularly touching. I can remember few occasions when the conduct of the audience showed more conclusively that God was at work in the midst of them, and moving them towards an open avowal of spiritual concern. Mr. Sankey's talk that followed the sermon was well-nigh severe in its artless simplicity, but that was only an additional proof that the plainest key is the one that most readily unlocks the human heart, when that heart has been prepared by God for the reception of his truth.

From all parts of the Circus the responses came freely to Mr. Sankey's invitation that those who were anxious should signify the same by rising, or lifting the hand. After the three figures had been reached he ceased to count, and, indeed, many hands were held up that evidently escaped the vigilant eye of the Evangelist. When the general meeting was being dismissed that the Gospel net might be drawn up in the after-meeting, a fresh crowd of those who had been excluded pressed into the building, and personal dealing had to be relinquished for further appeals from the platform.

Several of the incidents related by Mr. Sankey were unusually pathetic and striking. He told of a young lady who on her death-bed felt much solicitude for the salvation of her circle of associates. She asked that a wedding-cake should be specially prepared for her. This she cut up into small portions, and sent one to each of her unsaved companions, with a little note written by herself, saying she had accepted an invitation to be at the marriage supper of the Lamb, and asking them to meet her there. After a few days she passed away. That little group of friends gathered around her coffin, and a number of them then and there gave their hearts to Jesus. Another touching anecdote was of a little girl in Glasgow who had learned to sing, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and who, as she was dying of scarlet fever, expressed a strong desire that the hymn-book, opened at that hymn, should be laid on her bosom and buried with her. In his earnest appeals to the people to "come clear into the harbour" of safety that night, Mr. Sankey found an apt and powerful illustration in the loss of the City of Brussels, whose deck he had often trod when crossing the Atlantic, but which now lies at the bottom of the sea, sunk just on the eve of gaining port.

Simultaneously with this meeting in the Circus, the after-meeting was going on in the hall of the Y.M.C.A., composed of inquirers from Mr. Moody's meeting in the Free Trade Hall. An experienced friend informed me next day that this was the most wonderful sight he ever saw; the hall was full of those who were anxious to enter into assured rest of soul, and though workers were present in abundance, many had to speak to groups of six and eight at once.

A PRAISE MEETING.

The noon meeting of Wednesday, the last day of the Mission, took the form of a praise meeting. The fine lecture-hall of the Y.M.C.A. was crowded. Much interesting testimony was given as to the results of the former Mission in Manchester eight years since. Before noting some of the details stated on this occasion, I may give a brief general outline of these results, as imparted to me by one who is thoroughly conversant with the facts.

First and foremost there was created a large spirit of brotherly unity among clergy and ministers in the town, which may be said to have been a thing altogether new in the experience of this and many other communities. The outcome of that unity has been seen in the extensive and complete preparations made for the Mission now closed. The direct individual conversions eight years ago were on a large scale; the resulting influence in the salvation of others it is impossible to tabulate, but enough is known to give room for much thanksgiving. The work of the Y.M.C.A. as it now exists may be directly traced to the last Mission; under the holy impulses then brought into active play, the present organisation, with its excellent buildings and multiplied agencies for the conversion and culture of young men in this important city, began to take shape. Further outlets for new-born zeal were found in the erection of tents for Gospel services in different parts of the city; the results of these efforts, in the conversion of men and women have been truly wonderful. Still further, there is to be noted the building of many permanent Mission Halls in more or less distant suburbs by gentlemen residing there who had received blessing at the central services; these halls have themselves been centres of continued revival ever since their erection. In short, a mighty impetus was given to aggressive Christian work, north, south, east, and west, with results of which no adequate record can be given or guessed at. Other forms of Christian effort in the town, such as the Flower Mission, the Sacred Song Association, the Noon Prayer Meeting, &c., have directly sprung from the memorable weeks of 1874. It is confidently believed that the results of the present Mission, though it has been of much shorter duration, will in due time afford equal ground of praise to God and benefit to man.

At this praise meeting on Wednesday, Mr. Moody gave some suitable exhortations as to the comeliness of giving thanks. On the previous night he said a man had come into the meeting under the influence of liquor. He asked if there was anyone in the meeting who had been redeemed from the slavery of drink and had stood firm for five years. A man rose and said that eight years ago he was a confirmed drunkard. God then saved him, and had kept him ever since. If there were nothing more, said Mr. Moody, to thank God for than that single case, all the trouble would have been well expended. People who kept at a distance from the work said the great crowds would soon be dispersed, and where would then be the results? The crowds that gathered at Pentecost were soon scattered, but they went everywhere preaching the Word. He had met with the fruits of the last Manchester work in different parts of England, and also in America. It is God's work; would the men have flocked into the Free Trade Hall as they did if they had not been moved by the Spirit of God? If any Christians feel like criticising, let them be careful how they talk against the work of God's Spirit. During the last two weeks many have been born into the Kingdom of God. The work has just commenced. If the Christians will go to work and continue the meetings in their various Mission districts, there will be many more conversions in the next few months.

Prebendary Macdonald, as a single case out of many resulting from the previous Mission, told of a Hebrew gentleman in good social position, who was then brought to a saving knowledge of the truth, and who became an interested member of the Bible Class held at the Young Men's Christian Association. He had to encounter no small opposition from his Jewish friends, but he came out boldly for Christ, and was a most simple-hearted Christian. He has now gone to be with his Lord, for whom he bore an earnest testimony while he lived.

After some interesting reminiscences of the Glasgow work by the Rev. J. Carstairs, of that city,

Mr. Midwood said he wondered how it could be possible for anyone to doubt whether or not this was the work of God. Besides the many fresh Gospel agencies that had been set going in and around Manchester through the last Mission, individual Christian workers had then received an impetus in their work that they had never lost. This time the arrangements for recording the ascertained results were more complete; they would be able to follow these up, and see how far they were permanent. He believed they would have as good a report to give as that recently given by Mr. Dale at Birmingham, who found that at least 70 per of those who joined his Church kept true to their professions. The work during this second Mission had been most marvellous. As an instance, he stated that a stranger, addressing him in the street the previous day, said: "No words can express my gratitude. My wife, myself, and all the members of my household have been converted at these meetings."

A Gentleman in the gallery said that, eight years ago, when visiting a warehouse in the city, a young man shook him warmly by the hand, and expressed much joy that he had been converted. On visiting the same place last week, he found the same man walking in the path of happy service. He was unable to attend the meetings in the Free Trade Hall, because he was busy in connection with a week's special Mission at the place where he lived.

A very interesting and important testimony followed from Mr. J. Garnett, one of the members of the Evangelistic Committee eight years ago, and chairman of the present committee. He confessed that for seven years after the last time of revival he had been prevented, through timidity, from public preaching of the Gospel. A year ago he resolved he would begin the work, and trust to God to help him in speaking. He began in a small cottage meeting with about a dozen people. Since then a Mission hall has been erected, and now every Sunday 400 to 500 people come together to hear the Gospel, many of whom had not been at a place of worship for years. Only the Sunday before an old man had told him of a son who used to ill-treat his wife and spend much of his time in the public-house; he had been induced to attend the Gospel meeting a fortnight before, and had never entered the public-house since.

This interesting praise meeting was brought to a close with some further testimony from a well-known Manchester merchant, who made special reference to the case of the fallen girl whose consistent testimony after conversion, and happy death some years later, were mentioned in our last issue.

Long before the appointed time in the afternoon the Trade Hall was filled to repletion, the overflow crowds being accommodated in the Circus. Woe betide the unhappy late comer who thought to gain an entrance into the former building, without some special or official open sesame. It had been announced as the last Bible Reading, but Mr. Moody, feeling the preciousness of the opportunity, turned it into a purely Gospel service. His theme was, "Instant Salvation," which he illustrated by his wonderfully graphic presentation of such Bible narratives as the saving of Noah in the Ark, the protection of the Israelites in Egypt, by the shed and sprinkled blood of the paschal lamb, and the healing of the wounded Hebrews through the brazen serpent. Many flocked to the inquiry-meeting in the Y.M.C.A. buildings.

THE FAREWELL MEETING

was held in the evening in the Free Trade Hall. The anxiety manifested to be present was, if possible, more extraordinary than ever, and the Evangelists themselves experienced no small discomfort in reaching the inside of the hall. The Circus was not adequate to contain the throngs that were excluded from the hall, and various meetings were extemporised in the streets. Mr. Sankey, after singing in the hall a new and impressive hymn, "When the mists have rolled away," proceeded to the Circus, and, with those who assisted as speakers, again experienced a time of much blessing, as shown by the large numbers who stood for prayer.

Mr. Moody's parting words were addressed to the young converts, many of whom were specially accommodated in the area of the hall. A considerable number, however, who came late, were unable to get in by reason of the crowds that clamoured for admission. Mr. Moody dwelt at first on the province of faith in the Christian life, and walk, and warfare. The words of deepest wisdom and sanctified common sense to which he gave utterance for the space of more than an hour fell on most attentive ears; the speaker, the sermon, and the scene will not easily be forgotten by those who were privileged to be present. Space would altogether fail if I endeavoured to reproduce the address; some stray sentences must suffice:—

"The sooner you find out that your Christian life is to be a warfare, the better for you." "The closer your fellowship with the Saviour, the more power you will have with your fellowmen." "Man away from God is, and always has been, a failure. If Adam fell, how do you expect to stand in your own strength?" "Look at the wrecks you may see in the streets of Manchester—men who might become temples of the Holy Ghost, but whom Satan is leading down to dark despair, because they have turned away from God." "There is a good deal of difference between reckoning yourselves dead with Christ and being dead with Christ." "The most miserable Christians I have met with are those who are seeking to walk by sight instead of by faith." "If sorrow and trouble come—and they will come—we want to keep trusting in God that He will help us." "In our Christian warfare let us not make the mistake of under-estimating the strength of the enemy; Satan has had the experience of 6000 years, and he knows our weak points." "Many things that are lawful in themselves will have to be given up if we would prosper in spiritual health; the Christian must dare to go against the customs of society if needful, even though he may be deemed peculiar." "I think that the greatest foe that England has got to-day is strong drink." "If the devil tempts you to go astray and you yield for the time, do not think you have lost your sonship." "I believe more Christians cripple their usefulness by failing to control their temper, than in any other way." "The place to find out whether a man is a true Christian is in the home." "We ought to make home the most attractive place on the face of the earth."

With many such like words of wise counsel did Mr. Moody exhort the young believers to stand fast in the faith, and to cultivate all the graces of the genuine Christian character. Near the close he gave, in an outburst of remarkable eloquence, a running sketch of the tribulations which Paul the Apostle had to endure, and the dauntless bravery with which he met them all, ever pressing on towards the mark of his high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Then, last of all, he besought the converts to identify themselves speedily with some section of the visible Church, and join with such as are devoting their lives to the good of those about them.

With a final parting word of invitation from the Evangelist to the unsaved, and with the subsequent meeting for inquirers in the Young Men's Christian Association, the two weeks' Mission in Manchester came to a fitting close.

OPENING AT LEEDS.

A two weeks' Mission at Leeds was commenced last Lord's Day by four gigantic gatherings in the Coliseum; in the early morning the meeting was for workers, at 11 a.m. specially for non-church-goers, at 3 for women, and in the evening for men. With respect to the forenoon service the Leeds Mercury says:—

The first great meeting of the Mission took place at eleven o'clock. It was intended for men and women who attend no place of worship, and admission could only be obtained by ticket. An announcement to this effect had been made for several days previously, and at first the arrangement seemed a little strange. It was, of course, desirable that the attendance at the commencement of the work should not be meagre, and the question which occurred to one was—Can so large a building be filled at the outset with such a class? Those who had made the arrangements, however, had done so deliberately and with full confidence that even at the commencement of this united effort to promote the sacred cause success would in this respect be attained. And so it was. The Coliseum buildings were crowded, and but for the regulation that those only who had tickets were to be admitted, great numbers would no doubt have sought entrance only to find that it could not be had. We do not know how the tickets had been distributed, nor can it be told how many amongst the great congregation were non-church or chapel goers. The appearance of the gathering gave the impression that the proportion was small.

A thanksgiving service in connection with the recent campaign in Birmingham was held there on Monday week. Mr. R. W. Dale presided, and spoke in warm terms of the results of the Mission.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

DUNDEE.

LOOKING to the important Temperance work achieved last year in Dundee through the visit of Mr. Francis Murphy, it has been deemed highly desirable to continue the same work vigorously. The Council of the Union see on all sides very great and pressing need for earnest labours to promote the cause of Temperance, and many ways in which this may be effectually done.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY AT SWANSEA.

Mr. Francis Murphy is now on a visit to this town, and holding a Gospel Temperance Mission. He has had overflowing audiences each night, and much to cheer and encourage him in the results obtained. There has been a wonderful work carried on in Swansea since November, 1881, when Mr. R. T. Booth was here. Many thousands have since then signed the pledge. We are hoping and believing that the present Mission will help these reformed men and women, and lead many of them into the kingdom of God.

As a speaker Mr. Murphy has made an immense impression upon the thousands who have heard him in the past five days. He is a natural orator, with wonderful powers of description, able to make men weep and smile as with the touch of a magic wand; yet withal full of tenderness and love and godly simplicity.

With a large heart of sympathy for the perishing and a deep sense of his own inability to be useful unless the grace of God is given, his message is emphatically "Gospel Temperance," with "Gospel writ large." The story of his life has thrilled the people who have listened to it. Oscar T. Snelling.

MAJOR POOLE IN PLYMOUTH.

The Mission in Plymouth, conducted by Major Evered Poole, bids fair to be very lasting and influential in its results. The work gathered force as it proceeded, and was accompanied by much power and blessing. Canon Basil Wilberforce gave his powers of speech and his intrepid spirit to the Mission for four nights, addressing in the day, at Devonport, meetings of dockyardmen and others. The Canon's words have flown far and wide, and it is not an exaggeration to say that they will have formed an era in the Gospel Temperance cause in these western counties. Mrs. Reaney also helped. Mr. Arrowsmith addressed meetings in Plymouth and at Devonport, which were large and very successful, and Mr. McCree also was a worker in the Mission.

The noon-day prayer-meetings have been attended by daily increasing numbers, and Major Poole's addresses on these occasions were much valued on account of their spiritual power. In this Mission, as at Croydon and Oxford, he introduced the after meeting. At the concluding meeting of the Mission Major Poole spoke on the three Remember's: "Remember Lot's wife," "Son, Remember," &c., and the dying thief's "Remember me." His message was most solemn, and the power of God's Spirit was manifestly shown. More than eighty persons arose in the body of the Hall and asked to be prayed for. R. R. F.

A week's Mission at Barrow-in-Furness has been conducted by Mr. Geo. Blaiklock with great success.

Mr. William Forbes conducted a Mission last week at Ampthill. He had commenced another Mission at Taunton, when he was recalled to London by the illness of his wife, who died at his residence, 71, Windsor-road, Holloway, on Sunday last.

Notes and Comments.

A CORRESPONDENT says that Burton-on-Trent, the great centre of the liquor traffic, has hitherto been overlooked by those who arrange for Gospel Temperance Missions. He hopes this oversight will soon be remedied.

Christian singers desirous of joining the South London Choir, now being augmented in anticipation of the autumn visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, are requested to communicate with Mr. G. Peploe Earl, 1, Cambridge-terrace, Burnt Ash, Lee, S.E.

Last week we referred briefly to the sad circumstances under which Rev. Julius Benn met his death at Matlock. The deceased gentleman, who ministered to a poor congregation, in Old Gravel-lane, Wapping, had not been able to make any provision for his partner in life, who survives him. It is therefore desired by some friends to present the widow with a testimonial. They solicit the sympathy and help of Christian friends. Mr. W. G. McNaught, 66, Colverstone crescent, West Hackney, E., is acting Hon. Sec.

Miss Macpherson writes from the Home of Industry, 60, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E.:—

Would the many brethren who have been workers at the Home of Industry, and are now scattered in business, or as missionaries abroad, report themselves here? We desire to unite them to each other by correspondence, that they may be helpers of each other's joys and sorrows. "Brethren, pray for us," as we do for you, that your faith fail not.

Mr. Wm. Ferguson, 21, Manor-place, Edinburgh, writes to us describing the great need that is felt by Christian workers in Syria for Industrial Schools, where young girls could be trained in household duties after leaving the common school. Miss Taylor, of Beyrout, has represented this need to him in recent correspondence, and he hopes some English Christian will feel called to undertake the work. We refer any who are specially interested in the matter, to Mr. Ferguson, from whom they may receive fuller details.

A correspondent, writing to the Christian World, has stated that having some doubts about the legality of raffles at bazaars, he wrote to the Home Secretary for information. The reply he received is that "all lotteries are illegal whether in aid of churches or not." This may serve to bring the practice which has prevailed but too widely in connection with the Church's work to a close. We earnestly trust it will, for assuredly the worldliness of all such expedients for raising funds for sacred purposes is an evil calculated to do enormous harm to the cause of God, and far outweighs in its injurious effects upon the Church itself, as well as upon the outside world, any temporary pecuniary gain which may be obtained. Unspiritual methods cannot but produce unspiritual results. "The silver and gold are the Lord's," and we may look with confidence to Him for the supply of them as needed for his own work.

The meeting held by the Council of the Evangelical Alliance at Exeter Hall on the 9th inst., to pray for the maintenance of our National Constitution in its allegiance to God, should surely be followed by further united action on the part of those who have this momentous matter at heart. All the more so as, to the surprise and disappointment of many who were present, the Chairman of that meeting announced that the passing the Affirmation Bill was not to be regarded as the point directly before them, that being a subject on which differences of opinion prevailed. The circular-invitation of the Alliance had so put this very point as the object aimed at, that not a few felt at a loss to account for the request that it should not be directly mentioned in the prayers presented.

We most earnestly deprecate this being looked upon as a merely party question; we feel that it rises transcendently high above any considerations such as those of Liberal or Conservative politics and tactics. Enlightenment is greatly needed by many Christian people on the matter, numbers of whom regard it simply from the standpoint of political freedom, and fail to see its bearing on the attitude of our country in relation to God. The passing of such a measure, we are assured, would mark one of the most momentous crises the nation has ever reached, and we look at the issues of such a probability with the deepest concern. It would be well if central meetings could be speedily arranged for, at which the Christian heart and conscience could be directly appealed to, and the issues at stake clearly pointed out. The Church of Christ should be heard wherever possible protesting with united and earnest voice, and proclaiming on behalf of the God of Britain his right to be still, as heretofore, distinctly recognised in our Legislature as existent and supreme.

The Times of the 15th inst. began a leader with the words, "A couple of weeks ago people were praying for fine weather," and then proceeds to comment on the improvement which has been made in agricultural prospects by the cessation of rain, and the prevalence of drying winds we have had of late, stating that "if the fair weather lasts a little longer, then the agriculturist will have nothing to complain of," for "should March end as it has begun, then the harvest need not be a very bad one."

Undoubtedly, much true, believing prayer has been offered in our land on this matter, and the above statements may be claimed as another testimony to the power of prayer in material spheres, as well as in spiritual. Let us not be slow to offer praise for Divine response to prayer, nor remit the earnestness of our supplications for continued remembrance of our need by Him who is the only source of all good. Agriculturally and commercially, we are solely dependent upon God, and we do well to keep this ever in view, both by prayer for his aid, and thankfulness for his mercy, so often granted in answer thereto.

There is much in the condition of Madagascar at this juncture of affairs to cause concern in the minds of Christians generally, who cannot fail, we think, to take interest in the advancement of civilisation and Christianity in that island. There is great reason to fear the results of the present aggressive French policy, not only because peace is endangered, and war (always in itself so great an evil) rendered imminent, but on account of its probable influence on Mission operations, hitherto so successfully carried on. The effectual fervent prayer of righteous men to the God of nations will avail much to protect this feeble and far-off island from the designs of the powerful aggressor.

The words of a correspondent, writing to The Standard from Tamatave, are of serious import:—

A further result of a struggle would be the development of a strong feeling against Christianity. Already the leaders of the Old Party are going through the country preaching that the present difficulties are owing to the admission of the missionaries and the conversion of the Court. If this movement were to gather strength, Christianity would probably disappear over a great part of the country, and the people would relapse into barbarism.

The societies having agents and stations in Madagascar claim full-hearted and prayerful sympathy from us all, as do the whole company of believers and workers in that hitherto fertile field of which it may pre-eminently be said, it is one "the Lord our God hath blessed." We observe that the London Missionary Society has already issued a request for special prayer.

Apropos of Missions, the following words spoken by Rev. Joseph Cook may, perhaps, strike some who look with satisfied complacency on what is doing in heathen lands (and we fear there are such) as being ungenerous and uncalled for; but they will, on reflection, be found to be timely and wise. Facts show that we are far from having reached a point where we may halt, or count ourselves to have attained what is set before us by the imperative calls of duty, privilege, and responsibility:—

We must have a far more thorough arousal as to our duty to Missions than we have dreamed that we need. Infidelity is occupying the middle and the upper classes of pagan lands, and it is difficult to calculate how terribly hard it will be to win these circles to Christianity if we allow infidelity to have its own way in them for another generation. On this theme the Church, as a whole, is torpid, and I would have the necessity of the case smite the rock of our indifference and cause copious streams to gush forth—not of money only, but of men. When God sends his Spirit to the Protestant Churches of all lands in full measure, I believe that we shall not fail of the realisation of my ideal as to missionary effort.

The ideal referred to is, after all, a modest one, being only that "There ought to be, at least, one man born and educated on Christian shores, and representing sound views, furnished for every 50,000 of the accessible pagan population of the world."

Our duty is, "To preach the Gospel to every creature," and we have no right to withhold aught we can render until this is done. The possibility of this being done within a period say of ten years, was demonstrated some time ago by Dr. Angus, of Regent's-park, thus: "Under the least favourable conditions, we might need 50,000 preachers, and their support might need from ten to fifteen millions a year. It seems a great company, fifty thousand preachers, and yet it is not more than one per cent. of our Evangelical Church members. England sent as many men to the Crimea to take a single fortress, and to keep up for a few years a Mohammedan despotism. Ten times the number fell on each side in the American war to set free three or four millions of slaves. Cannot 50,000 redeemed men be found to win back the world for Christ?"

"It seems a great sum—a hundred and fifty millions in ten years—yet it is less than £3 a year from each member of the Evangelical Churches of Europe and America. The Crimean War cost a hundred millions; the American War more than ten times as much. An annual tax of tenpence in the pound on the income of Great Britain alone would yield the fifteen millions we need. Nay, more, it would be easy to find ten thousand professing Christians who could give it all!" If these things are true, and it would be difficult to disprove them, there is, indeed, truth in Mr. Cook's assertion that "the Church, as a whole, is torpid on this theme." Let each reader ask, Am I?

Referring to the crowds of eager spectators who assembled, spite of wind and weather, to witness the Oxford and Cambridge boat race of Thursday last, The Daily News argues as follows:—

If so much fatigue and cold and suffering could be voluntarily endured by thousands and thousands for one such moment of gratification to the eyes, what might not be got out of the human race if its storage of force could only be turned to some great account? What would the hosts of Xerxes be in comparison with the Blue Ribbon Army that London alone might turn out if the Blue Ribbon of Temperance had only the same universal charm that belongs for one day in the year to the light and dark blue ribbons of Cambridge and Oxford? We fear, however, that human nature is not thus to be charmed out of its weaknesses into high and constant moral mood.

The eagerness with which the world pursues its chosen objects of delight is often a reproach to the lethargy and half-heartedness of the professing Christian in reference to his higher aims and nobler pursuits. There is indeed a large amount of latent energy and force in the Church of Christ, which only needs to be awakened and brought into action to produce glorious results in the varied fields of Gospel labour. Motives to enthusiastic endeavour and entire consecration are not wanting. Why, then, does not the spirit of the Church not only rival, but outstrip that of the world in its intensity and readiness to endure for the attainment of its ends? The same thought filled the great Apostle's mind, as he reflected on the Olympic contests so renowned in his day, and on the self-denial and devotion to the strife displayed by the combatants. "They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible." And again: "I press toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us, therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded."

We shall be happy to receive and disburse contributions for the relief of distress in Ireland. Capt. Kearney White, Waterloo-place, Dublin, formerly commander in the Lifeboat Service, and now Secretary of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland, is interested in the formation of a Christian Co-operative Fishery Association for Ireland; he will send particulars on application.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS.—That the Lord will bring good out of a great evil anent the late persecution of the Jews is perfectly clear. The Jewish Missionary cannot help noticing a marked change in the behaviour of his brethren towards the Messenger of the glad tidings as he visits them from shop to shop in his circuit. This happy change is experienced at our Saturday afternoon meetings at Albion-hall, London Wall, and in our night school, Harvey-street, Hoxton, and not less so at our own house, which is visited by individual Jews from time to time. A spirit of earnest inquiry is certainly abroad among this ancient people as was never the case before; hence the grand opportunity for sowing the seed broadcast among hosts of willing listeners from many parts of the globe, in the hope of a glorious harvest. The bread and coal ticket occasionally given away by the messenger to distressed families is the more appropriate when the family thus relieved is suffering persecution and privation for no other crime than that they have received the Messiah.

AN EAST-END CAMPAIGN.

MR. GEO. C. NEEDHAM AT THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

THE Home of Industry is not a misnomer; its inmates eat not the bread of idleness. Its emblem, a beehive, fitly represents its busy life. There widows, mothers, young women, little girls, and others, are taught how to be of use to themselves and of benefit to others. The use of needle and scissors forms no small part of the education given, and of the spirit fostered in the Home; hence the elder members of the classes fully learn the necessity of self-help, and make a neat and tidy appearance, even though exceedingly poor.

During the past two weeks the Home has been the scene of a precious work of grace. It has been my privilege to be present at the various gatherings, and to witness some very extraordinary meetings of the really needy classes. Miss Macpherson, with her indomitable energy, secured the attendance of nearly 200 persons each evening from among the most miserable, irreligious, and destitute. Factory girls, rope-makers, young mothers, widows, Jewesses, harlots, lodging-house habitués, railway men, and others, were drafted from their workshops, lodgings, dens, and homes, to spend an evening in the Beehive. Nearly 2000 persons have thus been brought directly under religious influence, and heard, many of them for the first time, the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

It is not often that a preacher has the opportunity of speaking to so many openly Godless persons. This fact probably may have impressed the evangelist, who entered heartily into the work of rescue. Miss Macpherson, too, and her noble band of workers and helpers, fought hard for each precious soul. The agony of prayer, the earnestness of speech, the glistening tear, the solemn air, and quiet manner of each worker, told that they were moving and acting under a realised sense of the presence of God, and that now or never was the hour to bring each soul to Christ.

During my visit I had ample opportunity for observation and inquiry, and noted the following phases of what I saw, felt, and discovered: First, prayer: earnest heart-pleadings with God before each meeting. Second, the prominence given to the Word of God. I listened attentively, and watched with interest, but heard of no scheme for the relief of sinners, save that revealed in the Scriptures. Third, there was a wise discrimination of bodily need, and generous hospitality extended. For the girls, 200 at a time, tea, bread and butter, and cake were provided. To the lodging-house men, hungry, faint and cold, each time from a separate lodging-house (so as to benefit the greater number), soup and bread were given. After the Gospel appeal, three hundred and sixty sixpences were laid out for beds, and whilst the snow fell, all who had heard of Jesus, for once, had a shelter and a bed. Blessed sixpences! Where will more come from for similar work?

The evangelist did not fear to expound and explain the very themes that may well be presented to a West-end congregation. Twice he gave them the story of the Crucifixion, touching on the great events from the Garden to the Cross. The Resurrection, the Priesthood of Christ, the Coming of the Lord, the Year of Jubilee, the Cities of Refuge, and other Old Testament subjects were expounded. With tenderness and quiet solemnity did the preacher plead with souls, while Miss Macpherson and her lady workers with subdued voices and tearful faces spoke and prayed. I was enabled to see that these poor children of sin, in youth or age, can be dealt with as effectually as those in higher social positions. The Home of Industry recognises manhood, though debased, and womanhood, though degraded; hence the pathetic words, "brothers," "sisters," come with a strange power to those unaccustomed to kindness and love.

It is matter of surprise that a benevolent public should not long since have provided Miss Macpherson with a suitable Home, and such premises as would have facilitated her great work of Christian philanthropy among the East-end poor. The faith, however, which draws from the King's treasury the means to supply two thousand mouths with a comfortable meal, and find a home across the great blue sea for nearly four thousand destitute children, can afford to wait and follow, as the Master leads. May his wealthy stewards promptly respond with generous gifts to every proved and trusted helper of the helpless, who give their days and nights to save the lost.

VISITOR.

MILDMAY CONFERENCE HALL.

THE Mission at Mildmay Conference Hall by Mr. George C. Needham, commenced on March 4, increases in interest. The meetings for Christian workers at half-past nine on Lord's day morning are peculiarly refreshing, and, like our brother's other ministrations, are full of instruction. The attendance at this meeting is very encouraging, and we expect to see the hall quite full at the Gospel meetings in the evening. Mr. Needham also gives Bible-readings on the Lord's day afternoons at 3.30, and Thursday afternoons at 3. These expository addresses are characterised by great clearness and close adherence to Holy Scripture. No one can mistake his meaning or fail to see that his words are words of truth and soberness. Such teaching is much wanted and we believe is deeply valued.

The meetings will be continued throughout this and the following month; but on April 1 the Mission becomes continuous, and there will be a nightly service in the Conference Hall, except on Saturdays. Will Christian friends sustain us by their presence or by their prayers, or both?

OPEN-AIR MISSION.

ON Friday afternoon, the thirtieth annual meeting of the Open-air Mission was held in Steinway Hall, and was presided over by Sir Thomas Chambers, Q.C., M.P.

The report, read by the Secretary, stated that there were now 748 members of the Mission, all pledged to promote and practise open-air preaching. During the year they had preached in 453 towns and villages in thirty-five counties. They had visited 271 races and fairs and other special gatherings, and had distributed 1,034,506 tracts, making about 16,000,000 since the Mission began. There had been fifty-two conferences held, and 114 volumes added to the preachers' library, which now contains about 1000 volumes. The year had been one of rich blessing in the conversion of souls. The income was £1478, and there was now a balance in hand of £99.

The Chairman said the Mission was one of the best and cheapest of our religious organizations, and deserved well of the Church of Christ for its aggressive character. Such a mode of preaching had certainly the sanction of the highest antiquity to recommend it. The Rev. Sholto Douglas described the work from a parochial point of view, as his curates and helpers had hardly omitted it a Sunday for eighteen months. Dr. Sinclair Paterson said no apology was needed for such an enterprise, and emphasized the qualifications for such preaching as common sense and a knowledge of the Bible.

The Rev. Colmer Symes urged the preachers to declare facts—a personal Saviour and personal experience. The Rev. W. M. Sinclair dwelt upon the voices of the streets, and the power of a chance word amid their din and confusion. Mr. John Macgregor, the Hon. Sec., thanked God for the harmony with which the work had been carried on from the very first; and then the meeting closed with the Doxology.

BRIGHTON.—The Medical Mission carried on here by Dr. Witten has done a good work among the poor of Brighton during the past year. A new branch was opened in the Lewes-road. It is desired to erect new premises for the Mission in Edward-street.

PRAY FOR ONE ANOTHER.

"Epaphras . . . a servant of Christ . . . always labouring fervently for you in prayer."—Col. iv. 12.

OF the angels it is written, "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" (Heb. i. 14). Here is a still more glorious ministry, and one in which all God's people may engage, while the Throne of Grace is open night and day—the ministry of intercession, the labour and the privilege of prayer! It has been said that a little child may carry a cup of water to revive and refresh the fainting warrior; so a babe in Christ, who can only pray, may by that means bring the needed grace to those who are in the thick of the fight, and thus "turn the battle to the gate."

This may be one reason why God leads not a few of his children to lonely places, or lays them aside in bodily weakness. He is calling them to engage in this tender, holy ministry, and truly "those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary" (1 Cor. xii. 22). It is a labour. "The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak." Satan will diligently seek to hinder, and in this, as in every spiritual exercise, the flesh will crave for ease and indulgence. But the Divine Spirit "helpeth our infirmities." By his gracious aid, and by a determined perseverance in prayer for all saints, we shall go from strength to strength. Nothing can enlarge and strengthen the heart like coming in contact with God, and having fellowship with Him. The more we pray, the more will we be able to pray, whether for ourselves or others; and the more we pray for others, the more will we increase and abound in love towards them. It is a labour of faith. Our gracious God is not slow to encourage the hearts of his waiting people. The firstfruits are often rich and rare, but the great reward will be reserved. We do not know how God is answering, but we believe He will fulfil his word, "Ask, and ye shall receive."

How little we know of the ministry of angels. We may seldom think of it, but we are certain that by and by we shall regard these holy beings with feelings of tender love and gratitude. Yes, we shall love the angels. So may we serve the saints of God now, throwing around them many an enduring, though invisible cord. In the day when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed, these will shine forth in their glory and beauty.

Not one will seem a stranger,
Though never met before—

certainly not one for whom we have prayed. "He that keepeth this commandment keepeth his own soul." If, through grace, we are thus enabled to bring down blessings on others, we shall receive a liberal portion for ourselves. It cannot be otherwise. "In the light of the king's countenance is life" (Prov. xvi. 15). We will hear many a gracious whisper, which can be heard only in "the secret place of the Most High" (John xv. 15).

God turned the captivity of Job when in a forgiving spirit he prayed for his friends. Abraham had close access to God, and he knew how to use it on behalf of others; and Abraham was called "the friend of God." It was while Moses was pleading for the people (Exodus xxxiii.) that he was led to utter that wonderful petition for himself—"I beseech Thee, show me Thy glory." While Daniel was confessing his sin, and the sin of his people Israel, and "making supplication for the holy mountain of his God" the "man Gabriel" was "caused to fly swiftly." He came, not only to give him skill and understanding, but also to tell him that he was "a man greatly beloved." So dear in the sight of God are those who are his "remembrancers."

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high.

Shall we not earnestly seek, through the energy of the Spirit, to fulfil our part in this sacred ministry? It will not only bring us into fellowship with one another, but into peculiar fellowship and sympathy with Christ, "Who ever liveth to make intercession" for his people. B. Wyse.

For the Young.

ABOUT SOME POOR CHILDREN.

I WANT to tell the young folks who read The Congregationalist about some poor children in Manchester. It was six o'clock, one Tuesday evening in January, when a friend and I set out to visit the soup kitchen of Mr. Superintendent Bent. . . . It was in the early winter of 1878 that Mr. and Mrs. Bent, pitying the poor hungry street waifs, began to give them basins of soup. Their own children had grown up, but in this way they quickly found another and a very large family. Night after night hundreds of starving boys and girls came bareheaded and barefooted in the snow begging a share. The kind superintendent could not resist their pleading voices. Expenses became heavy. The crowds of hungry babies grew more pressing. Already he had spent more than he could afford, yet he could not bear to leave off, and he was sorely troubled. But God, from whom all kind thoughts come, who loves little children, and had put it into the heart of Mr. Bent to do them good, now sent assistance. Mr. Joseph Armstrong, a gentleman who had seen something of the good work, but was not known to our superintendent, wrote a letter to the newspaper with an account of it. Rich men sent money. Ladies brought shoes and stockings and garments. Other friends with less money but equally kind hearts offered their time. And the soup kitchen was thrown open to all comers. The originator of the charity has never asked for help; each winter more than enough has been sent.

After we had shaken hands with Mr Bent, we asked to be introduced to his big family of little people. I have seen many a gathering of children, but never one like this. Crossing the shed, and making our way between some tarpaulin sheets, which on this side hung from the roof so as to make a kind of fourth wall, we found ourselves in a big square asphalted yard. It was very dark, but by the bull's-eye lantern of the policeman who now accompanied us, we could see huddled together on three sides of the court the shivering forms of some hundreds of half-naked children. Many did not appear to be more than four or five years old. Others informed us that they had "turned fifteen," though their dwarfish stature seemed to impugn the assurance. Some lived in the neighbourhood. Some had come from Chorlton, Gorton, and even Pendleton townships, two or three miles distant. None were sufficiently clad. Shoes and stockings were rare. Not a few had only one wretched skirt to defend them from the stinging night air.

One timid little girl, whom we were moved to question by the sight of tears coursing silently down her thin cheeks, told us that she had no father—that mother was ill—that neither mother nor herself had had anything to eat all day. She was crying, she said, because she was "clemmed," and her white face, hungry eyes, and naked limbs, blue with cold, were vouchers for the truth of her story. Poor little maid! she was only one of many in like pitiful case. One of Mr. Bent's rules is that his pensioners must eat their soup and bread before going away, for there is reason to fear that otherwise it would find its way down the throats of unnatural parents.

By this time supper was waiting. The children filed into the shed. At a signal all sang "Be present at our table, Lord!" finishing with the quickest "Amen" I ever heard, and then in an instant they were busy with their pints of soup. While grace was being sung, I had noticed that many were clasping their basin with both hands for the sake of its genial warmth, and had almost wished the food were not so hot, fearing lest some ravenous child might be scalded. They had no fear. A few crumbled their bread into the thick savoury mess. The majority, however, lifted the almost boiling soup to their mouths, and with incredible rapidity drank it off. Many polished their basins after the fashion of Jack Sprat with his platter. Others more decorously scoured them with bread. Almost all lingered over the crust as if they wanted both to eat and to have it. Then with a look upon their perspiring faces of deep content, with an awkward attempt at a bow or a curtsey, with a whispered "Aw've a good way to goo, maister," or some other apology for hasty exit, they left the premises. A second group followed, and a third, and a fourth, every child illustrating the schoolboy definition of appetite, "'anpy while you're eating and tite when you've done," until by the time the last was satisfied fifteen hundred had been fed.

Every night all through the winter months these suppers are given away. In addition, to the poorest and worst clad, Mr. Bent supplies caps and hoods, jackets and frocks, stout underclothing and capital clogs or wooden shoes. The policemen cheerfully give their services, working hard for the children in time snatched from their own sleep, and looking so happy over it all that I was forcibly reminded of the words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." When I reached home that night, and found my own little Willie and Bertie snugly asleep under eiderdown quilts, I could not help wondering how many children in this great city had no bed to lie on. And I thanked God, as I hope my young readers will also, for good, kind Mr. Superintendent Bent.—W. J. Woods, in "The Congregationalist."

THE DAILY CROSS.

By Mrs. T. D. Crewdson.

"Whosoever will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me."—Mark viii. 34.

THE followers of the Son of God
Have each a daily cross to bear,
And he who treads where Jesus trod
Must not refuse his cup to share.

But sin can ne'er be crucified
By cross or suffering of our own;
The cross whereon Immanuel died
Alone can win the victor's crown.

We own but one Gethsemane,
And there the debt of woe was paid;
We know but one true Calvary,
And there was sin's atonement made.

'Tis sweet, O Lord, thy cup to share,
Of true discipleship the sign;
And easy is the cross to bear,
If faith beholdeth only thine.

Then grant us grace to drink the cup,
Whate'er that daily cup may be;
And cheerfully the cross take up,
And bear it meekly after Thee.

MATLOCK, BATH.—A lady correspondent, residing at this pleasant health resort among the Derbyshire hills, asks us to say that if a number of Christian friends will visit it during the approaching Easter holidays they will find plenty to do for the Master among the crowds of pleasure seekers that flock thither on Good Friday and Easter Monday.

BIBLICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

DEAR SIR,—In your last, Mr. Moody is reported to have said that most of the great men in Scripture were types of the Lord Jesus Christ. In some cases, as Adam and Melchisedek, they are stated to be so in the New Testament. Are we justified in saying that men were types of Christ who are not stated to be such in the New Testament?

W. H. W.

DR. FAIRBAIRN, in his "Typology of Scripture," referring to this very question, says the examples adduced by New Testament writers of the typical bearing of Old Testament characters and things "have all the appearance of having been selected only as specimens of the class to which they belong, and should rather have the effect of prompting further inquiry than of checking it. So far from themselves comprehending and bounding the whole field of typical matter, they may rather be regarded as furnishing the data from which we are to gather the rules that ought to guide us in our search for others of a like description." This seems to be in accordance with the inspired statements found in Romans xv. 4, 1 Cor. x. 11, and Heb. v. 11-14. There is ample evidence to show that, as one has well said, "the entire Old Testament is a great prophecy, a great type of Him who was to come, and has come." Some of the characters omitted from New Testament use are certainly as prominent and manifestly typical as others which are employed; for instance, Joseph, Samson, Elisha, David, and others. It is impossible to read with an eye to spiritual things the histories of these men of God and not be irresistibly drawn to see their typical power to set forth important Gospel truth.

While, therefore, we would guard against a fanciful straining of any Scripture, yet, following the example of the New Testament writers, we think we are not only justified, but actually instructed, to look for continuous and frequent typical illustrations of Christ in all the sacred biographies of Old Testament times. "Search the Scriptures," saith our Lord, for "they are they which testify of Me."

"A Young Missionary" writes, asking us to point out the distinction between the words iniquity, transgression, and sin, found in Exod. xxxiv. 7; Psa. xxxii. 1, 2; and in other places.

We cannot do better than quote from a sermon by Dr. Maclaren, of Manchester, on Psa. li. 1-10; in which he says: "The three words which the Psalmist employs for sin give prominence to different aspects of it. Transgression is not the same as iniquity, and iniquity is not the same as sin. They have each a separate thought in them. The word rendered 'transgression' literally means rebellion, a breaking away from, and setting oneself against lawful authority. That translated 'iniquity' literally means that which is twisted, bent. The word in the original for 'sin' literally means missing a mark, an aim. Sin is ever rebellion, the deflection from the straight line which God's law draws so clearly and firmly, and hence a missing the mark."

TEMPERANCE IN NEW SOUTH WALES.—The correspondent of The Nonconformist and Independent, writing from Sydney, says: "The Licensing Act has, on the whole, worked well during the year. Many of the small drinking shops, so fruitful in drunkenness and crime, have been closed, and in many districts drunkenness is decidedly on the decrease. By the Local Option clause many rapidly-growing neighbourhoods are prevented from having an increase of public-houses, and by the new regulations those in existence are under strict police supervision. In other respects, there is not much to congratulate ourselves upon. A class of youths, known as 'larrikins,' is so rapidly increasing in numbers and boldness as to excite general alarm; in most public places the air is polluted by their vile oaths, while the daily police reports testify to their audacity, shamelessness, and ingenuity in evil-doing. It is generally believed that they are the children of men of the working and middle-classes utterly spoilt by temporal prosperity. Drink and sensual vices are fully indulged in by both parents, and the wretched children grow up adepts in all that is bad. There is much need for earnest, united prayer for special spiritual blessings to counteract the rapidly-spreading evils of indifference, profanity, scepticism, intemperance, and uncleanness.

CHRISTIAN COLPORTAGE ASSOCIATION.

THE ninth annual meeting of this Society was held last Thursday afternoon at No. 7, Connaught-place, Hyde-park. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the spacious drawing-rooms of Mr. T. A. Denny were well filled by friends of the work; the Earl of SHAFTESBURY presided.

After praise and prayer the report of the work of the past year was read by the Secretary, Mr. H. D. Brown. It is a deeply interesting record of Christian service; from it we learn that the colporteurs, now some ninety in number, sold during the year over 18,000 copies of the Scriptures, 232,163 Gospel books, and 178,442 Christian periodicals, the total value being over £9,500.

According to the report (extracts from which we hope to give on a future occasion) "the special work of the Society is to search out the dark corners of the land and to bring to them the 'light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.'" We quote the following instance, showing the nature of the work:—

A PAIR OF DUCKS FOR A BIBLE.

One poor woman, living in a lonely cottage in an out-of-the-way village, being called upon for the first time was asked to buy a Bible.

"I don't want one," she replied. "I have no time to read it nor money to spend on it."

"May I come in and read a little of it to you?" the colporteur asked.

"You may please yourself," was the somewhat ungracious reply.

Entering the cottage the colporteur sat down, and read the parable of the prodigal son, in Luke xv, while the woman went on with her washing. Presently she stopped her work and sat down to listen, deeply interested in the wondrous story that came from the lips of the Saviour.

When the colporteur had finished he talked to her of the love of God, and when he offered to pray she readily assented.

After prayer, she inquired, "What is the price of that book you have been reading out of?" He told her eighteen pence; but she shook her head, she hadn't the money. What she had with her she was going to take out to buy meal for the pigs. "But, look here!" she said, brightening up, "I've got a pair of young ducks here; they'll be worth a couple of shillings in a few days. Will you take them and give me the book?"

Of course he could not take the ducks in payment, but he let her have the book, and she promised to save up and pay him.

He has since visited her twice, and he states that she is diligently reading the Bible, and though she is still in great darkness, the Spirit of God is evidently leading her into the light.

During the past year the staff of colporteurs has been increased from seventy-five to eighty-seven. This has necessitated additional accommodation at the depôt, and increased outlay for stock; to provide for this and for the continued growth of the Society's operations, the Committee are anxious to raise a special fund of £1000 to add to the small working capital now in hand. One friend had offered to contribute £100 if the remainder could be raised within three months.

The financial statement was submitted by the Treasurer, Hon. A. F. KINNAIRD, who remarked that the working expenses, being extremely small, almost the whole of the contributions given to the society were actually spent in direct missionary effort.

Mr. SAMUEL MORLEY, M.P., gave his personal testimony to the value and efficiency of the society's work. In the course of his address he said: We are told that ninety-seven out of every hundred of our working population never attend a place of worship; they will not come to hear the Gospel, therefore we must take it to them. This colportage agency is one of singular adaptation for this purpose. The work of the colporteur is a real ministry, as I personally know, by the labours of two of these agents I am privileged to maintain in connection with this society. We can scarcely estimate the influence for good exerted by these colporteurs upon the immense populations utterly outside regular Gospel influences. Mr. Morley added that as a mark of his confidence in the society he would gladly give the second £100 towards the proposed special fund.

Rev. Dr. FLAVEL COOK, in the course of a weighty and valuable address, said: Analysts tell us it is difficult to get pure water; sparkling water, as well as foul, may be malarious. So with the literature of the day: it is systematically poisoned. The prophet Jeremiah warns us against mixing the precious with the vile. To-day, in the productions of the printing-press, you may read articles bearing the names of Christian men side by side with those of men who are opposed to the truth of God. We must meet evil literature with good. It is not enough that we have knowledge, which was Satan's first bribe. According to some, education was to have been the panacea of evil, and now we have it on the authority of one of our most experienced prison chaplains that the larger proportion of the inmates of our prisons are educated criminals. But everywhere the knowledge men want is that which God has revealed in Christ. This is conveyed to men by the agents of this Society, through the books they sell, and by the written word of God. Moreover, it is commended by the voice of loving, living men. They and their work thus act as spiritual and moral disinfectants. This Society has a strong claim on the efforts and prayers of Christians everywhere, so that its work may become far more extensive and thorough in the future than it has been in the past.

Rev. GORDON CALTHROP said this work was one of absolute necessity. He was on a committee recently in connection with the Church of England to inquire into what remedies could be used in counteracting the unbelief of the present day. He was greatly struck and startled with the resolute propaganda which the infidel party display, not only in England, but in India. This Society, in the circulation of precious truth by men who know its power in their own experience, is reaching many who are deluded by infidel literature. It is impossible also to overrate the importance of its work among that large and important class—domestic servants. If the Society reached no other class of people beyond these, the work it is so successfully doing among them would entitle it to the warmest sympathy and support. In homely phrase it might be said: "The Society supplies milk in clean pans and without any chalk."

Rev. T. VINCENT TYMMS having further advocated the work of the Society, the Earl of SHAFTESBURY, in earnest and sympathetic words, described the dangers of the present day, and expressed his strong conviction of the wisdom of this effort. He expressed his earnest desire that it might be greatly extended. He commended it to all sections of the Christian Church, and trusted it might have the joy of seeing abundant fruit to the praise and glory of God.

MOSLEM MISSIONS IN EGYPT.—DEAR SIR,—My sister, Miss M. L. Whately, is progressing well in her labour. Her present special aim is to establish a line of small country schools in the Nile villages near Cairo, which she visits herself from time to time. In her last visit, a few weeks ago, she found a remarkably increased readiness to receive the Word. The Government purposes establishing schools wherever they can be planted, but would leave free the places where any are already existing. Now, therefore, is the moment for British Christians to come forward. On them it will, humanly speaking, depend whether the standard of the Cross or the Crescent be raised in many of these country villages. Mr. MacDermott, Triangle Lodge, Streatham, S.W., will gladly receive help towards this object.—Faithfully yours,

E. JANE WHATELY.

BALLS POND, N.—The anniversary of the Wall-street Mission, Balls Pond, was held on Sunday, the 12th, followed by a public meeting on the Monday evening. This Mission has been established about seventeen years; it is placed in the midst of a poor neighbourhood, its object being to reach the class of people who refuse to attend our churches and chapels. A good work has been done by it; not a few are living witnesses of the power of the Gospel in changing men and women from drunkards, swearers, liars, &c., to holy, praying people. Amid the changes that have occurred since the commencement, is one that has seriously affected the work, namely, the removal of many of the subscribers who assisted at the beginning. And as the Mission is perfectly unsectarian and receives no assistance from any Church or denomination, the strain upon the friends (who are all voluntary workers) has become heavy and cripples the usefulness of the Mission. Any information respecting the work can be obtained of the Superintendent, Mr. T. Nixon, 146, South-gate-road, N.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

GRANGEMOUTH.

MR. J. M. SCROGGIE has been holding Evangelistic Services here for the last two weeks. The result has been a spiritual awakening, and a large number of anxious inquirers. Mr. Scroggie has left Grangemouth to join Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Leeds and Liverpool.

CLAPHAM.

Mr. and Miss Parker have concluded a twelve days' Mission at the City Mission-room, Whitesquare, situated in the lowest part of Clapham. The room was full to overflowing every night, and many cases were dealt with personally after each meeting. At the praise-meeting many testified to the blessing they had received.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

A deeply interesting social meeting for friendless and fallen was held on Thursday last, with a tea, at Mornington Hall. About 200 attended. Short addresses were given by various friends, including three ladies, which appeared to make deep impression on those assembled. At the close fifteen gladly availed themselves of the invitation given, and left for various Homes.

THE CONGO.

M. de Brazza, the French Congo explorer and representative, paid a visit lately to Mr. and Mrs. Guinness at Harley Hall, Bow, from which it is hoped that a clearer idea of missionaries, such as England sends out, and their work, will be gained by him, and that he may learn that it is not in the interest of Republican France to follow the Jesuit fathers abroad while she dislodges and disowns them at home.

RAILWAY MEN AT BIRMINGHAM.

A good work of grace has for some time been in progress among railway men in Birmingham, specially in connection with Mission-rooms at Small Heath and Vauxhall. A week's Mission has lately been held at Small Heath and other places by Mr. Geo. Clarke, secretary of the Railway Mission, London. It is believed that not a few have been led to decision as a result of the meetings, and the local friends are hoping that a Railway Mission for the large city of Birmingham may be organised.

CHILDREN'S MISSION.

Mr. Spiers and Mr. Westall went to Brixham on Saturday, 10th inst. Calling on the Vicar, Rev. A. F. Carey, who said he had often read of their work in THE CHRISTIAN, Mr. Spiers received a loving welcome. The evening was spent in visiting the Dissenting ministers and friends, and trying to arrange a Mission. A meeting for parents and teachers was fixed for Sunday evening at eight in the Congregational Chapel. The Vicar announced it in the parish church, and went himself. Two hundred and fifty were present. A crowded meeting was held on Thursday in the parish schools. The Temperance Hall has been taken for this week. This loving co-operation is sure to bring blessing.

MR. RICHARD WEAVER IN DUNDEE.

The interest in these meetings continued till the close. On the afternoon of Sabbath, March 4, the Music Hall was crowded in every part with a most attentive congregation, many of whom were not in the habit of attending on the preaching of the word. The closing address was given on Thursday evening. There was a good attendance, and a solemn feeling seemed to prevail at the meeting, as the speaker urged the people to decide for the Lord. We doubt not that many will have occasion to praise God throughout eternity, that they at this time heard the message of life from the lips of our brother.

On Friday evening a farewell tea-meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, when 300 to 400 Christian friends met to say good-bye to Mr. Weaver for the present, and to give him a most cordial invitation to visit Dundee again.

REV. W. HASLAM AT NOTTINGHAM.

A Mission has been conducted by Mr. Haslam at Old Radford Church. The services were attended by people from different parts of Nottingham. Mr. Haslam's pointed words created a marked impression from the first, and the power of the Spirit was present to heal. Not the least blessed fruit was to be found in the arousing of many whose hearts had been previously given to the Lord. Mrs. Haslam conducted meetings for women every afternoon in the vicarage room, and her faithful Gospel addresses proved a word in season to very many.

At the praise meeting, which has since been held, nearly all present stood up, one by one, to testify either to the knowledge of salvation or to the blessing of fully trusting in the ever present help of the Lord Jesus Christ.

MR. RICHARD WEAVER IN EDINBURGH.

After leaving Dundee, Richard Weaver began a series of meetings in Edinburgh on the 11th inst., in Brighton-street E. U. Church. On Sabbath evening the large building was crowded, many having to turn away without gaining admission, while there would be upwards of 2000 present. Mr. Weaver gave a stirring address from the words "Jesus only," and at the close, the side-room was filled with anxious inquirers, and many found peace.

Several interesting cases of conversions have occurred. On Monday, a woman brought four of her shop companions to the meeting; they were all awakened, and, after being spoken to, laid their sins at the feet of Jesus, and went home rejoicing.

Although the weather has been very tempestuous, the Church has always been filled, and much good has been done in the deepening of the spiritual life of Christians. The minister of the congregation has been present on almost every occasion.

AMONG THE YOUNG IN GLASGOW.

Last week Govanhill was the sphere of Mr. Mackeith's labours among the children. The meetings began with a gathering of Christian workers, at which valuable counsel was given to Sabbath-school teachers in seeking the conversion of their scholars. The children's meetings were held on successive evenings in the U.P. Church. The spacious building was crowded by an eager throng, and on the last night many were content to find standing room. In three addresses, which were models of condensation and luminous exposition, the whole story of the Pilgrim's Progress was graphically told, and its spiritual meaning clearly set forth. The magic-lantern views were striking and full of character, and must remain impressed on many a youthful imagination as beacons to warn and examples to follow.

Were no other results to follow than that hundreds of children every week should be sent to read with thrilling interest the immortal allegory of Bunyan and to join the Daily Scripture Reading Union, the blessings would be incalculable. But hundreds stayed behind, many probably from mere curiosity, but many, too, whose anxious faces and tearful eyes told that they were feeling their burden and had begun their pilgrimage. Not a few, ere they left, had "been to Jesus for the cleansing blood," and to them the place had proved in very deed, "The house of God and the gate of heaven."

FRANCE.

The Baptist Church in Lyons is experiencing a great revival under Pastor Ramseyer. Pastor Andru, of Paris, has assisted, while on a Mission tour in that district.

M. Saillens, in recounting to his little flock at Marseilles what he saw in Paris during his brief sojourn, while on his journey from the southern French port to Liverpool, to join the Baltic for America, mentions a characteristic fact which strikes most visitors to Paris just now —that while the name of God must perforce be exorcised from human speech, according to the dictum of some would-be reformers, yet the name of the devil is being signally honoured in playbills, &c.

M. Vornière, one of the oldest members of the Baptist Church of Paris, and an evangelist whose labours were much blessed, has just died, at the advanced age of seventy-six. Many of his spiritual children followed him to the grave.

Rev. Dr. Pigou, Vicar of Halifax, has been holding a successful Mission at the English Episcopal Church in Paris. He also preached in the American Episcopal Church. The French papers generally speak approvingly, and one of them suggests similar Missions in French Churches.

M. Saillens, the director of Mr. M'All's branch Mission at Marseilles, in company with the Rev. Robert M'All, of Portishead, have gone to America, to visit the American auxiliaries which have been formed in aid of the evangelistic work in France. Mr. M'All will return early in April, but M. Saillens will remain for a more extended tour.

A correspondent who has been staying for three months at Hyères, South France, speaks of great readiness on the part of the people there to hear the Gospel. He urges English Christians who are seeking rest and health to visit Hyères, where they will find many opportunities for service, both among the French and the Italian workmen resident there.

Revivals continue to be reported from various parts of France. Among the latest is that in the Cevennes, called the Sinai of France, from the fact that the ancient Huguenots fled to this region of basaltic mountains, there to have the privilege of worshipping God as they pleased. The meetings are described as most enthusiastic, but the seats and meeting-places are most rude.

French priests unavailingly warn their flocks against listening to the "sybilline notes of the Protestant preachers, by which the latter aim to charm the faithful to destruction," for in a recent report of the Evangelical movement which is taking place in the diocese of the implacable Bishop Freppell, it is shown that of the 24,000 persons who have attended the meetings 20,000 were Catholics.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith have been holding very largely attended services in Soho-street Chapel, Liverpool.

Rev. T. E. Cleworth, after leaving Belfast, entered on a Mission in several districts of the south of Ireland. We trust he will be followed by the prayers of Christians everywhere.

Mr. Henry Bridges has lately been engaged in Evangelistic work among navvies and others at Whitchurch; he is now open for further engagements —address, 14, William-street, S.E.

Last Thursday night, through the kindness of some friends, a social gathering of railway men and their wives was held at Beckenham. After tea, Gospel addresses were delivered, and many of the men seemed deeply impressed.

Miss Brryman has been holding Evangelistic services at Blackgang, Isle of Wight, for three weeks; her stirring words have come with power alike to believers and unbelievers; some have come out on the Lord's side, and Christians have been greatly revived.

Evangelistic services have been held in the Baptist Chapel, Earls Colne, Essex, for two weeks, by Mr. Oscar Owers. During the second week Mr. Owers conducted a Bible reading each afternoon in the Institute, which was well attended and much appreciated.

REV. W. H. AITKEN'S ENGAGEMENTS.—March 31 to April 16, Wareham; April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

REV. W. HASLAM will conduct Missions:—March 17, Ratcliffe-on-Trent, Nottingham; March 30, Christ Church, Dover; April 7, Wimbledon.

MR. T. E. MURPHY'S GOSPEL TEMPERANCE MISSIONS.—March 15 to 23, Lancaster; March 25 and 26, Wood Green, London; March 27 to 30, Shrewsbury; April 1 to 6, Manchester; April 8 to 22, Belfast; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY will conduct Gospel Temperance Missions: March 25 to 31, Wood Green, London; April 1 to 15, Manchester; April 22 to May 22, chief towns of Norfolk; May 27 to June 5, Exeter Hall, London. Applications for Mr. Francis Murphy and Mr. Thomas E. Murphy's services should be made to "The Secretary," 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.—Mr. Arrowsmith at Plymouth, March 23 to 26; Mr. Hutchinson at Newark till March 23; Mr. Dennes at Friends' Meeting House, Kingston-on-Thames, April 2 to 6; Mr. Spiers at Brixham, South Devon.

WORKING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

DEAR SIR,—I should like our friends to know how the work described in Miss Van Sommer's little book, "A Helping Hand," is progressing; to any who have not seen it I will gladly send a copy on application. We have secured the public-house, "Sir John Falstaff," and adjoining courts. On February 13, a very happy "praise-meeting" was held in the house by way of consecrating it to God's service, by a large party of soldiers and their kind chaplain, and all the Institute workers. The next evening the soldiers gave a "house-warming tea" to sixty poor people, and the evening was spent in prayer and praise and short addresses; the new sign for the house, "The Blue Ribbon," was hung up, and all has gone on most happily since.

A night-school of seventy men has been formed, with soldier teachers, a mothers' meeting, and at the people's own request two Bible-classes, one for men only, one mixed, the average attendance being fifty. The bar and coffee-kitchen are well used, early and late, and on Saturday and Sunday evenings the people come in hundreds with the soldiers to our meetings in the Institute-hall.

After Easter William Taylor will be sent down by the Evangelisation Society for a fortnight's Mission, and they will help us with preachers afterwards. Many of the people who are coming to our meetings were drunkards, swearers, &c., never attending any place of worship, and with only the clothes they stand up in. One noteworthy fact is that very seldom they ask for relief; they do not come for what they can get. I never saw more attentive, orderly, and well-behaved audiences. Two sudden deaths, within a fortnight, of men who were opposing the work, had an effect on others, and we are now comparatively unmolested. The people we are reaching are of quite a different class to those reached during Messrs. Moody and Sankey's recent visit.

Will friends pray for large spiritual blessing, and especially that our dear soldiers may share in it, and be helped in helping others? Where the courts stood we shall build a Mission Hall, soup-kitchen, public wash-house, dormitory, &c.; the contractor hopes to have all finished by September. The total cost, including the public-house and £250 for the licence, will be £7000, towards which I ask donations. I have already received £1870, and am adding £500 of my own. The property is vested in our Soldiers' Institute Trustees.—Faithfully yours,

SARAH ROBINSON.

Soldiers' Institute, Portsmouth.

WORK AMONG THE CHILDREN.

SALISBURY.

MY DEAR SIR,—Your readers will rejoice to learn somewhat of the Children's Special Service Mission meetings just held in Salisbury, for which their prayers have been asked. Seven years since Mr. Spiers held a Children's Mission in this city, and some are now walking consistently as believers who were then brought to Christ Jesus as their Saviour.

Mr. George Banaster, of the Children's Mission, who devotes his life to the work of the Lord amongst the young, responded to our call to "come over and help us." On the first Sunday we had 1260 children with their teachers assembled in our Maundrel Hall. Night after night, from 450 to 650 young people came together to listen to the "Old, old story," told with great simplicity and earnestness. Mr. Banaster forced the truth upon the attention of the little ones by an ample supply of illustrations and anecdotes from his own experience. The singing was capital, and, best of all, as far as we can judge, not a few, but many, of the children have yielded their hearts to Jesus.

All your readers may not be aware that a certain number of gentlemen visit, during the summer months, at their own charges, some of our fashionable seaside resorts, and speak to children who gather on the sands. Mr. Banaster is now very anxious to procure a Mission yacht, about twenty tons burden, to be called the Olive Branch, in which to visit these places. The cost of this little ship will be about £300, towards which already £170 has been given. If any of your readers will send me contributions towards this object, I shall be very glad to forward them to Mr. Banaster.

One hundred and fifty children have already joined the "Children's Scripture Union," and we are expecting considerable additions to our numbers. What can be better in these days of infidelity than to get the minds of the young well stored with the precious word of God?—Yours faithfully, EDGAR N. THWAITES.

Fisherton Rectory, Salisbury.

THE LATE MRS. SANDEMAN.

AT a ripe old age Mrs. Sandeman, of Springland, Perth, has passed away from earth to her rest and her reward; she died at her residence, on the 5th inst. A Perth newspaper in an obituary notice of the deceased lady, says: "As she had passed the limit of the fourscore years, and lived all her days in the Fair City, she was one of the connecting-links between the present and the past; and her mind was richly stored with the traditions and memories of a byegone age, and the histories of the old Perthshire families. Fewer, however, lived an intenser life than she in the present. Having at an early age been powerfully impressed with spiritual religion, she was intimately associated with many of the foremost promoters of the evangelical revival in the first half of the century; and entered with keen interest into the various evangelistic enterprises of more recent times. Her beautiful home on the bank of the Tay was for many years a resort of those who came to Perth in connection with such work, and the religious conferences, with which the name of the city is widely associated owed much to her enthusiasm and energy.

"Her very original character and singularly strikingly personal appearance made her a unique figure in the minds of her friends, to whom her removal will make a great blank. She had a numerous family, and is survived by three sons and by one daughter—Mrs. Barbour, of Bonskeid, the authoress of "The Way Home," and other well-known religious works. One of her sons, the Rev. David Sandeman, died in China, after two years of zealous missionary work, in which he was intimately associated with the Rev. W. C. Burns."

Between two and three thousand young women and girls are registered on her evangelistic class-list. These words of a young lady, writing under the impulse of grief, will give some idea of what her influence was:—

"The dear loved one, now in glory with her Lord, was no common friend. The intercourse I was allowed to have with her I shall look back on with a hallowed, chastened joy. The bright smile which lit up that lovely countenance told fully of the holy peace within. The tender, loving words of counsel spoken to the young disciple treading the same path—so far behind—their comfort and their strength shall be long remembered. The holy breathings of soul were wafted straight up to his throne as we knelt lowly at his feet. The lovely and sainted mother who had so long and closely walked with Him, besought powerfully the needed grace for us, still young in the Christian life. These are holy memories now. May that long life of shining faith and bright consistency, crowned by the triumphant death, stimulate each of us to follow her in so far as she followed Christ, leaving such glory-streaks behind."

Notices of Books, &c.

A most interesting sketch of the Mildmay Institution, beautifully illustrated, appears in the current number of THE QUIVER. 6d. Cassell & Co.

EARLY TRAINING. By Rev. JOS. TONGUE, B.A. E. Stock. A very striking little book, on a familiar but most important theme. It abounds with striking illustrations, and is very suggestive as to the nature and worth of early training. Parents and teachers will find it useful and stimulating to faith and effort.

A GOLDEN GUIDE TO MATRIMONY. By JOB FLOWER, Melksham, Wilts. 2s. 6d. Published by the Author. Poetry and prose are summoned in this book to the work of guiding action on this important matter. There is much quaintness, and not a little strong common sense, as well as devout reflection, to be found in the author's treatment of his subject.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD. By J. B. ALLAN. E. Stock. An Exposition of the Twenty-third Psalm, containing some good and useful thoughts, as we felt while reading the earlier chapters. What was our dismay on finding, at the close, a defence of modern spiritualism, and a plea for its adoption by the Christian Church as a proof of immortality and eternal life. A writer who can compare the Transfiguration of Christ to a modern séance is not, we think, a safe guide to follow, and a book which can speak of spiritualism as "a measure by which Christian professors might be made able to uphold their sinking cause," is one we should advise our readers to avoid rather than obtain.

ANNALS OF THE EARLY CALIPHATE. By Sir WM. MUIR, K.C.S.S., D.C.L. Smith Elder, & Co. The preface states: "This work is a continuation of the 'Life of Mahomet.' Taking up the thread from his death and burial, it tells the story of the spread of the religion which he founded, and seeks to trace the special causes—national, tribal, and spiritual—which moulded the faith, created its expansive power, and guided its onward progress." The author in pursuance of his plan gives very fully the history of the first four Caliphates; and in a most fascinating style leads the reader through the exciting scenes connected with the remarkable triumphs of the Moslem arms during the first fifty years after the death of Mahomet. The conquests of Arabia, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, and Persia, are told in words remarkable for their clearness and force. Indeed, considering the scarcity and traditionary character of the sources of information open to the author, it is wonderful how he has succeeded in so graphically sketching the events he narrates. The student of history will highly estimate the skill and the painstaking care the writer has bestowed on his work, which throws much light on the rise and fall of the Mahometan dynasties, and serves to point many a moral connected therewith. A beautiful map of Arabia and surrounding countries is appended, to illustrate the annals described.

WEST-END WORK.—DEAR SIR,—After labouring for many years in this neighbourhood with some measure of success among the careless masses in Hyde-park and the Edgware-road, we find ourselves for the first time in debt. The work at the Metropolitan Music Hall and Hyde-park Hall is known to many of your readers, who I think would help if they knew that I am wanting to meet the rent of the music-hall for the past three months. Our meetings are crowded every Sunday, and whilst our workers and myself are willing to do the hard work, we are looking to God to supply the funds through his children who may have the means.—Yours truly, CHAS. COOK.

Hyde-park Hall, Edgware-road, W.

THE HIGHLAND ORPHANAGE.—This admirable institution, lately formed at Inverness, is about to take permanent shape. It is in contemplation to build six cottages, in a healthy and elevated position, for the reception and care of orphans in the Scottish Highlands. Each cottage will be under the care of a "mother," according to the plan which is now universally allowed to be the best. It is hoped that the first cottage will be ready for occupation in June next. £800 at least will be required for the completion of the proposed scheme. Of this only £250 has as yet been received. We doubt not many Highlanders all over the world will be glad to contribute to such a praiseworthy and Christian effort. We will gladly receive any sums subscribed by our readers, and transmit them to the Treasurer, Mr. George Walker, Ness Bank, Inverness.

EASTER DAY.

SWEET Easter-day, thou art the gem
Of all the Sundays in the year,
The fragrance of thy memories fills
Our grateful hearts with holy cheer.

Like truth eternal thou art green
With hopes that cannot pass away,
And blessings, manifold and fair,
Encircle every Easter-day.

Deep down the ages thou hast shone
A sunbeam in the dreary night,
And dying men have smiled to see,
The glory of the Easter-light.

See up the orient sky the sun
Sweeps onward to the perfect day;
But through the telescope of faith,
We hail a brighter eastern ray.

He shines! He shines! immortal Sun,
No dark horizon veils his beam,
No purpling clouds regretful crown
The splendour of his parting gleam.

Eternally He shines the same,
Who knows no rise, knows no decay;
A morning ripening into noon,
Has whispered "this is Easter-day."

DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

AN important Conference on the training and disposal of destitute and pauper children was lately held in London, Lord Aberdare in the chair.

Amongst the speakers was Mr. Samuel Smith, the new M.P. for Liverpool, whose address was especially noteworthy. He pleaded for emigration as by far the best way of dealing with pauper children, that of bringing them up in workhouses being the worst; and detailed the facts concerning an emigration movement of this kind in Liverpool, by means of which 1200 children had been sent to Canada in the last ten years. These had been taken from the lowest classes in the town, trained carefully for six months, and then sent to a central receiving-house in Canada, where the farmers all round eagerly come to receive them. The results of the plan had been very satisfactory. By the adoption of the plan £200,000 would be saved in London alone, while by its means a great social ulcer in our midst would be prevented, and one which, if not checked, would some day prove a grievous peril to the country.

Mr. William Tallack, Secretary of the Howard Association, advocated the boarding-out system, as recommended by Mr. Francis Peek in his book on "Social Wreckage;" remarking that want of adequate supervision was its weak point, which might be remedied by more organisation and co-operation on the part of voluntary and official workers.

Mr. James Cropper, M.P. for Kendal, also advocated the same plan. The noble President also thought that it should be tried in all cases where it could be suitably adopted. The question is one of immense importance, and calls for public attention to a far greater extent than has yet been given to it.

BRIXTON GIRLS' ORPHANAGE.—The seventh anniversay of this institution was held on Monday, 12th inst., at the Brixton Hall, Acre-lane, Brixton. Mr. T. A. Denny presided, and the meeting, which was well attended, was addressed by the Revs. C. J. R. Cooke, M.A., G. B. Concanon, LL.D., Burman Cassin, D. A. Herschell, Canon Hussey, D.D., W. Herbert, and others. The annual report stated that thirty-one orphan girls had been admitted into the institution during the year, and five had been placed in situations. 113 orphans are now being maintained, clothed, and educated in the Home, and trained for domestic service. The Home is now quite full. Scores of applicants are waiting admission, but cannot be received until room and funds are provided. Mr. Thomas Greenwood threw out a challenge that if those interested could get the amount up to £200 in the next seven days, he would add another £100.

MANCHESTER: SACRED SONG.

THE Manchester Sacred Song Association (forming the choir for the Moody and Sankey Mission just concluded in this city) held their Annual Meeting on Saturday evening week, March 10, in the Y.M.C.A., at which eighty-three sat down to tea. After tea, Mr. W. H. Draffin, the treasurer, submitted his yearly statement of accounts, duly audited, which was adopted.

Mr. C. W. Nasmith, the Honorary Secretary of the Association, then read the following report: "A little over eight years ago we had the pleasure of meeting with our friends Messrs. Moody and Sankey, and formed the choir for them at their Mission services in this city. After they left us their influence still remained, and as during the Mission we had seen the marvellous power of song in the rendering by Mr. Sankey of the sweet Gospel hymns, it was thought desirable to continue together as an Association, the principal idea being, as stated in our rules, 'The employment of sacred song as a means under God of evangelising the masses and bringing sinners to a saving knowledge of Christ their Redeemer.'

"This Association has been carried on ever since, and although we cannot tabulate results, God knows how many hearts have been made to rejoice through the instrumentality of this Association in 'Singing the Gospel.'

"Referring to one of these services, a minister of the Gospel writes: 'It may encourage the friends who so sweetly sing the Gospel to know that the services so kindly and ably rendered by them are repeatedly referred to with profound pleasure. I am sure they have made a lasting impression for good upon the minds of many of our people. In my pastoral visits I am frequently spoken to about them, and we are expecting soon to receive to our communion and fellowship a young man who then promised to give his heart to the Saviour. These few tokens may be helpful to you in your good work of scattering precious seed in the Lord's vineyard.'

"Mr. Alsop, of Wood-street Mission, writes: 'At the close of two weeks' services the Manchester Sacred Song Association sang the Gospel, which had the effect of quickening all our members and deeply affecting many poor sinners. There was a mighty power in the hallowed songs, which touched all who heard them.'

"We have visited workhouses, Manchester Royal Infirmary, Mission halls, ragged schools, in and around Manchester, and have acted as the choir at many special Missions that have been held in this city.

"One prominent and gratifying feature in the work of this Association is that although the various evangelical denominations are well represented in its membership, the most cheerful concord and unity prevails in labouring together for Christ.

"While earnestly inviting the co-operation of Christians of all denominations, this Association desires it to be understood that it cannot undertake to assist purely denominational work, or take part in meetings of a social or entertaining characteer where the moral elevation of the people is simply aimed at. Such efforts must always command their esteem and sympathy, but the one great object, be it remembered, for which the members are associated together, is that, with tongues and hearts touched by the Spirit's power, they may tell the poor and perishing around them of 'Jesus the Crucified,' 'Mighty to save.'"

REV. WM. TAYLOR.—From the India Watchman we learn that this great travelling preacher and missionary evangelist has become a local preacher, and is a member of the Bombay Quarterly Conference.

VIVISECTION.—We are desired to remind our readers that the Bill for the abolition of vivisection is down for second reading in the House of Commons on Wednesday, April 4. Their earnest prayers are asked that the Bill may be sanctioned by the Legislature. It is suggested that ministers who feel the importance of this question should bring it before their congregations on the earliest convenient occasion.

BOARD SCHOOL BAND OF HOPE.—Dear Sir,—A few of the teachers of Barnet-street Board School are going to start a Band of Hope for the children attending this school, believing it will be for their good. The school is situated in a poor part of Bethnal-green, and the London School Board have generously granted us the use of a part of the building. We believe this to be the first Band of Hope in connection with any Board school. I am desired by the committee to ask you if you will kindly appeal for us through your valuable paper, as we want funds to carry on the work.—I remain, your obedient Servant,

W. H. Bailey, Secretary.

Letters to the Editor.

A WORD FOR RAILWAY MEN.

Dear Sir,—There is much said in these days about Sabbath desecration. We also hear much about Sunday closing of public-houses, so that those persons employed in them may enjoy the Day of Rest; we seldom hear much about stopping Sunday railway traffic. It is a fact that some Railway Companies offer an inducement to people to travel on that day, by running cheap trains. Are the railway officials engaged on Sundays not as much entitled to that Day of Rest as any other employés?

Could Railway Companies (many of whose directors and shareholders are Christian men, who object to Sunday traffic) not arrange to have this most important matter discussed at their half-yearly meetings, and if the majority are in favour, let Sunday traffic be a thing of the past? Why should not railway men have their Sabbath as most other workmen have? J. Wilson.

CHRISTIAN CO-OPERATION.

Dear Sir,—Can you inform me where I can obtain a complete copy of the Rev. Washington Gladden's article on "Co-operation, not Competition."* Having advocated and lived up to these principles for over twenty years, I rejoiced to see them so ably set forth in your paper.

Principles of love, peace, goodwill, and united worship of the one God and Father through our Lord Jesus Christ, are as vital to the existence of Christianity as any other truths of the Gospel. One of your correspondents seemed to think that when men united to work for and worship God they then abandoned their principles. Men abandon and set at nought the clearest principles of Chistianity when they, as in this little town, have fifteen sections of what ought to be a united Church —Yours truly, G. H. Watkins.

HEALING BY FAITH: OR, "REST IN THE LORD."

Dear Sir,—May I ask if you will kindly republish the accompanying lines, written some years ago by a sufferer of more than twenty years, Caroline M. Noel, author of the "Name of Jesus." They have been a great solace to my own mind in connection with this much-agitated subject, and I think may comfort other sufferers. Surely few will venture to assert, with your correspondent of last week, "The chastening of the Lord" has no reference to sickness. (See Psalm xciv. 12; Hebrews xii. 6.) So many I believe are praising God for its blessed teachings in the mansions above, even though it has not been removed whilst on earth.—Yours gratefully and truly,

A Long-tried Sufferer.

"REST IN THE LORD."

O Jesus Merciful! bend down
In thy compassions deep,
As sleepless and alone I lie,
And watch beside me keep.

There is a holier, sweeter rest
Than the lulling of this pain;
A deeper calm than that which sleep
Sheds over heart and brain.

It is the soul's surrendered choice,
The settling of the will;
Lying down gently on the cross,
God's purpose to fulfil.

For this I need thy presence, Lord,†
My hand held close in thine;
Infuse now, through my spirit faint,
An energy divine.

Feed me with love, imprint on me
Thy gracious kiss of peace;
Let me be still upon thy breast,
Nor struggle for release.

And sanctify my weakness, Lord;
Nature's extreme distress
Is just the time when it may learn
Thy glory to express.

Stamp in, O Lord, at any cost,
The likeness of thy Son:
Filial submission to thy will
Is heaven itself begun.

† Isaiah xli. 14.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have read the lengthy communication signed "Not an Apostle," in your issue of the 8th inst., with considerable interest. Permit me to say a very little regarding this, as it is a matter of considerable importance, and attracting, too, in many quarters a considerable amount of attention. But in how far have we a "sure Scriptural basis" for all the premises in "Not an Apostle's" letter? Where is the Scripture to make good the assertion, "It is God's will to give us health"? Can Isaiah liii. be regarded as giving a basis for such a thesis? Decidedly not. The people immediately addressed there are Jews, not Christians. What more pathetically beautiful than the remnant passing through that great tribulation immediately preceding the appearing in glory of Christ, their Messiah, uttering the sorrowful plaint, "He was despised and we esteemed Him not." They indeed will look on that death of Christ their Messiah as truly the ground of all their blessing here upon earth: exemption from sickness, one of these blessings evidently. All this will then be fully of God. Now, the believer is "Blessed with all spiritual blessings in the heavenly places in Christ." Not earthly, but spiritual. That is his proper blessing; how does it come out in power, to him, here upon earth? "Always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake" (2 Cor. iv. 11). I ask, does not that "dying of the Lord Jesus borne about in the body" affect the believer's mortal body here? It does. Go over all the suffering detailed in 2 Cor. (and there is much of it), and let any believer, who will be taught of the Lord, say, is there any ground for supposing immunity from sickness one of the blessings to be counted upon as part of our blessing in Christ?

Have we not stood by the bed of the invalid believer, and there beheld in that body, racked it may be by years of incessant suffering, the likeness of Christ impressed on that mortal body—the life of Jesus, in all its radiant beauty and moral loveliness, expressed in that poor suffering saint? There God has stamped the dying of Jesus, and the more that believers intelligently appreciate what God is working out, the greater the power and rest enjoyed. And more fully also will that risen life (which in Christ is eternal) shine out, displaying Christ.

Is Scripture, then, in antagonism to this "Healing by Faith"? By no means. But John xv. 7, fully covers the whole matter. The "obtaining what we will" is dependent upon "abiding in Him," and his word abiding in us. This gives no latitude for our own ideas. If we are abiding in Him, we will understand his mind, and act with it. It may be his mind to raise one from a sick bed; it may be his mind also to give, through illness, intelligence of "conformity to his death." It is impossible in this briefnotice to enter fully into the matter, but I am open to communicate privately with "Not an Apostle."—Sincerely yours,

March 13. J. A. N.

THE AFFIRMATION BILL.

Sir,—In common with many of your readers, I have seen with deep satisfaction your remarks against the "Affirmation Bill" introduced by the Government. As between an oath and an affirmation most Christians might prefer the latter; but that is not the point. Both the oath and the affirmation taken by Members of Parliament in the United States appeal to the Supreme Being. Our affirmation does not happen to contain such a clause, because the Quakers, Moravians, &c., for whose relief it was passed, said, "We believe in God, and, therefore, from our stand-point, we cannot take an oath as such."

As for the alleged insincerity of some who do take the oath, that is a matter between each man's conscience and the omniscient God. But the question is, what is the ultimate appeal in a Christian land like Britain? To eliminate the Divine name to please Atheists would be high treason against the King of kings. All political questions are dwarfed into insignificance beside this, which affects, as you well say, "the foundations of Britain's greatness."—Yours, &c.,

W. Millar Nicolson, D.Sc.

Jersey, March 2.

[We have received another letter on the same subject, but taking the exactly opposite side. We think no better answer can be given to the objections raised to our position on the matter than that furnished by Dr. Nicolson's communication printed above. The question involved is not oath, or no oath, or how far simple affirmation is preferable to an oath, but in either case, whether God should be acknowledged, or his name ignored. The simple issue, as we put it, is: God, or no God.—Ed.]

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Dear Sir,—Common fairness seems to me to require that the recent statements put forth in The Christian, affecting especially our truthfulness and integrity, should have correction in the same columns.

Please, then, let me say: (1) That the Book of Orders and Regulations has always been, since its publication in 1878, offered for sale at all our stations, advertised continually, and purchased to the extent of 25,000 at the low price of 2d. This fact alone seems to me to dispose of almost all the objections that have been raised against it; for how could it be possible to direct anything approaching to dissimulation in a publication sold for 2d. on the spot?

(2) The Catechism of Doctrine, on the other hand, has not been made public, in accordance with our uniform care to avoid any approach to controversy or to condemnation of the religious beliefs or practices of others. We have never had any reason to be ashamed of anything the book contains; and it is now on sale in Manchester and everywhere else, to all comers.

(3) The objections generally made to the book of Orders and Regulations are, first, that it aims at the substitution of a purely human system of observances for spiritual services. Our answer is, that this impression can only be produced by the scanty and unfair quotations that have been made. The book, taken as a whole, abounds with evidences of the purely spiritual nature of our system: even an officer who goes to seek for buildings being told that "a continual consciousness of Divine favour, help, and guidance is the greatest need of everyone on this duty." The multiplied directions given for the assistance of simple, ignorant men and women, entirely without experience in business transactions, are never in any way intended to be substituted for Divine guidance.

Second. It is said that the book suggests dissimulation, and the following is quoted: "If a theatre-door be open, walk in and inspect every part of the building, until somebody objects. The remark, that you want to see the manager, and that you are a perfect stranger groping your way, will generally satisfy everybody, and will prevent officials from treating you with disrespect. You can afford any quantity of apologies after you have got the information you wanted. But if you go in a humble, timid way, people will take advantage of you continually."

Now, where is the objection to this, unless it be supposed that the officer is not a stranger, or does not wish to see the manager? The remaining part of the chapter from which this short extract is cut distinctly shows that the officer is a stranger, and that he is to see and deal with the manager, and with nobody else.

Third. As expressing distrust in such words as these, "If possible avoid making inquiries of members of Churches; anyway, you need not tell them what you are about."

We regret to have had to give such a direction, but the necessity for it has arisen from the fact that we have been so frequently hindered from obtaining buildings by Christian opponents. It is against the unfriendly action of such persons, rather than against our order, that criticism should be directed.

Fourth. It is objected that officers are directed to use Christians as a convenience only for a time. But it is notorious that we aim at recruiting our ranks from amongst those who have no previous religious connection. And, therefore, how can there be any doubt in the mind of anyone who is asked temporarily to act as a financial officer with regard to our ultimate intentions? There is no suggestion anywhere in the book that anyone should be treated otherwise than as his conduct for the time being deserves.

(4) It is astonishing to find denunciations of our proposed loans in presence of the fact that almost every place of worship erected in the country is mainly built in the first instance with borrowed money, for which in most cases interest has to be paid. As we have publicly explained, we are perfectly prepared to give a specific property security to anyone who is not willing to lend without it. All we want is to be enabled more rapidly than ever to avail ourselves of the glorious opportunity God has given us to gather the multitudes together to hear of Him.

(5) So far from anything like attacking family life and home influences, it is notorious that in tens of thousands of homes God has enabled us to restore the comforts and joys which ought to make home so bright, and which had been destroyed by drunkenness or other evils. It is strange, indeed, that any Christian journal should avoid reference to these notorious facts, whilst endeavouring to trumpet to the world an infraction of family order which is now admitted never to have occurred.

Worse than all the misstatements of fact of which we complain, has been the bitter spirit manifested, especially in the suggestion of evil, selfish motives, for each fresh step taken to extend the Kingdom of our blessed Lord. As to all that I seek no earthly remedy, content to await his judgment, with and for whom I am content to suffer. But the vast interests committed to my care will no longer allow me indifferently to permit misrepresentations as to fact, if the ordinary remedy of explanation be persistently denied.—Yours faithfully, William Booth.

NATURE'S GOD.

BRIGHTLY gleamed the western glory,
Lighting up the mountains hoary,
Glancing o'er the mighty ocean,
And the rippling rills.
Nature seemed in silence lying,
For a summer day was dying,
Casting a last ling'ring brightness—
O'er the hills.

Many doubts and fears perplexed me,
Earthly ills and trials vexed me,
Yet this gentle summer gloaming,
Soothed my troubled breast;
Chased away all dreary sadness,
Brought a hallowed sense of gladness,
And my meditation filled me—
Full of rest.

Long I watched the evening splendour,
With its radiance, soft and tender:
Could I mar the peace of nature,
Brooding everywhere?
No; for He who sends the sorrow,
Will give strength for each to-morrow,
So I cast away the burthen—
Of my care.

Christian, art thou ofttimes weary,
Doth thine earthly lot seem dreary?
Though the path be long and toilsome,
Yet it must be trod.
Day by day supplies are given;
Grace to lead us nearer heaven,
And the journey's ending brings us—
Home to God.

Do not muse on life with sadness,
Nor in worldly joys seek gladness,
Whatsoe'er is pure and lovely—
"Think upon these things."
Listen unto earth's sweet voices,
In its Maker it rejoices,
Soothing balm for troubled spirits
Nature brings.

Isabel Hurrell.

That Little Bow of Blue.

IN FOUR VERSES.

(Reprinted from The Christian).

MY heart was very heavy, for my children cried for bread;
I wept to see my little ones go supperless to bed;
I listened for a footstep, as I'd often done before,
Waiting for a staggering man to stumble through the door:
But his step was firm and steady, and his eye was clear and true,
And on his ragged coat he wore a little bit of blue! Extract.

The Blue Ribbon Army.

A CALL TO CHRISTIANS.

By CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

IN THREE VERSES.

(Reprinted from The Christian).

COME forward, Christians, young and old, come join our ranks to-day!
Oh help us in our fearful fight against the tyrant's sway!
A cruel master he has proved to many in our land,
And now we hope to set them free; oh, lend a helping hand!
We go not forth to rescue them in feeble human strength,
But trusting in our Saviour's power, we hope to win at length,
For He doth bless—ay, grandly bless—each effort that we make;
It matters not how small the deed, if done for his dear sake. Extract.

LAYS OF LOWLY SERVICE.

By GEORGIANA M. TAYLOR.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. Handsomely bound in Morocco, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon says:—"Gladly we give a word of warm praise to this lady's efforts; her verses are true 'heart-breathings,' and so are sure to find an echo in many a loving, listening heart. Moreover, they have about them the 'smell of a field which the Lord hath blessed;' and we are quite prepared to hear that He has been pleased to use them to His glory. We shall rejoice if our good word furthers the sale of these devout versicles; for we understand that the profits are all devoted to the support of an excellent Home for Young Women, under Miss Taylor's charge, which is doing a great and good work among shopwomen and dressmakers in Leamington."

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS NOT SINLESS PERFECTION.

By CHARLES GRAHAM,

Minister of Avenue-road Church, Shepherd's Bush; Author of "The Highway of Holiness," "The Coming Great Revival," "Memoir of Rev. John Graham," &c., &c.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is a l that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

FOURTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"
WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

PHTHISIS.—CASE of W. J. DENNIS, WAINFLEET, LINCOLNSHIRE.

This case was brought under my notice January 26 of last year by Mr. Frederick Chapman, draper, of Wainfleet, the patient being a young man then serving his apprenticeship with him.

On the first visit of W. J. D. to Coombe-lodge, the following particulars were noted in my patients' book: "Consumption in the family. His mother had died of that disease. Some time ago the rupture of a blood vessel took place. Subsequent hæmorrhage had weakened him much, and blood was still mixed with the phlegm. Expectoration yellow and purulent. The patient's breathing was short, and wasting of flesh had begun. Ordered the balsam, with honey and lemon-juice, three times daily, with a night-pill, oil under certain conditions, and a liniment to be used without intermission night and morning."

When the patient came to see me next, in March, he had nearly lost his cough, the secretions had become more regular, and though the breathing and pain were not gone, there was, on the whole, a marked improvement.

The patient got thoroughly well, and Mr. Chapman, speaking of him in a recent letter, dated January 10, 1883, says:—"It was twelve months ago that young Dennis, under my advice, adopted your treatment; and although then losing strength and hope fast, is now a comparatively strong man. His case, being well known, has led to a number of others using your medicine."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS

(With Illustrations).

A Complete and Authentic Account of the Lives, Sufferings, and Triumphant Deaths of Primitive and Protestant Martyrs in all parts of the World.

In One Volume, handsomely bound in Cloth, price 10s. 6d.

At a time like the present, when, in Great Britain, Popery and its evil progeny Ritualism are both insidiously and openly seeking to gain the supremacy, it is necessary to the well-being of our country that the story of "FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS" should be regarded as an essential part of the education of our children.

From these pages we can learn what Popery has been in the past, even in our own land; and from the record of the past we can fairly judge as to what it would be if again in the ascendant.

The issue of the present edition at a low price and in the convenient form of MONTHLY PARTS (16 parts at 6d. each), places this valued book within the reach of almost every one.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

"I pitched my tent," he wrote, "near the barrack wall, not doubting of the protection of the officers and soldiers if there should be occasion. But how vain is the help of man! vast was the multitude that attended; we sang, prayed, and preached, without much molestation, only now and then a few stones and clods of dirt were thrown at me. All being over, I thought to return home the way I came; but, to my great surprise, access was denied, so that I had to go near half a mile from one end of the green to the other, through hundreds and hundreds of papists. Finding me unattended, for a soldier and four Methodist preachers had forsook me and fled, I was left to their mercy; but their mercy, as you may easily guess, was perfect cruelty. Volleys of stones came from all quarters, and every step I took, a fresh stone struck and made me reel backwards and forwards, till I was almost breathless, and all over a gore of blood. My strong beaver hat served me for a skull cap for a while, but at last that was knocked off, and my head left quite defenceless. I received many blows and wounds: one was particularly large, near my temples. I thought of Stephen, and I believed that, like him, I should be dispatched. But providentially, a minister's house lay next door to the green; with great difficulty I staggered to the door, which was kindly opened to me. For a while I continued speechless, expecting every breath to be my last; two or three of the hearers, my friends, got admission, and with weeping eyes washed my wounds, and gave me something to drink. I gradually revived, but soon found the lady of the house desired my absence, for fear the house should be pulled down. What to do I knew not; some advised one thing, some another." BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY

OF TEXTS FOR THE CHILDREN OF GOD.

A Series of Scripture Texts and Meditations for every Day in the Year.

"BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY" has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books, except the Pilgrim's Progress, have been so largely circulated or so widely read. It will surprise many to learn that more than a century and a half has elapsed since the first publication of this valued volume. The mission of the book is not yet over. It is hoped and believed that another generation will derive spiritual instruction from a volume which has been richly blessed to the one now passing away, as well as to generations which have previously "crossed the flood."

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF ELECTRICITY, PARIS, 1881.

The Moniteur Officiel de l'Electricité of October 3rd, 1881, expresses itself in the following terms upon Mr. B. C. Garratt's medical treatment:—

"A celebrated Medical Specialist has sent us a pamphlet, entitled, 'Magnetism and Electricity,' to which we willingly call the attention of those interested. The brochure commences by establishing the complete identity of Magnetism and Electricity, citing the experiments of Faraday, where he obtained Electricity from Magnets, and reciprocally Magnetism from Electricity. The author (Mr. B. Copson Garratt) concludes from this identity of Magnetism and Electricity, that by natural sequence Magnetism must possess therapeutic powers, and, according to him, nothing is more evident than this fact, that Magnetism is not an isolated quality of any one substance, as iron, for example, but a general law—a force affecting all substances and all material relations.

"There is, according to Mr. Garratt, one general law of creation—viz., a tendency to maintain a balance of forces; storms, hurricanes, and earthquakes, are only Nature's efforts to re-establish equilibrium, and so the human system, disturbed by an unequal distribution of nervous forces, finds in Odo-Magnetism an equalising influence.

"Nature and Art have now enabled Mr. Garratt to apply this agent with such satisfactory results that the penetrating power, evenness of flow, and continuity of Magnetic force, are so well balanced as to restore and maintain a healthy equilibrium in the midst of disturbing influences. This is strikingly illustrated by the facts cited of patients who have not been subject to sea-sickness since they used this subtle force.

"After explaining the principles of its Magnetic and therapeutic action, this practical scientist compares, side by side, Magnetic and Electric, or Galvanic action on the body. He remarks that in Magnetic treatment a natural force is used, whil in Galvanism an artificial stimulant is emp yed, spasmodic and uncertain in action, also asily exhausted. Under the Magnetic metho a patient is free from disagreeable exp iences, because Magnetism is silent and almo imperceptible in its action, like other beneficent forces of Nature.

"Mr. Garratt's special system of treatment consists in the application of aura or currents, obtained from permanent Magnets, enclosed in comfortable garments, energising nerve centres and vital organs simultaneously. Specimens of Magnetic appliances used in connection with this treatment were exhibited in Class 10, Medical, at the International Exhibition of Electricity in Paris. The extreme lightness and flexibility of the garments employed permit the concentration of a high degree of power on any part without the least inconvenience or objectionable weight. The magnets also possess the merit of retaining their powers indefinitely. We have explained as clearly as possible, from Mr. Garratt's pamphlet, his mode of treatment; and we will add, in conclusion, that all persons desirous of consulting him may do so gratuitously."

He will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

THE MINISTRY FOR THE TIMES.

TO a very great extent the ministry must be held responsible for the prevailing tone and spirit of the Churches in reference to theological truth. The old adage, "Like priest, like people," is not without foundation in fact. An earnest ministry must, with God's blessing (which it is sure to have), go far to produce an earnest Church, while a tame and lukewarm minister cannot fail to create deadness and indifference in those who hear him.

It is a fact in which we find no little cause for thankfulness and joy, that in all the Evangelical sections of the Church of Christ to-day there are not a few notable examples of ministerial fidelity, earnestness, and power. Such ministers are by the great Head of the Church truly "clothed with salvation," and go forth, it may be often with weeping, "bearing the precious seed," yet sure of returning "bringing their sheaves with them." On the other hand, there are many whose trumpet gives no certain sound, whose testimony fails to reach the heart, however it may tickle the ear or inform the intellect. If they do not teach positive error yet they fail to assert positive truth; so they do not produce spiritual results, or help to build up the faith of those who receive the word at their lips. As a consequence, spiritual truth is nearly lost sight of in many quarters, theology is relegated to a by-gone age, and counted unworthy of present concern, while much laxity of spiritual discipline in Church and home, in heart and life is engendered.

In order to a revived Church we need a revived ministry, such an one as shall be in accordance, out and out, with the grand Apostle's words, "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." The ministry needed for times like these, and the one craved by multitudes of hearers, is a ministry fashioned after the model of Bunyan's well-known picture: "It had eyes lifted up to heaven, the best of books in his hand, the law of truth was in his lips, the world was behind his back. It stood as if it pleaded with men, and a crown of gold did hang over its head." Such men, as Mr. Interpreter declared "can beget children, travail in birth with children, and nurse them themselves when they are born." We believe his advice to be sound when he says to the Christian pilgrim, "This is the only man whom the Lord of the place whither thou art going hath authorised to be thy guide in all difficult places thou mayest meet with in the way." If the immortal Dreamer's picture be correct, and we are sure it is drawn from Scripture to the life, then—

First of all, we need a spiritual ministry in these days. "Eyes lifted up to heaven, the world behind his back." This is the attitude of the true and the successful servant of Christ. The pulpit is not to serve the purpose of political faction, or even of philosophical disquisitions and oratorical displays. The pastor and the preacher aim at higher ends than this world knows or can by any means secure. The souls of men, already absorbed throughout the week with worldly things, need lifting into higher spheres, and directing to purer themes, when they are within the courts of the Lord's house. It is the minister's high and holy work to help in leading men into the ways of God, into the green pastures of the Good Shepherd's fold, and so to bring them as near as may be to the gate of heaven. But, for this the minister himself must be spiritual, he must "dwell on high," he must be "filled with the Spirit," he must "abide in the secret place of the Most High" yea, must realise in deed and truth the Apostolic motto, "For me to live is Christ." Only as he is in conscious contact with the Divine Spirit can his ministry be accompanied with the needful unction and power to make it effectual in securing its great end.

2. The ministry must be pre-eminently Biblical in its tone. "The best of books was in his hand." The servant of Christ must not be afraid or ashamed to be known as a man of one Book; he will not shun to make it the only rule of his faith and practice. If he does this he cannot but be dogmatic in much of his teaching. The Bible knows nothing of negative theology, or of subtle hypotheses, framed to evade definiteness and distinctness of belief. Its great truths are based upon facts which are to be regarded as beyond dispute. The Incarnation, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of Christ are not matters for doubtful disputation, but uncontrovertible facts, from which came forth as their natural sequence the glorious doctrines of the Gospel of God.

To quote from Mr. Binney's well-known sermon on "The Creed of St. Paul,"—"Our religion rests upon facts, especially upon the great fact of a personal Redeemer, who 'died for our sins.' We are bound down to the testimony of Scripture concerning Him. It is not our province, nor ought to be our ambition—in the Church, and in relation to religious truth—to be great thinkers, inventors, and masters of the original and the new. We are pupils, learners, the readers and students of a Book which speaks with authority. Our subject ought to be to have our thoughts just where God's thoughts are, as He has set them forth in his own Word." Never was it more needful than now that, disclaiming the theories and speculations of men, the ministry should just take its stand upon the inspired Word, and declare boldly the whole counsel of God.

> "It is the index to eternity:
> Nor can he miss of endless bliss
> Who takes this chart to steer his voyage by;
> Nor can he be mistook
> Who speaketh by this Book."

"To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

3. The ministry must also be practical in its tone: "The law of truth was in his lips." In the current number of The Catholic Presbyterian there is an article of much value by Dr. Morris, of America, on "Ethical Preaching." It calls attention to the really close connection there is between theology and morality, doctrine and practice, and expresses regret that there should ever be a divorcement between them on the part of the pulpit. There is, doubtless, a lack of "that good old thing we call conscience," and that, "even among Christians whose orthodoxy is as clean and stiff as the ruff of an old ecclesiastic;" and it is true also that among impenitent hearers "there seems to be nothing else they so much need as the restoration of conscience as a dominating force in their personal life. Probably this is largely due, as the writer suggests, to "the lack of sound, earnest, continuous discussion of the well-known principles of Christian morality in our pulpits." If so, then the ministry needs to be aroused to the solemn responsibility which rests upon it to practically as well as doctrinally set forth the will of God. Moral and social evils alike are repugnant to the spirit of the Gospel, and while it is the preacher's duty to proclaim Christ the substitute and Saviour of men, to point to the Cross as the sinner's refuge and place of pardon, it is his also to "rebuke, reprove, and exhort with all long-suffering," remembering that

> "The Cross, once seen, is death to every vice."

"Cry aloud, spare not: lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew My people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins."

4. Once more, the ministry must be pleading in its tone. As "ambassadors for Christ, as though God were entreating" by them, are ministers to "beseech men on behalf of Christ to be reconciled to God." Sometimes, as melted by the thought of "the tender mercies of God," and at other times as knowing "the terror of the Lord;" sometimes as speaking from the glorious heights, and rejoicing in the sweet prospects of celestial bliss; at others as stirred by the fearful thought of everlasting woe, and brought face to face with the stern and bitter consequences of final impenitence and unbelief; but always as filled with tenderness, and constrained by the love of Christ, they are to plead with men. An old Scotch woman said, after hearing McCheyne preach on one occasion, "He preached as if he were a dyin' to have us converted!" Ah! yes, so must we preach, if we are to faithfully represent our Master, or deeply move the hearts of our hearers.

"But who is sufficient for these things?" The reply is at hand: "Our sufficiency is of God." Only let our hearts be fired with the Saviour's love, our whole being saturated with the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and we shall go forth mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; souls shall be won to Christ, and the Church, feeling the force of an intelligent ministry animated by the Spirit of God, shall respond and say, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation." And for the faithful minister the crown of gold ere long shall be no longer hanging over his head, but placed upon his brow by the loving Saviour's hand.

FISHERS ON THE IRISH COAST.

DEAR SIR,—A large number of fishermen from various parts of the United Kingdom are assembling here to prosecute the spring mackerel fishery. Many of these are decided Christians, others are very well disposed, while the remainder may be benefited by what we are about to try in their behalf, viz., to open a reading-room for any evenings when from bad weather or other causes they cannot go to sea; Bible classes for the Lord's day, and special meetings as may be found desirable. I need scarcely tell your readers that Protestants are but few here, and that any books, periodicals, papers, tracts, &c, would be a great help to us. All parcels received will be acknowledged, if desired, by yours truly,

W. T. QUIGLEY.

A EUROPEAN PLAGUE SPOT.—A continental correspondent of The Times writes:—"Monte Carlo is responsible for two more suicides. A commercial traveller, from Lyons, lost 8000f. which he had received for his employer at Lyons. The Casino managers, to whom he stated his case, refused to do anything to extricate him from the difficulty, whereupon he killed himself as the only escape from prosecution. Count Martini has been driven to commit a like act by heavy losses sustained at the gaming-tables. Even suicide will have an additional horror if, as is stated, the proprietors of a great waxwork exhibition intend to procure photographs of Monte Carlo victims, and to show waxwork representations of them."

THE KING IN HIS GLORY.

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS ON ISAIAH VI.

By CHARLES GRAHAM,

Of Avenue-road Church, Shepherd's Bush.

THE burden of this prophecy was laid on Isaiah in the year that King Uzziah died. Uzziah died a leper, smitten of God for impiously intruding into the priest's office and attempting to burn incense in the holy place. His leprosy was symbolic of the state of his nation.

The cry of the seraphim—"Holy, holy, holy! is the Lord God of hosts! The whole earth is full of his glory,"—shows this prevision to be prophetic. The earth at present has Satan for its god, and is under his rule; but the day is at hand when the glory of God, as here predicted, will fill it.

The scene of this vision is the Temple in Jerusalem; but everything is presented to the prophet on a grand scale; the throne—the mercy-seat—is "high and lifted up"; and the train—the robe of the Divine glory—fills the Temple. Seraphim attend the great king. Their name, either from their brightness, or the intensity of their love, or from both, means "the burning ones." There seems to be no real difference between them and the cherubim of Ezekiel and Revelation.

Each seraph, as seen by the prophet, had six wings. As indicative of inability to gaze on the greatness of the glory, and possibly also of the suppression of what in us would be irreverent curiosity, each with two wings covered his face; and, in token of humility and the unworthiness of his service, with two also he covered his feet; and with two he kept hovering and ready to obey the commands of his King.

The ascription of praise by the seraphim is threefold: "Holy, holy, holy! is the Lord God of hosts!" We have here, what subsequently comes out more fully, an indication of the Trinity of the persons in the Godhead. In the inquiry of verse 8, "Whom shall I send?" we have the unity of Godhead: in the question, "Who will go for us?" we have the Trinity. No believer will question that the Father is here in his glory. But the Son is here also. Referring to the commission of judgment given on this occasion to the prophet, the Apostle John tells us that it was Jesus who filled the throne: "These things said Isaiah when he saw his glory, and spake of Him" (John xii. 39—41). That we have the Holy Spirit here also, by whom the prophet speaks, the Apostle Paul tells us in Acts xxviii. 25—28: "Well spake the Holy Spirit by Isaiah the prophet unto our fathers, saying, Go unto this people and say, Hearing ye will hear, and ye will not understand," &c.

It is, then, Christ in his own glory and the glory of the Father, endued with all the gifts and power of the Holy Spirit for his millennial rule, who is here presented to us (See Isa. xi. 2).

At the cry of the seraphim "the foundations of the thresholds" are shaken (see Heb.) This indicates the passing away of the legal system, in order that that which in its nature is permanent, and cannot be shaken, may be introduced (compare Heb. xii. 27, 28).

Not only were the foundations of the thresholds shaken, but the whole house was filled with smoke. This suggests to us the Divine manifestation on Sinai. Smoke is the effect of combustion, or of fire in a state of activity. In the millennial kingdom swift judgment will come upon all high-handed iniquity. When the Theocracy was first set up in Israel, the Sabbath-breaker and the blasphemer were stoned; Nadab and Abihu, Korah and his confederates, were destroyed by fire, and Dathan and Abiram were swallowed up by an earthquake. So swift and terrible will be the judgment on open transgressors in the millennial age, every daring sinner shall die by cherem or anathema (Isa. lxv. 20). It is thus also, in the end of the thousand years, we see Gog and his multitudes destroyed by fire from heaven (Rev. xx.)

The vision of the glory of the Lord and the worship of the seraphim force the prophet to exclaim, "Woe is me, for I am undone! Because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell among a people of unclean lips." He that utters this is not an open sinner, but a holy prophet, a saint. The presence of the Divine holiness, as in the case of Job, brings out the sin which had lain concealed in his heart. In that presence we are ever humbled and laid in the dust.

> "I loathe myself when God I see,
> And into nothing fall."

But this humbling is the preparation for true exaltation. Isaiah's confession brings immediate forgiveness and cleansing. A seraph flies, and with the tongs of the altar applies a live coal to his lips, uttering the words, "Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." That coal had fed upon sacrifice, and was saturated with its virtue. It is the emblem of the Holy Spirit applying the sacrifice of Christ to our consciences.

The cleansing of the prophet is for more than the bliss of his own purity and peace. Those cleansed lips are now to be used by the Lord.

The seraphim are silent, and the King Himself speaks. His questions are the result of Divine consultation, "Whom shall I send? and who will go for us?" Behold, he who trembled when he heard the seraphim, now hears the voice of the Lord Himself, and is undismayed. More than this, he is now conscious of fitness to be the Lord's messenger, and replies, "Here am I, send me." It is the sense of cleansing, by the blood and Spirit of Christ, which alone prepares us for service, and awakens that love which gives us the willing mind to serve.

The prophet has now the burden of the Lord laid upon him, and it is heavy. "Go," says the Lord, "and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed." Determined not to see, they had shut their eyes, and now God seals them in darkness! They had closed their ears, and said, "We will not hear," and God now says, "Ye shall not."

The prophet is loyal to God, but full of pity for his nation. In the New Testament sense of the word, he is a priest as well as a prophet, and makes intercession for those on whom he pronounces judgment. He does not seek to change the purpose of God; but his yearning heart cries, "Lord, how long?" that is, how long are the dulness of heart, the blindness, and deafness of the nation to continue? The answer is, "Until the cities are wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate."

Such is the state of Palestine at this hour: its people are expatriated, its cities wasted, its land desolate, trodden down by the Gentiles. But it is not to be so always: a tenth, that is, of Judah in the first instance, is to return, and to be eaten, or "burned." Of this period the prophet Zechariah says, "It shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried; they shall call on My name, and I will hear them; I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The Lord is my God" (Zech. xiii. 8, 9).

This third part is the holy seed which shall be as the teil tree (the terebinth) and the oak. Just as the foliage of these trees drops off at the approach of the winter, and leaves them apparently dead, so shall the wind of God's judgment remove the ungodly of the nation; then shall Israel "blossom and bud, and fill the world with fruit."

This prophet of judgment becomes afterwards the most eminent of all the prophets of grace. To this peeled and scattered nation he is commissioned to say, "Thy people shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of My planting, the work of My hands, that I may be glorified" (Isa. lx. 21).

God's purpose is through Israel to bless the world. Israel's restoration will be as life from the dead to the Gentile nations (Rom. xi. 15). As we long for that consummation let us pray for the hour of Israel's redemption. Meantime, the Lord is gathering out from among the Gentiles a people for his name. In that gathering we are his appointed instruments, and the fitness of the prophet must be ours. Just as the live coal from the altar cleansed his lips, and set his heart on fire, so must the blood and Spirit of Christ cleanse us, and fire us with zeal for his glory.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN.

ON Monday week an interesting series of meetings were closed in the Homes of the London Female Preventive and Reformatory Institution. Some years ago a lady bequeathed a sum of money, and directed that the interest should be appropriated in giving rewards to former inmates who conduct themselves satisfactorily in service. The committee have not limited rewards to the amount of the bequest, but they have extended it with great advantage to the work. This year more than 300 books have been applied for by former inmates who were known to be doing well. Of course many, after a time, cannot be traced. For obvious reasons they are anxious to conceal a discreditable page in the history of their life.

Of those who applied for reward books the majority report themselves as regular attendants at public worship, and amongst them are some who give evidence of true conversion. No intoxicating drinks are allowed to inmates during their probation in the Homes, except under medical direction, and it is a remarkable fact that intoxicants are not ordered once in a year throughout the establishments. It is encouraging to note that a very large proportion of former inmates have donned the blue ribbon.

About one-third are depositors in savings banks, a habit much encouraged in order to develope thrift. Many have taken collecting bags that they may, in their turn, help forward the work. Mr. George Williams, Mr. Leland Noel, Mr. Nicholls, and Mr. Thomas presided at the different meetings. Mrs. Holt Yates distributed the reward books at the Home at Milton House.

☞ We omitted to state in our last issue that the admirable sermon on "The Atonement," by Rev. H. Monod, Marseilles, was extracted from "The Foreign Protestant Pulpit," First Series, published by Mr. R. D. Dickinson, Farringdon-street, E.C.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

CHAP. XI.—(Concluded)

THE great temperance movement is very helpful to the Gospel, and may be yet more widely utilised as a faithful ally. The Church desires to spend her powers in conflict with other evils which are rampant and threatening, but she cannot pass the drink evil to do this. It is a fortress that cannot be masked. It has to be besieged, undermined, and stormed. From it press forth the influences which create a mysterious cloud over many a home; which cause the married women, young and old, in working class families to combine for purposes of dissipation; which cause the remark that means so much to be frequently made, "Poor little children! it's a good thing for them that their mother has died;" which gives many a life the appearance of a "Rose Cottage," or "Laurel Villa," whose surrounding loveliness and verdure have been vanished or killed by the smoke and grime of the growing city.

Indulgence in strong drink is in cases almost numberless the one barrier between the soul and its Saviour. Turn the glass out and the Bible comes in. This wickedness is in firm agreement with all the rest of this world's dark creations. Giant Despair has but one wife, Giant Drink has many. As was said of Night, so, with equal truth, may it be said of this deadly traffic—

"Teeming evils thrive beneath thy shade."

The national drink bill cannot be put into figures. Useful inventions are being prevented, rising geniuses are constantly being crushed, and the negative loss through the consumption of fermented and alcoholic fluids is almost as great as is the positive.

The crusade against this formidable enemy is being valiantly urged. The fact is become more and more evident that those who are right on this social question are not likely to be wrong in their convictions as to any other questions, whether social or religious. No one can go to a great Temperance meeting without being struck with the look of earnest purpose on the faces round him. Commentators are speaking plainly; even secular poets are showing signs of changing sides.

Without a doubt the supporters of this movement have still something to learn. In some places the border line between right and wrong in vocal and musical performances has yet to be found. If amateur theatricals and acting in character are to be forwarded by temperance workers, they are really playing into the hands of the theatres, and as the theatres in their turn play into the hands of the drink demon, those who arrange such exhibitions are really thwarting their own design.

But incalculable good has been done. From many Lancashire towns comes the testimony, "Every Church which has shown real sympathy with the Blue Ribbon movement has had its membership replenished with reclaimed drunkards and their wives."

There is a wise tendency, in all attempts to counteract intemperance, to show how much human physiology is opposed to the reception of these unhealthy stimulants, and the value of this argument our young people are becoming increasingly competent to discern; but with this is conjoined a holding up of Christ which is, in the highest degree, helpful to Evangelical religion. One grave modern peril is that of having too many Church committees but, as things are, every Christian community should find room for a Committee in some shape or other for the prosecution of the cause of Gospel Temperance. And if those who give signatures to the pledge are sought after by loving Christians they will also give their souls to God. There is afterwards a probability that they will become the best workers. The experience of the writer has been that if, in Evangelism, much exposure and self-sacrifice have been needed, the Temperance men are ever to the fore. Countless thousands can be reached by a Temperance Mission who are not easily approached by ordinary religious agencies, and it is for the godly to hang about the skirts of the fight between the forces of drink and sobriety, gathering the spoils for the kingdom of heaven. There is that the strictly pious will not give their aid to social and sanitary reforms. School boards have been able hitherto to command the services of some of the best men and women, but with town councils, local boards, and kindred corporations, the case is different. The godly seem to be afraid of the degeneracy of their own life in Christ if they go to the council-chamber or board-room. There is some ground for this fear, as many living examples prove. But are the bodies which hold so many sanitary and social matters in their hands to be composed of material extraneous to the Churches? If Christians occupy positions of importance in social affairs they will be all the more safely conducted. How can righteousness exalt the nation, if the righteous shrink from its select assemblies, and leave them to publicans, parvenus, and demagogues?

The cause of God is the cause of trade-honesty, of large-heartedness, of chastity, and of every branch of every virtue; of civilisation, brotherhood, freedom, and sanctified astuteness: of refinement, domestic happiness, political prosperity, and every speciesof rightness and fitness. Reforms in the homes that make up society are highly helpful to the Gospel. Thrift and cleanliness are not to be despised. Apostolical piety has a quarrel with dust and cobwebs, feverous streets, and wanton luxury. No Church ought to resolve itself into a sanitary association, but every Church ought somehow to help such associations.

No Church member ought to allow the social to monopolise him, but each one can do something, if only a little, to advance social reform. We should not dream of putting the educational in the place of the religious any more than we should dream of imitating those village fathers who, in order to procure pure water, resolved to whitewash the village pump; but the educational in schools for orphans and for waifs and strays, the social in cocoa-rooms, the sanitary in health committees and cookery-classes, ought to receive the thoughtful attention of at least a portion of the general body of workers. It is well-nigh impossible to succeed in Christian work among the suffering poor unless we couple with it sundry improvements in their surroundings. The scientific owes much to the religious, and, if allowed, will do much to repay the debt. A religion whose lines are too narrow to admit that wholesome natural conditions may be used as ladders to the Infinite, is crippled by mistaken notions as to religious duty.

THE PRESS

may be regarded as a side-help of high utility. The Church has not yet made herself fully aware of the services which a consecrated Press may render.

Our whole system of tract provision should come under revision.

Tracts are ceasing to strike as they did. Secular competition is too severe for them, and they suffer by comparison. People are getting used to their form and matter. We require something more sparkling and racy, with more profuse and attractive illustrations—the more so, as the very grocer's shop is outstripping us with its circulars and almanacks. Quaint or pathetic scenes, well conceived and highly-coloured, will "take" as illustrative pictures, and there is much in real life which may be wisely retailed in tract form. By all means let everything be tried, or how can we expect the blessing of the Spirit of Truth? Attention once made sure of, smart, pungent sayings, well-told anecdotes, will find lodgment in many a working-man and Sabbath-scholar.

And most of our countrymen and women are unfamiliar with the Evidences. Catechisms may be good, but the parrot-like repetition of their contents does not get them far down into the soul. A small hand-book of Christian evidences, condensed, simplified, pointed, would be a great boon. But where is the genius who can write such a book? He is perhaps hiding somewhere among the baggage of the Lord's army. Oh that the Disposer of events would drive him out of his retirement, and set him to his work! Such a little volume as this would make havoc of suspicions and allegations against Christianity, and would confirm the faith of the doubting ones.

Meanwhile we shall be more than justified in using in behalf of Christ every mentionable side-help, remembering as we do that "the shields of the earth belong unto God."

A WORD TO CHURCHES.

MR. ROBERT ADCOCK, Bracondale, Norwich, writes to The Eastern Daily Press to "urge upon ministers, office-bearers, and private members of Churches the importance of definite and special evangelistic services, the necessity for which is more generally admitted than was formerly the case, but which has not at present reached a very advanced stage of development. Mr. Spurgeon's happy idea of periodical services with all seats free, and all seatholders enlisted in the enterprise of filling their own seats with other occupants, has found many imitators, and I have never heard of a minister who (having adopted it) has found any but gratifying results.

"I plead, however, for a much wider extension of the principle, and I think every healthy Church might with advantage venture upon an occasional week of evangelistic services, conducted (under the control and supervision of the minister) by some man of God of known and recognised ability, to 'do the work of an evangelist.' For an account of such an effort I would refer any who may wish to inquire into the matter to a report in THE CHRISTIAN, March 8, of a visit of Mr. Opie Rodway to Bournemouth, on the invitation of the Rev. Robert Colman, pastor of a Baptist Church there. Mr. Rodway's addresses, we are told, resulted in much blessing; 'secret disciples were led to avow with boldness their discipleship, backsliders were reclaimed, and many who had been halting between two opinions were led to decision.'

"Now, what pastor would not welcome any means which led to such issues? and if my letter should lead any to try the experiment it will not have been written in vain. All denominations might embark upon such occasional campaigns, and thus all classes of hearers might be reached. The Church of England (I need scarcely say I allude to the evangelical section) is in the van of this onward movement. All honour to any organisation which has for its object the evangelisation of the people. By the way, why do not more of our local clergy avail themselves of means so easily within their reach? Suitable Mission preachers can always be procured on application at the office of the Church of England Parochial Mission, 21, John-street, Adelphi, W.C."

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—1.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

DEAR READER,—Holiness is the palace wherein dwelleth the high King of heaven. Bethink thee of thyself—poor, ignorant, sinful. Remember that thou hast no warrant at this door but by the King's grace. Put on thee thy court robes, and draw near in lowly reverence, expecting to meet with Him.

Thou hast no key to unlock the palace door, for it openeth only from within. Yet, fear not. The King is ever gracious. Ask, and He shall give thee permission to enter. Seek, and ye shall find. Knock, and the King Himself shall open the door and bid thee welcome.

THE KING'S COMMAND.

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" (Matt. v. 48).

At the outset, here is "perfection." Perfection taught, perfection encouraged, perfection commanded. The Son of God comes down from heaven to teach us what we should be; and He bids us be perfect.

Let us look this full in the face. For whilst on the part of some there is an earnest seeking after the light, others get rid of the whole subject with a flippant or a fierce contempt: "Oh, I don't believe in 'perfection!'"

May not this be an awful and even a blasphemous thing to say? You may not believe in this or that man's way of explaining it. You may differ from everybody's view of the subject. But perfection, as it stands here, is not part of any human creed,—it is the command of God. Our opinion about it cannot get rid of the word. Here, in its majestic authority, it abideth for ever. But we may bring upon ourselves the penalty of those who neglect the commandment; perhaps even the greater penalty of those who reject it; or, possibly, the penalty of those who "despise" the word of God.

But beside these are others, very different—earnest and holy people, who have a conscious shrinking from anything that hints at the possibility of perfection. It is to them inseparable from a perilous tendency to spiritual pride, that most miserable and loathsome of all pride. Certainly none of us would like to hear a man say of himself, "I am perfect." With such a man our terms would be strictly cash; he is not the man to have credit.

Yet here is the word of the Lord, and we cannot afford to hold any view which rejects or weakens any utterance of his. Let us try, honestly and earnestly, to get at the meaning of this Scripture, praying for light to see, and grace to be, that which the Master commands.

To whom are the words spoken?

They are not meant for all. The answer is very plainly given. "And seeing the multitude, He went up into a mountain; and when He was set, his disciples came unto Him, and He opened his mouth, and taught them, saying . . . . Be ye therefore perfect." The words are for his disciples, and for them only.

This is by no means the doctrine with which Christ meets all hearers. In the strong and almost terrible words of this Sermon on the Mount, He warns us against casting pearls before swine, or giving that which is holy to dogs. We are forbidden to take our treasures to those whom they cannot enrich, or our holy things to those who cannot be blest by them. When the Great Teacher stood in Jerusalem, the stronghold of the Scribes and the Pharisees, He did not bid them be perfect. It was exactly what they thought they were—perfect in their prayers, and their almsgiving, and their robes, and their phylacteries. To them He pours forth the terrible denunciation, "Woe unto you, hypocrites! Woe unto you, blind guides! Ye serpents! Ye generation of vipers! How shall ye escape the damnation of hell?"

At another time there came unto Him the publicans and sinners for to hear Him. He did not bid them be perfect—that could only have discouraged them, almost mocked them. Jesus meets them with the gracious and beautiful stories of the Lost Sheep, the Lost Piece of Money, and the Prodigal Son.

"His disciples came unto Him." They knew Him. They loved and trusted Him. They sat at his feet and looked into his face, and listened wondering at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And to them He said, "Be ye perfect." These words, like the whole Sermon on the Mount, require that we come in the disciple-spirit. Not as theorists only; not as curious critics; but as simple, earnest, loving followers of the Lord Jesus. It may be that we come full of mistakes as they were; full of prejudices; with a great many things to learn and a great many things to unlearn—yet coming with boldness, that we may learn of Him.

Here is Christ's idea of his holy religion. This is what it is to do for us: It is to make us like God. This is the aim and purpose of it all.

What is our idea of religion? Very much, one might almost say everything, depends upon the answer. The prayers we offer, the sins we confess, the standard by which we measure ourselves, the aim and effort of the daily life, all depend upon our thought of what religion is and what it is for.

There is an idea still lingering amongst some that religion is in doing the best we can, and God will do the rest. We must not do anything very outrageous—must not steal or lie, that is, any more than other people do, and then we need not fear. Now, all of us are prepared to be down heavily on such a view of religion as that. Such an one has neither part nor lot in the matter. There may be exceptions, but, generally speaking, such a man dare not look into the Bible honestly and find out what the will of God is. He dare not ask himself earnestly what is the meaning of the Cross. He dare not let his thoughts go on to meet the great white throne where there sitteth the Judge of the whole earth. For such an one the only comfort is to get away from all these uncomfortable things as far as he can.

But amongst many of those who would most zealously repudiate such a false thought of religion, there is an idea a hundredfold more common, and perhaps a hundredfold more mischievous: That the death of the Lord Jesus has provided for us an easy escape from the punishment of sin.

Christ has died for us, and now we are saved—from what? From hell. We may be cross, uncharitable, envious, spiteful, but we believe Christ died for us, so of course we are saved.

We may be given perhaps to exaggeration, over-colouring, under-colouring, to suit our prejudice or convenience—but it is all right—we believe that Christ died for us.

We may be eager after gain, as eager as any man of the world; we may be keen and hard at a bargain; swift to take advantage of ignorance or innocence; but there comes in the comfortable explanation, "Of course, you know, we don't pretend to be perfect, but we believe that Christ died for sinners, the Just for the unjust."

Now set these two ideas of religion side by side. The old idea of doing the best you can is a purer, truer, better doctrine than this: That Christ came into the world for this one thing—to make it easy for us to be forgiven; that all the great love of God, and the life and death of Christ, and all the round of religious service, is for this one end and purpose—to save us from hell; Christ has taken away the penalty of sin—never mind about its power! Christ has borne the curse of sin; but the source and cause of it is left.

Surely it were better Christ had never come at all. This is to make Him a very cloak and minister of sin. He who brings down Christ's holy religion to such a level can never have looked with any care into the Scriptures; he can never have seen the real horror of sin. He can never have learnt the meaning of the Cross. This is to make the Cross of Christ of none effect—and worse. Surely it was such as these who stirred Paul's soul to indignant grief so that he could only speak of them with tears. "For many walk of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the Cross of Christ."

What saith the Scripture? "His name shall be called Jesus, for He shall save his people from their sins." "Christ loved the Church, and gave Himself for it." Why? That He might save it from the future punishment of sin? No. That He might sanctify and cleanse it by the washing of water with the Word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy, and without blemish.

We lift our eyes to Calvary and think, "It is finished; my debt is paid; the law is satisfied." That is true—blessedly true. But though salvation begin there, it cannot end there. The death of the Saviour is not a great legal transaction outside me, which was finished long ago. Paul leads us up the hill again, and points us to the Cross. I am crucified with Christ. Paul himself hangs there, hands and feet yielded up to the crucifixion, and the old life of sin and self dead and buried with Christ.

What! has the glorious Son of God died that I may find a light and ready excuse for my self-indulgence? that I may live an indolent, easy-going life? Again the grip of the Apostle's hand is upon us. Again he hurries up to that great scene of Calvary. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."

What! has Christ died to save me from hell, and now I can be eager for the world, and its honours, and its gain, and its coveted positions of eminence, even as others? Once more Paul takes us up in sight of the crucified Saviour, and in an outburst of passionate protest and entreaty cries, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." To know Christ is this—we dare not make it less than this—to know the power of God in us overcoming sin, and self, and the world. To know Christ is to be in the blessed mystery of oneness with Him, crucified with Him, buried with Him, risen with Him in newness of life, seated together with Him in the heavenly places. In one word, it is gathered up in this command, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

UNANSWERED PRAYER.

A STUDY FROM THE GOSPELS.

MAY I add a few words to the testimony of a letter which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN on this subject a few weeks ago? I have also found relief in passing through the trial of unanswered prayer by studying closely the dealings of our Lord when on earth. It is to be remarked that while He disregarded no real need, yet He did deny many petitions. In going over these minutely I have got great help to the understanding of James iv. 3, and 1 John v. 14. For they were all of them not "according to his will," not in the sense of a secret purpose, but in the sense that either the object was not lawful, or the motive was wrong, or that they involved some deep misapprehension of the purpose of God which Jesus was even then seeking to reveal.

(1) We have selfish prayers. "Send the multitudes away." "Send her away, for she crieth after us." "Speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me." "Grant that my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left."

(2) Prayers which showed some deep misapprehension of spiritual things, as Peter's, "Pity thyself, Lord;" the "Call down fire from heaven," of James and John; the "Carest thou not that my sister hath left me to serve alone—bid her therefore that she help me," of Martha; "His mother and his brethren, standing without, sent unto Him, calling Him." These were all met by rebuke more or less severe, while in other instances the ignorance was graciously and gently cleared up. As when Peter prayed, "Not my feet only but also my hands and my head;" and Philip, "Show us the Father, and it sufficeth us."

(3) Next we have what I may call bewildered prayers. "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." "Let us build three tabernacles, one for Thee, one for Moses, and one for Elias, for he wist not what he said." And the Lord in love uses such prayers, "As a foolishness, giving no answer."

(4) Dishonest prayers. The Lord was over and over again asked for a sign, and He as constantly refused. Why? Because those who asked really wished an excuse for not being convinced. I do not think the demand of scientific sceptics in our day for a prayer-test is much more likely to succeed! Yet John the Baptist's honest inquiry was answered by signs, and even Thomas's unbelieving wish to believe was met by evidence. The requests in Luke ix. 59–61, must also have been mere excuses for indecision, for they are the only instances in which the Lord even appears to treat natural affection harshly.

(5) We may, perhaps, mention last, though not properly prayers, a number of captious and curious questions which the Lord would not answer. The desire of the disciples to know the times and the seasons. "Are there few that be saved?" "Lord, and what shall this man do?" "By what authority doest thou these things?" "What is truth?" These might be multiplied endlessly, for the Lord never would gratify simple curiosity.

One loving, earnest prayer we must add to the list of the "refused." It occurs in the strange history of the demoniac of Gadara. Here we have four petitions, two of them by the devils. "Torment me not," and "Suffer us to go into the swine," which are granted. The next that of the Gadarenes, "Depart"—granted also! Lastly, the healed man humbly asks "to be with Him," and, to our astonishment, is refused! We can easily guess why; and we know that that man's prayer, like so many of our own, but waited for eternity to be answered. It is curious, however, that this is the only instance of the long-deferred answer which we know so well about.

But in numberless cases we find a shorter delay. I need not go over the instances, they are so familiar. Most of them were delays of the Lord's own planning, for the trial of faith. Some were caused by the unsympathising multitude; and some, alas! by the unsympathising or unbelieving disciples. It was the unbelief of disciples that caused the despairing father of the demoniac boy to cry out, "If Thou canst do anything, have compassion on us." And so we often hinder each other still.

Now, some lessons seem to come out very clearly from all this:—

(1) It is very likely that we may make mistakes in our prayers, as did the disciples; and in that case the refusal to answer is a blessing. The Gadarenes prayed "Depart," and Christ departed. Peter prayed "Depart," and He did not depart, because He knew Peter in his heart did not mean it. The Lord answers the desire of the heart rather than the words of the lips.

(2) We may learn the Lord's comparative estimate of the value of those things which we desire. We often class all our desires together as "earthly," except those which concern directly God and his kingdom, and then say to ourselves that the Lord has not promised to grant "earthly blessings." Now I find that among these earthly things the Lord has made a very great distinction. How was it that He always granted healing, whether for the petitioner himself or for a friend? How was it that He never gave wealth or fame nor any of the "good things of this life"? Is it not that money, greatness, honour from men, are not worthy to be desired? We were never made for such things, but we were made to love and be loved. We were not made for pain and sickness; for separation from those we love. We were not made to see our children or our friends suffer without suffering with them. The Lord teaches no stoicism; pain and bereavement are owned by Him to be real evils; so is poverty when it means want of daily bread. Therefore we pray for daily bread; therefore we pray to be delivered from all evil of every kind. There is no sin in craving for deliverance; all the Lord asks of us is to wait his time.

But there is a sin in craving for superfluity, for things which minister not to our wants, but to our fancies and pride. The sin which is called idolatry in the Bible is coveteousness, and not the love of parent or child. I think many tender-hearted Christians make a mistake here, and not realising that it is only the loving "More than Me" that is forbidden, they spend their lives in constant fear of "idolising" those dear ones whom God has given them.

Christ told the man who asked for an inheritance, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." But he never told those weeping ones at Bethany, "Your life consists not in the brother you have lost." I sometimes wonder He did not. He might have said, "You have Me; my personal presence and friendship; why do you weep for Lazarus? How can there be a blank where I am?" I think most of us would have argued thus. But no such word did the Lord say; only, "Thy brother shall rise again."

(3) We have only two instances of the Father's decree being adduced as a reason, but both are in connection with unlawful desires—one in reference to the times and the seasons, the other to the daring request of James and John. It is as if He would have said, "You wish to be great! by that you show that at present at least you are utterly unfit for greatness; in this matter you have nothing to do but to accept the Father's appointment."

The inference naturally drawn from our Lord's actions would be, that for every lawful desire committed in faith to God, there will place be found, sooner or later, in the will of God. It is an inference one shrinks from drawing in all its fulness. I admit that facts often seem against it. But it was so when Jesus was on earth; and who shall say that He is not the same Jesus yesterday, to-day, and for ever? M. L. D.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

STREATHAM COMMON.

ALMOST successful Gospel Temperance Mission was lately held at Streatham-common, the congregations of Immanuel Church and of the Baptist Chapel uniting together. Rev. Stenton Eardley, Vicar of Immanuel Church, was unable to take a public part in the work, owing to his still retarded recovery after several months of illness. To others has been given the joy of reaping where he has sowed, and with them none rejoices more than he does himself. Over 350 adult pledges were taken.

It would be invidious to single out special addresses where all were sound, wise, and to the point; but perhaps the most marked feature was the simply breathless attention which pervaded those packed and crowded meetings, whenever the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ was proclaimed in its power and simplicity as the one effectual means of enabling a man both to keep his pledge and to enter on a godly and Christian life, and as the motive power to induce Christians to avail themselves of the privilege of total abstinence for Christ's and their brethren's sake.

MR. F. MURPHY IN SWANSEA.

The grand cause of Total Abstinence has been favourably regarded in the town during the last fifty years. It still flows along like a great swelling river, and will not run dry until the other river of intemperance and death has been dried up, and our country be no more cursed thereby. About eighteen months ago the visit paid us by Mr. R. T. Booth was a great blessing in connection with the movement. About half the population rallied round the standard of "Blue," and the usual results were visible all round—the perishing were rescued, and homes which were like little hells before, soon became like little heavens below.

Then came the law for closing the drinkshops on the Lord's Day into operation, which we hailed as a grand instalment of the altogether closing by and by. Such houses are not fit to be opened in such a world as ours. How strange that such "pitfalls" have been permitted to be open so long even in a Christian country such as ours. Oh, that such temptations were removed before any more bodies and souls are destroyed for ever and ever. Hearing such favourable reports of Mr. Francis Murphy, the originator of the Gospel Temperance Union, he was invited to come and conduct a Mission in this town. The results have been most encouraging; hundreds have already come forward, and some of them have not only been reformed, but transformed. The daily prayer-meeting is one great secret of this Mission, and the "burning and shining" missioner places Jesus Christ in the front of the movement. J. T.

At a recent Gospel Temperance meeting in the Y.M.C.A. Buildings, Dundee, Mr. R. J. Niven denounced in scathing terms the conduct of parents who permit their daughters to serve behind the publican's bar, and with even greater emphasis that of the man who employed them as a lure and attraction to giddy and silly youths to frequent the gilded avenues to shame and ruin.

ABORIGINES AND OUTCASTS OF INDIA.

ANOTHER class in India yet remains to be mentioned, in addition to those spoken of in previous papers—a class which, so far from being reckoned outcasts, might, under the ordinary conditions of society, be expected to take the lead in great movements of reform and usefulness: this is

THE NATIVE ARISTOCRACY.

Yet, when we consider the peculiar lot that has befallen them, they are, with reference to Christianity, by no means the least pitiable of the classes we are considering. Whether we regard them in their moral, social, or political condition, to say nothing of what they have suffered more immediately at our hands, we might well exclaim, "Poor rich man, no man careth for thy soul!" Their surviving sense of dignity, incessantly impressed on their minds by their numerous retainers, only mocks the emptiness of their fallen greatness. In our own land there are fields open to cadets of decayed houses, in the Army, the Navy, and the Church. Even commerce may be engaged in by scions of nobility without derogating from their rank; but with a native prince it is otherwise. Death would be preferable to such degradation, for "he cannot dig; to beg he is ashamed."

Their great numbers give additional importance to their claims. During the decline and fall of the Mogul Empire, India had been carved out into innumerable petty states and principalities by adventurers and rebel chieftains, until they might well be called "the Kings of the East." High-sounding titles—always profusely scattered—have been jealously preserved, whilst their possessions through enforced indolence or extravagance, have melted away, and they now find themselves with every theatre of honourable exertion closed to them, mere ciphers in the midst of a new generation of eager competitors raised up by the new regime of our conquest.

All this may have been necessary at the time, and perhaps inevitable—their present degradation appearing to justify the course taken with them, yet, we venture to predict, that until a native aristocracy is restored to India it will never enjoy lasting peace or prosperity. The European, who has succeeded to their rights and offices, can never effectively supply their place; his alienation of race and religion, and, still more, his position as an interloper and conqueror of yesterday—a bird of passage, taking no root in the soil, and yet supplanting the hereditary proprietors—all forbid it.

A native aristocracy suited to the new state of things cannot be created, it must grow. It cannot be supplied on demand like Manchester piece goods or Sheffield hardware. Christianity alone can raise up men for the occasion, and where might we expect to find the material so well as amongst an hereditary nobility still enjoying the attachment of the people?

THEIR LOYALTY.

The native princes of India have not been without an ordeal to test their worth. Their loyalty has been proved on more than one critical occasion, and on every emergency they have been forward to volunteer their aid and endure the brunt of war for the British Government. It was during the mutiny that the value of the native princes shone out most conspicuously, when almost without exception they rallied round our beleaguered countrymen, sheltering our fugitives from death and starvation, and putting all their resources at the service of the State; indeed, at one time our fate was, under God, in their hands.

If India has yet to pass through a crisis, perhaps more severe than any that has preceded—for religious revolutions are always the most embittered—it would be the extreme of folly if through neglect or incapacity we had alienated this influential class. The day may come when, as in Israel of old, a lebiscite may be called in India—for even there rule is virtually based on public opinion—and the nation may be called to decide "If the Lord be God, follow Him; if Baal, then follow him." Then will be felt the need of national potentates and nobility, wh like those eminent nobles who supported Huss, Wickliffe, John Knox, and Luther, may take the lead in directing the action of the people already enlightened as to their mind and conscience through the missionaries or other agencies.

At such a crisis, European rulers, as professing Christians, would hardly enjoy the same confidence, not being regarded as unbiassed; but if God raised up, as at the Reformation, such witnesses from amongst the native princes as the celebrated Elector of Saxony and Landgrave of Hesse, it would effect more for the triumph of Christianity and the security of our Empire than all our armies. Their peaceful influence in these quiet times might be exerted with equally good effect by the preparatory work of social and religious reforms, and spread of intelligence amongst their people. "My heart is towards the Governors of India, who offer themselves willingly among the people."

As we have utilised the native element for our army, police, and law courts, so must we utilise the native aristocracy for magistrates and other important offices. Leaving, however, statesmen to devise political remedies for the present condition of things, we may suggest whether our Governors and Magistrates in India might not exert an influence in cultivating the friendship of the native aristocracy, who are so imbued with a sense of the divine importance of rank, that it would seem as though only through the agency of their equals could any impression for good be made upon them. Why should not some of bend themselves to the task of the good Samaritan, now that in the fallen state of the native princes they are so predisposed for the hopes and consolations of the Gospel? Such might not only win their attachment, as was done by our Lawrences, Montgomeries, Muirs, Tuckers, and Thomasons, but they might be honoured to lay the foundation of Christian States.

Mr. Haldane, a man of large property in Scotland, a century ago purposed to invest all his possessions in the enterprise of evangelising India by his personal efforts and residence in that land; but the short-sighted policy of the Government of that day forbad his proceedings. It is to be hoped that the present authorities would welcome any such efforts, and perhaps the time is not distant when noblemen will find India a more promising field than Ireland.

There was a period in Europe when under the judgments of God thrones and crowns were falling to the ground "as when a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind." In those days proud monarchs, like the Czar of all the Russias, and the King of Prussia, and other potentates, were willing to receive itinerant preachers at their table, and hear words whereby they and their house might be saved. Such men as Allen, of Plough-court, and Stephen Grellet, were at that time honoured guests at many a royal Court, and, like the evangelical Howard, diffused the salt of Christianity through the lands and institutions that received them.

God has a special work for every class, as we see in the labours of such accomplished men as Lord Radstock, Earl Cairns, Earl Cavan, the Earl of Aberdeen, and others. Would that some such might receive a call to communicate the glad tidings to these prisoners of hope, hitherto secluded from all opportunities of hearing the joyful sound. Truly beautiful upon the mountains would be the feet of such, bringing good tidings of good, and publishing salvation.

We must just touch on an aggravation of the present state of things. We allude to the all-powerful

FEMALE INFLUENCE AT NATIVE COURTS.

The intrigues at the Palace at Stamboul may give an idea of it, but with this vital difference, that whilst in Turkey all is torpid, stagnant, and decaying, India is awakening to renew her youth, her watchword Progress, and her ambition to be admitted to the comity of Christian nations. Yet in the very centre of all this activity, the native Courts, with their populous Zenanas, are neglected deserts, isolated from all healthy influence, left to become centres of intrigue and hotbeds of disaffection, and embittered with the delusion that all their misfortunes are owing to us and to our religion. There is a ray of hope from the Zenana Missions, but ere they can gain admission to native Courts, the way must be prepared for them as above mentioned.

There is this further ground of encouragement, that the Zenana institution is an exotic unknown to the primitive Hindoo religion, only lately introduced by their Mohammedan conquerors, and which on tasting the liberty of the Gospel they will find "a yoke which neither they nor their fathers were able to bear."

Meanwhile, so long as infanticide exists through the difficulty experienced in obtaining suitable alliances for their daughters, and whilst infant marriages, with the consequent cruel treatment of widows, is perpetuated, of which with other abominations of Hindooism native princes are the main support, we are justified in classing them also amongst the outcasts of India.

YOUNG ENGLISHWOMEN IN PARIS.—Miss A. M. Leigh (77, Avenue Wagram, Paris) writes that about £600 has been received in response to the late appeal for £1000, in order that Mr. Barlow Kennet's offer of £500 may be available.

SOCIAL PURITY.—A vigorous, and in some respects a remarkable movement for the promotion of social purity has been going on during the last three months in Hornsey and the neighbourhood. It commenced with two drawing-room meetings—one for married ladies and the other for gentlemen. These were addressed by Miss Ellice Hopkins; the ladies meeting was also attended by Miss Steer, of the "Bridge of Hope." At these meetings earnest exhortations, and good practical advice, were given to mothers in regard to the training of their children, and to men—especially young men—in regard to the special duties and dangers of the present time. Other meetings on a larger scale, convened by private invitation, were held in the Memorial School attached to St. Mary's Church, Hornsey-rise. There was a large and deeply interested audience at each meeting. A Hornsey Ladies' Auxiliary to the National Association for the Repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts was formed. Of course both difficulties and opposition have had to be encountered; but the effect of the latter has been to incite greater determination in the work.—W.

GOING HOME.

SOME years ago, when visiting the Westminster Ragged School, one sultry day in July, I heard that several children had been bitten by mad dogs. The poor animals had been driven mad by heat and thirst; for in those days there were no drinking fountains, with their nice little cups at the foot for the use of stray dogs.

Of the poor boys there bitten, no less than five died. Among those was a child little over seven years of age. He regularly attended the New Tothill-street Ragged School. Miss Liddiard, the teacher of the day-school, had drank into the spirit of Jesus, and was a true missionary of the Cross, though without the name. Her Bible lessons, earnest prayers, and private speakings reached the heart of many a poor forlorn child, whose home was a hovel, and its parents thieves or drunkards. Amongst these was the subject of our sketch. His love for the Bible was noticeable in one so young.

Not only in school, but in his squalid home, he delighted to tell his widowed mother of the love of Jesus, and to repeat to her the daily text, so that he too became a missionary of Christ without knowing it. There, too, among the ragged children who delighted to sing the simple hymns taught in the Ragged Schools, in the foul alleys of what was called —from its crimes and drunkenness—the "Devil's Hole," his voice was ever foremost. All led to the impression that this poor fatherless child, who loved school more than play, and hymns even more than school-songs, was one of those lambs of Jesus of whom it is written (Isaiah xl. 11), "He shall carry them in his bosom."

He was now, however, called upon to show whether his piety was of that true character which can alone bear the test of a death-bed. After he was bitten by the mad dog, hydrophobia, or water-madness, in its worst form, set in, so that his pain was very great. Half-starved as he had been, his poor body was too weak to bear the agony. Happily, the soul was stronger than the physical frame; and by humming hymns, and by short prayers, the pain was lulled.

At his earnest desire his kind teacher was sent for. His home was not only poor in the extreme, but not being either clean or ventilated, the smell was almost unbearable! At the foot of the bed stood the parish doctor. He whispered to the anxious mother, "I fear your son cannot live much longer." Faintly spoken as were these words, the poor child heard them, and with a smile on his pale face, said, "I am glad to hear it, sir." The doctor, startled by words which he had rarely heard even from adult patients, asked, "Why, my little man?" With another smile, the dying boy replied, "Because, sir, I am going home!"

Until twelve o'clock at night he remained in great bodily pain, but with the soul happy in Jesus. When his teacher was about to leave, he said, "Do not leave me yet, dear teacher, for I shall soon go home." She remained with him, whilst for hours he talked of the beautiful home Jesus has gone to get ready for all who have given their hearts unto Him. And, as the chimes of Westminster Abbey struck twelve, he, in his own beautiful words, "went home."

Dear children, if your summons came to-night could you say, "I am going home?" If not, give your hearts to Jesus at once and let Him take care of them. Then, whether you die in youth, or live to spend long years in his service, you too will "go home."

PERSECUTION NOT PAST.

HOW often are we told that this nineteenth century is the age of reason and religious tolerance, while the freedom and toleration of our day are boasted from platform and pulpit; but if we look away from England and North America, Anabaptists and other Dissenters must hear such utterances with pain. Reports of loss of daily bread or of position, through steadfastness to religious conviction, meet us on all hands. Many formerly in comfortable circumstances are now treading the sad path of the social outlaw, or preparing to emigrate from their beloved country.

Nor is this all that is suffered by those who are bold enough to make common cause with Dissenters. From Biel, in Switzerland, we learn that the mob have recently smashed the windows of a Methodist chapel there, shouting out, "Death to the preacher!"

We have information from Russia of an attack made in the open street on a poor "Hundist," who was seized by a crowd of ruffians, whipped at the cart's tail, and taken home bleeding and senseless, after having his clothes torn off to be beaten with birch rods. He remained steadfast to his faith, and has recovered from the persecutions inflicted upon him for "heresy," by command of a Greek priest.

Whose heart does not bleed at such horrors, casually mentioned by "liberal" religious journals?

Were a missionary or pastor of a country church thus treated, the alarm would be spread in all religious publications, but to defend a Dissenter demands the exercise of courage and toleration in the spirit of Christ, rarely, very rarely, to be found.—Le Christianisme.

SUNSHINE AND SHADE IN BASUTOLAND.

LETTERS of considerable interest have lately been received by Miss Macpherson from Mr. R. H. Dyke, and Mrs. Dyke, sen., of Morija, Basutoland, South Africa. Mr. Dyke states that a good work of grace has been going on among the youths in the training school where he is engaged in teaching. During the preceding six months ten of these had made an open confession of faith in Christ. Mr. Dyke gives some very encouraging particulars of the evangelistic work he and other friends are enabled to carry on among the heathen of the surrounding villages on Lord's days. They often conduct five or six services in the course of the day, so that many hear the Gospel message who would not voluntarily attend any regular Mission service. These efforts have not been without tokens of blessing.

Mr. Dyke adds that there is much anxiety felt as to the action that the Cape authorities will take with respect to Basutoland. It is feared that if the abandonment of the country be decided on, war will soon break out. The same apprehension is expressed in the letter from Mrs. Dyke, Senr., who asks for the prayers of English Christians that these dreaded evils may be averted. Mrs. Dyke continues: "Though this depressing cloud rests heavy upon us there are gleams of sunshine at times from behind it. We are cheered by seeing that the Holy Spirit is working in the hearts of many, especially the young. From several stations we hear of many conversions."

She tells of one occasion on which her son had gone to a village to preach. A thunderstorm having come on he asked permission to hold the service in a house near by. At first the mistress of the house refused, but afterwards relented and made every possible effort for the comfort of the people, who not only crowded the room but sat round the door and window under the shelter of umbrellas. So earnest were they to hear the word that they were reluctant to leave, but Mr. Dyke had to preach elsewhere. The woman of the house said to him, "This is now God's house; you can come and preach whenever you like."

AARON'S ROD.

Numbers xx. 8.

BUDS, bloom, and fruit, oh, wond'rous rod!
Unfading priestly flower;
Laid up before the Ark of God
In resurrection power.

When wearied on earth's desert road,
Soul-thirst has parched me sore,
Behold, where first life's waters flowed,
My fountain-rock once more!

What wait I for? why doubt or fear?
'Tis but at God's command
To claim his promise, and draw near,
His "Token" in my hand.

To "speak" one all-prevailing word,
One name of priceless worth,
Thine, my once dead, now living Lord,
And floods of grace stream forth.

REVIVAL IN THE CEVENNES.

THE pastor writes: "About two months ago some of us resolved to organise some revival meetings in different quarters of the town and in neighbouring localities. At first our little company numbered only about ten men and women, but we set ourselves to work with confidence and faith. At the very first meeting a young girl found 'the pearl of great price.' At our second gathering a young man passed from the bondage of sin to the glorious liberty of the children of God.

"Since then our meetings in town and country have succeeded without interruption, and each one has been crowned by the salvation of one or more souls. At the present time more than fifty persons have declared they have found their Saviour. It is worthy of remark that twenty-eight of these are men, and yet infidels tell us that the Gospel is only for women and children!

"Praise the Lord, the revival continues, and we expect greater things yet. Here are some cases taken from many others which show what the Holy Spirit can do in hearts which receive Him. At the close of one of our meetings an old man of eighty-two found peace. Immediately crying for joy, he threw himself into the arms of his son who was at his side, saying, 'My dear son, I have come only just in time, but glory to God I have come in time! I am saved!' A father of a family had a quarrel of ten years' standing with a neighbour. As soon as he knew he was pardoned he left the meeting, and going to his enemy said, 'Let us forget the past! I have found peace in my soul, and I want to tell you that God will give you also the same.'

"One day a young wife was telling her husband that she was converted, when he pushed her away with anger; but the next day he was himself arrested, like Saul of Tarsus. Feeling an unaccountable discomfort, he went to his room. He had scarcely entered when his eyes fell upon the open Bible which his wife had left upon the table at 1 Cor. xv. This he read, and this Word of God was to him the 'sword of the Spirit' and 'the balm of Gilead.' He fell on his knees, and when he arose he embraced his wife, who had just entered, crying out, 'I am saved.' Another man, who for twenty years had professed to be a Christian, but who was living in sin, cried out at the close of one of our meetings, 'God has just broken my chains! At last I am free!'

"Before closing, may I strongly recommend the means which have been so greatly blessed among us to all those who sigh after a revival? We must join all the strength of our Churches and put all to work. If men will not come to our places of worship, we must go and seek them out where they are. 'It is high time to awake out of sleep.' To the work for God! To the work with God! To the work with prayer, perseverance, and faith."—L'Evangéliste, Feb. 23.

LAWLESSNESS AND GODLESSNESS.

WE read in 2 Thess. ii. 7 of "the mystery of lawlessness," and in v. 8 of "that lawless one," whose open manifestations, or full development, is to be the culmination of the world's unbelief, and the immediate precursor of our Lord's Return. We are further told of a power by which, for the time, that full development of lawlessness, under the reign of the lawless one, is withheld—a time of restraint, indefinite, but limited, and liable at any moment to cease. The continued delay to withhold that restraining power we know to be owing to that "longsuffering of our Lord," which we account salvation, but to which an end must come – and that ere long.

There is no feature of our own times which is giving rise to so much anxiety and apprehension as the widespread lawlessness which already prevails; and this, in common with other signs of the times, indicates that the period may be very near when that crisis which shall bring to the world the most fearful ordeal it has ever passed through, may arrive. The spread of Socialist and Anarchist doctrines throughout Europe is a fact no thoughtful man can contemplate with carelessness or unconcern. It is evidently no passing transitory mood into which a few dissatisfied idlers have fallen; it is not a disintegrated, and so powerless, attempt of a mere handful of cowardly men afraid to face the light of day, but a growing, deepening, and resolute movement based upon distinctly avowed principles, and commanding the sympathies of multitudes of men. As a contemporary said last week, in a leading article on the same subject:—

No merely local and occasional facts can explain the widespread and profound disorganisation which we see around us. The mischief is not in unfavourable circumstances, but in disintegrating ideas. When we look, for instance, at the roll of the Paris Press, and find a swarm of newspapers with such names as The Battle, or The Revolt, when we read of a young mother registering her babe in the name of Lucifer Satan Vercingetorix, we feel that such things are not explained by shortness of carpenters' work. Society is in presence of bands of men who are not seeking so much its spoliation as its destruction. There is to be no God—and, for that matter, no devil, if inequality is implied—no king or president, no magistrate or law, no capitalist, and, therefore, neither employer nor employed. Such are the beatitudes of that kingdom of dynamite, which, we are assured, is at hand.

And this kind of teaching prevails at home as well as abroad, while its promoters have international bonds of sympathy and brotherhood which are by no means kept secret from the world, but shamelessly, and even with boastfulness published, and declared; so that a cohesion is being brought about between the various communistic organisations all over Europe, which threatens to resolve them into a powerful and humanly invincible barrier to religious civilisation and order. To quote again from the same source:—

If the masses of the people throughout Europe should become persuaded, however erroneously, that their interests are being sacrificed to the interests of those who are better off than themselves, then we may look for conflicts more dire than anything which has yet occurred within the pale of civilisation; and that is by no means an imaginary danger.

But this is the very persuasion the masses are becoming possessed of, and the one that socialist leaders are labouring with might and main to spread abroad. From its influence what can be expected but confusion and strife, and every evil work?

We do not write as alarmists or as pessimists, destitute of hope and given over to despair, but as sober, practical observers of the signs of the times. As Christians, we know that however dark the night may be, "the morning cometh," but we have special duties in the midst of the darkness which is deepening around us, and it behoves us to be awake. We cannot afford to "sleep as do others." The "midnight cry" summons us to trim our lamps, and to be "as men who wait for their Lord;" while the Gospel with which we are put in trust, and which alone can save men from the vortex of ruin, into which Satan is eager to hasten them, calls upon us to be more than ever vigorous in lifting up the voice of Christian testimony, and of loving invitation to the Saviour of souls, mingled with faithful warning concerning the awful results of rejecting Him.

The Standard of Monday week uttered words of warning which are much to the point, and which are suggestive of facts calling for earnest consideration. The writer said:—

It seems that human mental power has made, and is making, greater conquests than moral force; and, unless some pressure can be brought to bear which shall make murder shameful, the state of society may be utterly changed, and each man will so distrust his fellow that the most civilised cities in the world will be as painful and as dangerous to honest men as the wildest haunts of savages.

The march of intellect if unaccompanied by advance in moral force, can but prove disastrous and fatal to the best interests of mankind. The heart unchanged, and the claims of God and godliness unrecognised and unenforced, the very fruits of mental toil and the grandest discoveries of modern science, become instruments of power, wielded by men who as servants of unrighteousness turn them only to an evil account. And yet this, unhappily, is the direction in which for some time past the popular current has been running.

Secular education, complete separation between politics and religion, and now atheistic democrats exalted to seats of honour and responsibility in the State, are steps in the path of so-called progress which already begin to yield their natural fruit; as of old, so it threatens ere long to be again—"as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind to do those things which are not fitting" (Rom. i. 28—32). The rights of man must be held subordinate to the rights of God if nations are to prosper and be strong.

ERRATA.—Hon. and Rev. E. V. Bligh writes to us to correct a mis-translation in our issue of March 15, respecting the work of Pasteur Armand-Delille at Paris. "Two hundred thousand hearers" should have been "2100 hearers." Any donations towards M. Armand-Delille's work would be forwarded to him, if addressed to Mr. Bligh, West Malling, Kent, and would be most acceptable in aid of his Gospel Mission among the mourners at the Cemetery.—A correspondent writes to say that the number of persons attending a Gospel Temperance meeting in Reading, referred to in a recent issue, as being 3000, must be a mistake; the Town-hall, he says, has only a seating capacity of half that number.

OUR FISHERMEN.—Mr. H. Cook, of Belle Vue Place, Stoke-road, Gosport, writes:—The Mission "ketch" Annie, of Portsmouth, has again set sail for Mission work among the fishermen in the West of England, and will remain there during the mackerel season, after which she will sail for other fishing ports for Gospel work. The vessel will most probably be sent again to Havre, Honfleur, and Rouen, as the French brethren are desirous of having her there for Gospel work among the fishers. If your readers will kindly remember our Mission we shall be very grateful. Bibles, Gospel books, and little bags are much needed, our stock being quite exhausted, and much work of great importance lies before us in our noble Mission vessel, given and supported in answer to prayer. Parcels for the next month may be sent to the Annie or Bethel-vessel, Parade Quay, Plymouth.

Notes and Comments.

WE are obliged, by the intervention of the Easter Holidays, to send this number to press some days in advance of the usual time; all communications received after Thursday last will find acknowledgment in our next issue.

Mr. Spurgeon continues his practice of throwing open the Tabernacle once a quarter to strangers, requesting his regular hearers on that occasion to give place to others. In spite of the bitter inclemency of the weather the spacious building was well filled on the evening of the 11th inst., when a sermon was preached on Deut. xxxii. 47: "For it is not a vain thing for you, because it is your life." One great secret of the preacher's power, and long-continued success in his Master's service, is revealed in the fact he asserted, that—

Although he had preached the Gospel now thirty years or more, that night before coming upon the platform he trembled like an aspen leaf. Often when he entered the Tabernacle his knees knocked together, not that he was afraid of any one man or of the whole congregation, but simply because he regarded it as a most solemn thing to proclaim the Gospel to dying men.

A few Christian labourers, whose hearts are deeply impressed with the solemnity of the times through which we are passing, desire to "come aside" together in a suburb of London to wait upon the Lord daily—probably for a week—on matters touching their individual ministry and the general welfare of the whole Church of God on earth ("for there is one body"). As these meetings are intended to be of a private character, no further details will be announced through the Press; but any servants of Christ—irrespective of ecclesiastical or denominational distinctions—whose hearts are moved by the need for such a season of special waiting upon God in humiliation and prayer, and for mutual help and conference on subjects of present importance, and who are willing to devote these few days to this object, are invited to communicate immediately with "Onesimus," care of the Editor of this journal, when further particulars will be supplied.

Important testimonies were borne to the value of the Temperance movement at a crowded meeting held at the Guildhall on Wednesday, March 14. Lord Claud Hamilton, M.P., Mr. S. Morley, M.P., Mr. A. Pease, M.P., Mr. Geo. Palmer, M.P., and twelve Mayors of various Boroughs attended the meeting. The Lord Mayor said he was induced to support this excellent movement by the experience he had gathered as a magistrate; the result of that experience was that nine cases out of ten—he might almost say nineteen out of twenty—which came before him had their origin in the curse of drink. Speaking of the benefits of Temperance, the Mayor of St. Ives (Cornwall) said that during the two years he had held the office of chief magistrate of that town, he had had only one solitary individual brought before him on a charge of drunkenness. In a population of 7000 they had only one policeman, and had nothing for him to do.

Mr. S. Morley submitted the following resolution:—

That this meeting rejoices in the encouraging circumstance that the Mayors of twenty-seven English and Welsh boroughs have publicly identified themselves with the Temperance movement, and resolves to express its gratitude to those who have this evening given their valuable testimony in favour of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks.

A meeting has just been held by the Incorporated Free and Open Church Association, at which correspondence was read with reference to the Bishop of Rochester's Ten Churches Fund; it was decided to ask the bishop to receive a deputation from the Association urging the importance of making the proposed new churches entirely free. The alienation of the masses from churches and chapels, of which so much is seen and heard, invests this matter with great importance and interest. The solution of the problem lies largely in this direction. The fact that services for the people, in which the pew rent and appropriation principle is set aside (as in Mr. Spurgeon's case mentioned above), are invariably attractive to the class of non-attendants at public worship, proves that the exclusive system is a barrier in the way. If the subject could be practically dealt with by all the Churches, we are persuaded great gain would result in laying hold of multitudes of people who now are seldom, or ever, found in places of worship.

The power of the Press for good can hardly be over-estimated, but the same power in the hands of the enemies of God becomes a mighty instrument of evil. The following facts should serve to stimulate the friends of truth all over the world to be up and doing; they may well induce, on the part of our religious Press, and all who have it in their power to aid and extend its influence, increasing activity and zeal:—

Multitudes of infidel and blasphemous books have been lately issued in Japan; and the native presses of India are constantly throwing off immense issues of works in defence of Paganism, as well as heathen classics tainted with immorality. In Lucknow and Cawnpore there are said to be forty-five publishing houses engaged in this work. One publisher received from a well-to-do Mohammedan $4000 to assist in printing Mohammedan books. A million of Hindoo tracts were issued at the expense of one Hindoo prince. One hundred and three newspapers, mostly weekly, advocate and support Paganism and Hindooism, and assail Christianity in India. Mr. Joseph Cook went through a Hindoo publishing house at Lucknow which had just sent an order to London for $25,000 worth of printing paper.

Rev. Edward White has chosen for his theme at the Merchants' Lecture, for the present month, at Weigh-house Chapel, "The Mosaic Account of the Creation and Fall of Man." We are glad to see that the lecturer's object has been to prove the historical character of the Mosaic record, and that he has succeeded in doing so, as we think, in a most logical and conclusive manner. There is not a little freshness as well as force in his reasoning. The point is one of no mean importance, and, as Mr. White clearly showed in his first lecture, it involves the truthfulness of the whole canon of sacred Scripture. The Old Testament writers, together with Christ and his Apostles, treated the events recorded in the first three chapters of Genesis as literal facts, and even "based Christianity itself as a religion of redemption" upon their historic truth. The so-called scientific objections urged against the history of the Creation and the Fall were in the first and second lectures fully dealt with, the words of the lecturer concerning them being very timely, and well worthy of note.

The following sentences should be carefully weighed by many who seem inclined to attach importance to the varied hypotheses that some of our modern professors raise with a view to prove Revelation a fable, and the Christian's faith a baseless creed:—

It was useless to disguise the conflict between the Bible and—not science, but that which, in the opinion of not a few, in their time, was thought worthy of the name of science. Science signified absolute knowledge, not the opinion of some distinguished scientific men. What was absolutely known for certain was accepted by all properly-qualified investigators in all lands. Tried by this test, the widely-diffused notion of the animal origin, and remote antiquity of the human race, broke down instantly. There was scarcely a single fact in the interpretation of which the leading biologists and archæologists of the world were agreed; certainly not one which could serve as a basis for a theory solid enough to overthrow the teaching of Divine Revelation.

The responsibility of all classes in the community to turn the influence they possess to a good moral and religious account is aptly illustrated by the following extract from a volume of sermons entitled "Boy Life," preached by Dr. Benson, the new Archbishop of Canterbury, when master of Wellington College, a new edition of which is just published by Macmillan & Co.:—

I have heard of boys who dare not, they say, be clergymen, because of the responsibility—but dare be officers. Is that because there is no responsibility resting on them for the state of those who look up to them every hour of every day? Alas, the delusion! But this is but one single instance—a marked one, no doubt, but only one. The manufacturer among his men, the tradesman and the lawyer among his clerks, the master among his scholars, the senior among students, the leading boys, the clever boys, the stronger boys, the boys of strong will, the boys of energy, each and all, are as responsible as the clergyman or the officer.

It is of the utmost importance that this truth should be widely inculcated, and borne in mind by us in these days when the spiritual is so apt to be lost sight of in the eager pursuit of the material. As Christians we are apt to forget that we "are to know no man after the flesh," but to let our conduct toward all be ruled by spiritual motives.

Sometimes the lesson comes the other way, and ministers, who are supposed to have a monopoly of responsibility in this direction, are themselves stimulated by healthy reminders from other quarters of the duty and importance of knowing men not after the flesh, but as possessors of a higher nature:—

During a voyage, sailing in a heavy sea near a reef of rocks, a minister on board the vessel made, in a conversation between the man at the helm and the sailors, an inquiry whether they should be able to clear the rocks without making another tack, when the captain gave orders that they should put off to avoid all risk. The minister observed, "I am rejoiced that we have so careful a commander." The captain replied, "It is necessary I should be very careful, because I have souls on board. I think of my responsibility, and remember that, should anything happen through carelessness, souls are very valuable!" The minister, turning to some of his congregation who were upon the deck, observed, "The captain has preached me a powerful sermon; I hope I shall never forget, when I am addressing my fellow-creatures on the concerns of eternity, that I have souls on board."

The Nonconformist and Independent, in its issue of March 15, has a leader entitled, "A Political Prayer Meeting," in which, with words of indignation, we might almost say contempt, the writer censures the action of the Evangelical Alliance in calling for special prayer with respect to the position of the Government in reference to the Affirmation Bill. We maintain, however, that the Alliance was only acting in accordance with its great object, and in harmony with the spirit of its best friends and promoters in so doing. We more and more strongly feel that the legislation proposed by the Ministry is of "a directly anti-religious character," and we say this without any bias of a party kind in favour of one side of the House or the other. We look at the proposal per se, and in doing so, after repeated consideration of all that the opponents of our view have to say on the matter, we feel that "common sense," "right," and "Scripture," all alike are with us in our claim, that, instead of loosening our laws in favour of infidelity, we ought at this juncture of events to strengthen them in opposition to it.

We see that a memorial on the subject has been prepared for presentation to the Premier, on behalf of the Clergy of the Church of England, and are glad to know it is receiving very influential support, and that from men holding very different opinions on other subjects. Among the names already appended are those of the Deans of Manchester and Canterbury, Canons Fleming and Gregory, together with Archdeacon Denison and Prebendary Cadman. The memorial states:—

Your memorialists, without expressing any opinion as to the desirability of substituting an affirmation for an oath, as prescribed by the Act, wish to urge that this Bill differs widely from all previous Bills which have been passed for the relief of religious disabilities, to meet the conscientious scruples of Quakers, Moravians, and Jews, and cannot but feel that the deliberate removal of the name of the Supreme Being from the form of affirmation proposed in this Bill, for the purpose of admitting as a member of the Legislature, by its retrospective action, an open and avowed Atheist, who has admitted that he has no religious scruples, is dishonouring to Almighty God, and contrary to the spirit of our laws and constitution.

We should like to see a similar memorial on the part of the various Nonconformist sections of the Church. It is a hopeful sign that a large number of petitions are daily presented to the House of Commons against the proposed measure.

We commend the following protest by the well-known author of "Proverbial Philosophy" to the notice of our readers. It has appeared in several other papers, and is worthy of reproduction all over the land:—

"SO HELP ME, GOD!"

"So help me, God!" my heart at every turn
Of life's wide wilderness implores Thee still
To give all good, to rescue from all ill,
And grant me grace thy presence to discern.

"So help me, God!" I would not move a yard
Without thy hand in mine to be my guide,
Thy love to bless, thy bounty to provide,
Thy fostering wing spread over me to guard.

"So help me, God!" the motto of my life,
In every varied phase of chance and change,
So that naught happens here of sad or strange,
But "peace" is written on each frown of strife.

For Thou dost help the man that honoureth Thee!
Ay, and thy Christian-Israel of this land
That hitherto hath recognised thy hand,
How blest above the nations still are we.

Yet—now our Senate schemes to spurn aside
(On false pretence of liberal brotherhood)
The Heavenly Father of our earthly good—
Because one atheist hath his God denied!

What! shall this wrong be done? Must all of us
Groan under coming judgment for the sin
Of welcoming avowed blasphemers in
To vote with rulers who misgovern thus?

So help us, God! it shall not: England's might Stands in religion practised and profest;
For so alone by blessing is she blest,
Christian and Protestant in life and light.

A NEW weekly journal, entitled Health, devoted to the popular exposition of sanitary matters and to the education of the people in the laws of health, will be shortly issued by Messrs. Wyman & Sons, London.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

THE LEEDS MISSION.

THE Mission of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Leeds, after long waiting and many discouragements, is being held, with much promise of blessing. Mr. Moody visited Leeds in 1867. He was then comparatively unknown; his meetings were not largely attended, and attracted little public notice; yet there are earnest Christians among us who date their conversion from that time. His next visit to England along with his beloved colleague, Mr. Sankey, did not extend to Leeds, to the disappointment of many.

It is a year or more since a committee was formed to secure and prepare for the present visit. One great difficulty was the want of a suitable building. Our Town Hall only seats 2000 persons, and is difficult to speak and hear in. A large building, "The Coliseum," in Cookridge-street, was in progress, which our committee agreed to take if ready. As the autumn drew on it became evident this building could not be completed in time. The next attempt was to find a good site for a temporary building. Application was first made for a piece of historic ground, very central and every way suitable; but this was at once refused. A proposal for a site almost equally eligible was at first favourably received, but after weeks of waiting was also refused. The committee had in reserve No. 3, a good site, which had been twice promised, but on claiming the fulfilment of the promise it was withdrawn. The committee next applied to the committee of the Mechanics' Institute for a vacant space at the back of their building. This was courteously, and we feel sure reluctantly, declined. Colonel Child, a member of the committee, offered us a site without charge, which though spacious was in an obscure position and not easy of access.

On receiving the answer of the committee of the Mechanics' Institute, the evangelistic committee felt they had pretty much come to the end of their resources, and held a little impromptu prayer-meeting, to put the case into the Lord's hands, and seek His guidance and help. The next day a very unexpected offer was made by the proprietors of the "Coliseum," to put on that building a secure though temporary roof, and fit it up in a substantial manner with galleries, seats, and platform, so as to accommodate about 4,000 persons. This, after much consideration of details, and the adoption of all the suggestions of the committee, was accepted, and has proved a great success. The situation, accommodation, lighting, ventilation, and acoustics of the building are all excellent. We can only look on it as a gracious answer to prayer in the time of need.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey, and also Mr. J. M. Scroggie, reached Leeds on Saturday, March 17. On Lord's-day, the 18th, they commenced at 8 a.m. with a meeting with Christian workers, which was largely attended. At 11 a.m. the building was filled by ticket with those who do not attend any place of worship. Much pains had been taken to invite the right class; all were eager to have tickets; and so far as could be judged, the audience was very largely of the class desired. Mr. Moody's address on the New Birth was very impressive. At 3 p.m. there was a meeting for women; and at 7 p.m. for men. Both were crowded, and an overflow meeting, addressed by Mr. Scroggie, was held in Oxford-place Wesleyan Chapel, which will seat 2,500 persons, and is said to have been crowded.

The order during the past week has been a prayer-meeting in the Albert Hall of the Mechanics' Institute at 12, conducted Mr. Scroggie; a Bible lecture by Mr. Moody, in the Coliseum, at 3 p.m., and a service at 7.30 in the same building, with overflow meetings at Oxford-place.

In the afternoon, as a rule, Mr. Moody addresses professing Christians, and in the evening the undecided and unconverted. Mr. Sankey's choice of hymns appears determined by the same rule. It is needless to say how effective is his aid. With him, hymns and sacred songs are prayers and sermons.

Mr. Moody's gift of addressing and holding the close attention of his audience is of a very remarkable kind. He is, perhaps, the one man in the English-speaking world who can talk conversationally to 4000 persons as easily as most could to forty. He speaks with great rapidity, yet, on the whole, with clearness—introducing the most telling illustrations and incidents, often humorous but more often deeply pathetic, and so brings home to his spell-bound hearers the great realities of the eternal world, and the blessed hopes and promises of the Gospel. We cannot but hope that a large blessing will come upon our town and upon many from the populous districts around Leeds in connection with this visit.—Yours respectfully,

Leeds, March 21. T. Harvey.

The following notices of the work are from the daily reports in The Leeds Mercury:—

Monday, March 19.

The interest in the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Leeds was again shown by the crowds which gathered at the Coliseum in Cookridge-street, when the first of their week-day services was held. Three o'clock was the time fixed for the afternoon meeting, but long before that hour a large audience had assembled, and when the service commenced there were very few vacant seats in the vast hall. The interval before the service was passed in singing hymns, which were led by Mr. Sankey. Occupying seats on the platform were a large number of clerical and lay members of the General Committee and the members of the choir.

Mr. Moody delivered a Bible lecture, his subject being "The Grace of God." Selecting several passages bearing upon the subject in the Epistles to the Romans and the Ephesians, Mr. Moody commented upon them. A great many people tried to make themselves worthy before they came to God. "But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many" (Rom. v. 15). In this dispensation all God's blessings came through Jesus Christ. Pharaoh put everything into the hands of Joseph, and so God had put everything into the hands of Jesus Christ; and if we are to take salvation we must take it on God's terms—that is, as a free gift. People were often kept out of the kingdom of God because they tried to merit salvation by their works; but if man could have worked for salvation Christ need not have died. "By grace are ye saved, through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. ii. 8, 9). There would be no boasting in heaven. No man could say that he had worked his way up there. How people would flock into the kingdom of God if they only understood this doctrine of free grace. What we wanted to realise was the great truth that we are under grace, and that God has plenty of grace to supply all our needs. At the conclusion of the address prayer was offered, and the benediction was then pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Conder.

In the evening, although the weather was very unfavourable, the hall was nearly filled. The interval of waiting was again occupied in singing hymns. Mr. Sankey gave as a solo the hymn, "Do you see the Hebrew captive kneeling?" afterwards singing the hymn beginning "Go work in my vineyard."

Mr. Moody then delivered an address. He said he wished to speak to the Christian people who were gathered there that night. If he could say something in Leeds that would be used of God either to convert a hundred souls, or to stir up a hundred Christians, and if he had his choice he would say let him do something to rouse and stimulate a hundred Christians, for that would result in the conversion of many thousands. He had not much hope until the Church of God was quickened. He wanted to call their attention to the fact that in all ages God had been willing to use any man or woman who wished to be used. It was a false idea that God only used certain people. There were many people who thought they had not got gifts and talents; there were a good many that had not got any heart to work for God, and therefore He could not use them.

If they read the Bible they would notice that God in all ages had been taking up the weak things, the contemptible things of the world and using them for his purposes. As illustrations of this Mr. Moody referred to Moses, who was sent to Pharoah armed only with a rod; Joshua, who was told to compass Jericho and to blow with the rams' horns in order that the walls of the city might fall; Sampson, who went against the Philistines armed with the jaw-bone of an ass and slew a thousand men; and David, who went against Goliath armed only with a sling and five smooth stones. John Bunyan, he remarked, would shine for ever, and would far outshine the men of his day, because he gave God what he had. He was base in the eyes of the world. He was a contemptible tinker, that was all, and they put him in prison for twelve years; but if he might say so, Satan found his match when he got John Bunyan. What God wants us to do is to use what we have got, and not what we have not got.

He believed that if this world was to be reached, it was to be reached by men of small talents. Let them never call anything that they did for the Lord small. Anything they did for Him with a right motive was not small, but great. If they were faithful in little things, the Lord would promote them by and by. He wished to urge upon them the importance of going into this work with the heart—with determination and with enthusiasm. Another thing they wanted was to be in sympathy with the people. They must endeavour to put themselves in the place of those to whom they spoke, and if they won a man's affections they would find that they could do almost anything with him. At the conclusion of the service a prayer-meeting was held, to which many of the congregation remained.

Tuesday, March 20.

Large congregations again assembled at the Coliseum, Leeds, to hear Messrs. Moody and Sankey. There was a prayer-meeting in the morning, and in the afternoon a Bible-lecture. At the lecture the building was crowded with a mixed assembly, of which by far the greater part were women. Mr. Moody spoke for nearly three-quarters of an hour upon the words, "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only." People of the present day were willing enough to be hearers, but few were doers of the Word. It was, however, impossible to have true faith without works—quite as impossible as to have fire without heat. Now, there were hundreds and thousands who every Sunday listened to the teachings of ministers of the Gospel who might, if they chose, carry the substance of that teaching to thousands more who never attended a place of worship. How much sooner and more effectually would such people be reached if this course were adopted by Christians. And there was a danger to belief if work did not accompany it. A good many got into Doubting Castle and stayed there all their lives, who would never have been within its walls had they worked so that others might share the benefit of faith.

Not a few professed Christians allowed God to pass by when He wished some work to be done, for no other cause than that they were not ready, or had some flaw in their character. In how many Christian Churches was there the viper of pride, or of jealousy, or of worldly ambition, and how many good works were destroyed by these vipers. If there was to be a blessed revival, it must begin in the pulpits and spread down among the pews. Who ever knew a Church that was on fire with zeal for the salvation of souls that had not anxious members in it? Let no man stay his hand for worldly considerations. Vile indeed would be the man who allowed a fellow-being to walk over the precipice without giving warning of his danger, and who excused himself on the ground that "he was not appointed; he was not on a committee." He pitied those who, professing to be Christians, had never had the luxury of leading a soul to Christ.

If men wished to be used by God they must not be afraid of being called peculiar. He had no doubt that Elijah and Enoch were regarded as very peculiar men in their day, and that the same would be said of Wesley. There were occasions and circumstances in which it was necessary to stand against forms and customs. Let all be peculiar; let all be "out-and-out" for God, in spite of what the world said; indeed, if the world had not much to say against them, depend upon it God would have very little to say for them. Christ died in order that all men might be zealous of good works; that they might set in motion those streams of blessing which would flow after their death. All could do something to help forward the cause, to bring to Christ some sinner who but for them might be eternally lost. Would that all who heard him would go out and do the work which the Master had bidden, and would have perseverance and courage never to give up the task.

Mr. Moody was heard with the closest attention by the large audience, over whom he exerted no slight control by his power of forcing home precept by illustration. Mr. Sankey gave great assistance to the service by his hymns.

In the evening not a seat and scarcely a standing place was to be found in the great hall at least a quarter of an hour before the time announced for the commencement of the meeting. Many sought admission afterwards, to whom it had to be refused. The committee, as in the case of previous meetings, had provided for this excess in numbers, and the late-comers were invited to attend an overflow meeting in Oxford-place Chapel, where Mr. Sankey would sing and Mr. Scroggie would speak. In the hall a great proportion of the assembly were in their seats almost an hour before the service was to commence, and with Mr. Sankey at the organ, acting as leader, the interval was spent in singing some of the hymns in his collection. At the commencement of the Gospel meeting Mr. Sankey sang "Hallelujah, what a Saviour!" with much effect, and also a hymn by Rev. Dr. Bonar—"Pray, brethren, pray"—a member of the choir joining in the refrain.

Mr. Moody announced his text—"Repent ye, and believe the Gospel" (Mark i. 15). A plain, practical, and impressive address was given by the evangelist, his subject being repentance. As Mr. Moody dwelt on the love of God and appealed to those who were slighting it, the vast assemblage seemed profoundly moved. At the close he stated that the Presbyterian Church in Woodhouse-lane had been placed at his service for the evening, and that he should be happy to give spiritual advice to all who desired it and would go thither. Meanwhile a prayer-meeting would be held in the Coliseum. A hymn was then sung, and a considerable number of those present left the hall and met Mr. Moody in the Presbyterian Church. The prayer-meeting was conducted by the Rev. A. Galbraith.

Writing of the services on Wednesday, the Mercury says:—The public interest in the Mission increases day by day. The vast audiences which assemble to hear the evangelists are composed of all classes; there is no lack of aid in the work from Christians belonging to nearly all the religious bodies; the sacred melodies are sung with great heartiness, Mr. Moody's stirring addresses are heard with the closest attention, and there is good ground for believing that the Mission will have the desired result in a very large measure. Last night it was again found necessary to have an overflow-meeting at Oxford-place Wesleyan Chapel, the Coliseum building being crowded in every part, and that nearly half an hour before the time fixed for the commencement of the service. Some 6000 persons therefore came to hear the evangelists. An inquiry meeting took place at the close in the Presbyterian Church, Woodhouse-lane, and the great majority of those who did not go thither remained to pray meanwhile.

"LABOUR ENDED."

DEATH OF AN AMERICAN EVANGELIST.

OUR American contemporaries report the sudden death, on March 2, of Mr. Osborne W. Garford, a young and rising evangelist, in the city of New York. Mr. Garford was of English birth, and having family connections in the brewery trade, when he came to America he engaged in that business. He attended some meetings held by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, and was converted. Convinced that the brewery trade was sinful, he resigned his place, and subsequently gave himself up wholly to evangelistic labours. He refused offers as high as 5000 dollars a year to go to New Haven and other cities and remain in the business. But his conscientious principles would not permit him, and he refused all, depending only on the slender pay of the itinerant preacher. He went to Southampton, L.I., for rest, but was stricken down there and died, at the early age of thirty-four, from overwork and enthusiasm in his mission.

A memorial service was held in Dr. Talmage's tabernacle, of which Mr. Garford was one of the leading members. The Pastor read a letter from the Rev. S. H. Platt, pastor of the Southampton Methodist Church, giving a very touching and pathetic account of Mr. Garford's last illness. In this communication Mr. Platt says: "After three hours his consciousness and speech returned, and he assured his wife that he had seen visions that could not be told. Through the remainder of the night, 'Hosanna! Hosanna!' was frequently lisped with a rapt expression almost more than human. From this time he gradually sank into a stupor from which he slipped away without a struggle. On the previous night he aroused, and with a clear voice sang the Doxology, 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow,' entirely through."

In his address, which was delivered with much emotion, Dr. Talmage said: "We gather to-day to do honour to one of the Lord's evangelists, who was a contributor from foreign lands to this, and who was the subject of a mother's prayers. As I was passing out of Rowland Hill's old Surrey Chapel in London, in 1879, this man's mother said to me, 'Give my love to Osborne when you get back to America.' Brother Garford came to this country in worldly business, but the Lord made of him a wonderful instrument of usefulness. One of his most remarkable characteristics was earnestness. He felt in every fibre of his body and passion of his soul the great realities of Eternity. I met him often and again, when he was discussing the question whether he should give his entire life to evangelism. I know the motives by which he was plied and that they were of the most elevated nature. To prove his earnestness and sincerity I have only to tell you that he wore himself out in the cause of Christ. Religion was with him a great exhilaration. Among the fields of usefulness which he cultivated was a Sunday-night service in one of the theatres of this city, by which scores—some of whom had been the victims of the intoxicating cup—were saved for this world and the next."

Dr. Talmage spoke of the long series of services held by Mr. Garford in the Strong-place Baptist Church, at Ocean Grove camp meeting, where he preached the Gospel with great power and momentous results, and in the Greenwood Baptist Church, at which he was the means of saving 300 souls. Continuing, he said: "The closing work of his life was done at Southampton and Long Island. How many hundreds of souls by his labours were brought out of the darkness of sin into the light of the Gospel, eternity alone can tell. What a great welcome home Osborne W. Garford must have received. If there is joy in heaven over sinners forgiven, do you not suppose they understand who are the instruments of the glorious work? Multitudes of the redeemed before the throne must have mingled in the reception, and, more than all, Christ welcomed him with the plaudit, 'Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.'"

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

BROOKLYN.

A SERIES of Gospel meetings are being held by the Rev. G. F. Pentecost at Dr. Cuyler's Church. About a hundred have been added to Mr. Pentecost's Home Church this winter, and as many more led to Christ in connection with his Mission work among the poor.

PARIS CITY MISSION.

By the blessing of Almighty God, great success has been attained in connection with this very important work in Paris. Seven missionaries now penetrate into the lowest parts of the city, and in face of much opposition, succeed in bringing the power of the Bible to bear upon the people. The Committee, indeed, have constant and abundant cause for thankfulness, as many soul's are being brought into the light of the knowledge of the Gospel of Christ. To sustain the present effort, they ask for renewed support. —Mr. J. M. Weylland, 31, Carlton-hill, St. John's Wood, N.W., is Hon. Sec.

GERMAN MISSIONS.

Hearing, as we so often do in this country, sad complaints about the decay of missionary zeal, it is cheering to read of a different state of things amongst our friends the Baptists in Germany. Their organ, Der Wahrheitszeuge (Hamburg, March 1), says:—"We are rejoiced to learn that our congregations and Sunday-schools have evinced during the past year so lively an interest in Missions to the heathen. Our brother, Philip Braun, informs us that the large Sunday-school collections of last year enabled us to station, not three alone, but four to six natives as missionaries to their own countrymen in Burmah." [This Mission is to the Karens of Burmah, and is spreading, through native agency, to other tribes.] "The gifts for the Zenana mission among the Telugus have also considerably increased. These are encouraging signs of a new awakening of the missionary spirit, which may be traced to human influence and effort, but the hand of the Lord is seen in it all."

Rev. W. H. Aitken's Engagements.—March 31 to April 16, Wareham; April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

Mr. Francis Murphy will conduct Gospel Temperance Missions: March 25 to 31, Wood Green, London; April 1 to 15, Manchester; April 22 to May 22, chief towns of Norfolk; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London. Applications for Mr. Francis Murphy and Mr. Thomas F. Murphy's services should be made to "The Secretary," 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C.

Mr. Henry Thorne will conduct Missions: March 23 to April 3, Belfast; April 4, Carlisle; April 5, Derby; April 6, London; April 7 to 9, Margate; April 10, Ramsgate; April 12, Stamford; April 13 to 15, Lincoln; April 18, Bury; April 21 to 30, Macclesfield.

THE MERCHANTS' LECTURE.—In consequence of the closing of the Weigh House Chapel, the last of the lectures in this historic chapel was delivered last Tuesday, March 27, by the Rev. Edward White. Till definite arrangements have been made, and until further notice, this lecture will be delivered as usual on every Tuesday, from twelve to one, in Finsbury Chapel, Little Moorfields. The Rev. Dr. Aveling will be the lecturer for the month of April, commencing on the 3rd. proximo.

GIFFORD HALL MISSION.—On Thursday, March 15, the anniversary meeting of this Mission was held in the Mission Hall, Gifford-street, Caledonian-road. The report stated that the enlargement of the premises during the past year had left the treasurer with a balance of £65 on the wrong side. The operations of the Mission include many agencies for the spiritual and physical good of the people; it was stated as an instance of the activity of the workers, that during one week recently thirty-three meetings had been held. Excellent addresses were given by Mr. C. E. Mudie (Chairman), Mr. W. J. Orsman, Revs. J. Jones and Julius Churchill, Mr. George Smith of Coalville, Mr. B. Clarke, and others. We commend this earnest effort to the sympathy of our readers.

MR. JOSEPH COOK ON REVIVALS.

A BOSTON MONDAY "PRELUDE."

SPIRITUAL efficiency is the measure of the worth of all creeds, sects, and churches. Efficiency in what? In delivering men from the love of sin and the guilt of it. We know beyond a peradventure that without this double deliverance there can be no peace under the moral law which conscience reveals, and which ethical science itself proclaims, and which all the pages of revelation flame with like so many Sinais. Lessing said that the ultimate test of the worth of sects would be found in their ability to produce new men, religious lives, spiritually regenerate populations. This is nothing but the yet unfathomed saying of the Scriptures: "By their fruits ye shall know them"—that is, creeds, theologies, sects, churches, ages. This is the scientific test, this is the biblical test, and to this crucial standard of judgment we must bring unflinchingly our luxurious Churches, our loose-thinking and siren pulpits. . . . .

Would to God there were a thousand Edwardses, a thousand Whitefields, a thousand Wesleys, a thousand Lyman Beechers, a thousand Finneys, a thousand Moodys on the globe, and that ten of each of these classes could go round the world as evangelists every ten years! . . .

What will be the leading characteristics of the Church for the times, if we are to take American experience as indicating the probable lines of development in in Free Churches in ages to come? The Church for the times will reach the whole population.

John Wesley said once: "Beware how you invite rich men into your Churches until you are sure they are Christian. Beware how you manage your Churches in such a way that rich men will become a necessity to you. If your church buildings are so luxurious that you need an enormous income, wealthy men will be necessary to you, and they will rule you, and then you must soon bid farewell to Methodist discipline, and, perhaps, to Methodist doctrine." A wiser thing was never said. A more unpopular thing, perhaps, could hardly be repeated at this hour; but the truth is—and, as I am not a pastor or preacher and as nobody can suppose that I am making oblique personal references here, I venture to say—that even in Republican America and especially in the wealthy and fashionable society of cities, there are a great many luxurious Churches, that do not want poor men as members. When a revival occurs, the question concerning many converts is, not "Are they soundly Christians?" but "How much are they worth?" "What is their social standing?" "Am I willing to have one of these converts next me in a pew?" "Are they likely to add anything important to the financial or social strength of our society?" Under the voluntary system we must have money and must draw rich men into the Churches; but, if they stand there on their money-bags, and ask to be measured not according to the height of their Christian character, but according to the height of these pedestals of worldliness—wealth, social position, hereditary rank, connection with public affairs—then I say the time has come for us to cast abroad God's truths as scythes to mow down all these unnatural growths! On the floor of God's house

HE IS TALLEST WHO IS NEAREST TO GOD.

Let nobody suppose that I am opposing rich men as a class. A man is a man even though his father was rich. There have been in this country, and there are now among us, rich men who are apostles. Lately there fell in New York City the central trunk of a banyan tree, of which it has been well said by Dr. Cuyler that it threw down a stem into almost every land of the globe. William E. Dodge spread abroad his benefactions, his personal Christian effort, his oversight of great religious enterprises, until he was a power in India, a power in the Sandwich Islands, a power in Japan, a power in half of the states of this Union. We have many men, not known to the public and not very wealthy, who are the almoners of the Churches, of the philanthropic institutions, of the colleges and the schools. . . . . But the time comes, occasionally, when it is necessary to say that men must be measured by character, and not by their purses or their social pedestals. We must resist, therefore, the idea that any Church is too good to be enlarged from any part of the population of a city. I call a luxurious Church that is not ready to receive membership from any quarter of the population a social preserve, and not a Church.

THE TWO WORST EVILS OF OUR TIME

inside the domain of Christendom are probably luxurious living among Church-members and loose thinking among religious teachers. And when the two go together and we have a religious club, instead of a Church, a club in which, of course, it would be uncourteous to suppose that there are any sinners, a club that has forgotten that all men are brethren and that the business of the Church is to stand between the living and the dead; when we have a number of such Churches connected by close social ties and, perhaps, giving direction to great central currents in the religious life of a city, the time then has come to awaken all the powers of the pulpit and the press and the platform against the choking of God's most holy truth by purse-strings and by ribbons and by dashes of the lavender waters of liberalism. I am speaking very frankly; but the truth is that the case needs stern surgery. . . . .

The Church for the times will emphasise the hidden half of Christian unity. It will call often for union meetings of all denominations and organise united efforts for common purposes. It will ascertain what hinders individuals from accepting Christianity: it will receive questions and organise searching inquiries as to the current obstacles to conversion. If I were a pastor, I should do again what I did once, when for a year I was acting pastor: keep a question-box open constantly for those timid people who cannot go to a pastor's study and discuss their difficulties with him. I might have a committee to examine the questions and weed out frivolous and vexatious ones; but very few of these would be put, after all, as you would find by experience. Several pastors, to my knowledge, have tried question-boxes in their churches, and, with a certain wise oversight, differing in each individual case, these enterprises have turned out well. Either in my Sabbath-school or at the church-door I would have a question-box always open for anonymous written inquiries on the topics discussed in the pulpit or in the Sabbath-school. I would bring out in all ways the secret intellectual and moral difficulties of my parish, and thus I would learn to fire, not into the air, but at the white of the eye. Romanism has its confessional, and Protestantism ought to be permitted to have its question-box, to reveal the wants of the people. The secret of securing attention is to say the thing that needs to be said; but one method of ascertaining what needs to be said is to study carefully the secret questions the people are raising. . . . .

The Church for the times will teach all Church members to converse on personal religion with the religiously irresolute. . . . . You say Church members cannot be trusted to do this work? They can, with a proper amount of teaching from their pastor. He is a wretched Church member who does not know how to answer the question, "What must I do to be saved?" But here is a man whose bargains have run as close to lies the last week, it may be, as the eyelid to the eyeball, and the neighbour he has cheated sits at his side, and this shrewd merchant is expected to talk with his neighbour on the conditions of salvation. The discipline is as good for the merchant as for his neighbour. Nothing makes a live man out of a dead man so soon as to set the dead man at the work of producing life in another dead man. These conversations quicken the Church immensely, and I believe ought to be made a standard part of devotional meetings in the Church, in our climate, in the winter. But the whole world is not in our climate. There are Churches that ought to be like the tropical forests, always bringing forth fruit, always filled with blossoms—buds here opening, fruit there dropping. Our seasons are such that in the long evenings of winter we have special opportunities; and this proves only that our Church affairs should be managed something as the agricultural affairs of our zone are. Let us always be preparing to put in the seed, or putting in seed, or protecting seed that has been put in, or reaping the harvest.

The Church for the times will prepare for revivals, as the spring prepares in its earlier for its later season. The Church for the times will protect the fruit of revivals, as the summer ripens the birth of spring.

My central idea concerning revivals is that what are called the evils of revivals, by those who oppose them, usually arise because proper work has not been done before the revivals, or proper work is not done after them. A revival is only like the opening of the clouds in the spring and the beating down of the sunlight, or like the dropping of the gentle showers and the vernal rains. What will the sunlight, what will the rain do without the deep planting of the seed, or without the careful watching of the fields after the tender shoots have sprung forth?

MR. MOODY'S REVIVALS,

I believe, have turned out thoroughly well in every case where they have been followed up properly. On both sides of the Atlantic I have watched public sentiment concerning his work. I confess that I am one of his most earnest admirers. I offer prayer every day of my life that God will pour out upon his labours blessing above all I can ask or think. A few men say his work here or there has not eventuated well. Did the pastors follow it up? Was the seed deeply planted before he came? He is nothing but the shower, he is nothing but the opening in the clouds. God seems to speak through some evangelists; He gives them power to open the heavens and let the sunlight in upon spiritual fields. By endowment of Heaven, this capacity was in Edwards, it was in Whitefield, it was in Wesley and Finney, and it is in many an evangelist of to-day, thank God; but we must remember that the planting of the seed and the attending to the green shoots are quite as important as allowing the sunlight and rain to fall upon the fields.

In this city I happen to know that certain revered pastors—who sit on this platform at this moment and whom I must not name—have followed up carefully the converts who came forward in their fields of labour, in Mr. Moody's revival; and that, if you go to these pastors and ask what has been the result of Mr. Moody's effort here, they will say it has been glorious. In two or three instances reformed drunkards have become large benefactors of the Churches, both spiritually and financially. The men who have followed up these converts give you a good report of Mr. Moody's work; but the men who folded their hands, the men who said, "Let the harvest take care of itself," the men who were immersed in luxurious lives and had torpid congregations, and who did not care to soil the skirts of their Churches with any acquisitions from unpopular portions of our masses—these persons, if you approach them, have, usually, only a cold answer to give to any question as to the effect of Mr. Moody's work here. I care nothing for the answers of such men. I repudiate such men as authorities concerning this work.

Greatly as we in America revere Mr. Moody's work, I found in Edinburgh deeper reverence for it than I find, on the whole, in Boston. I found in London, on the whole, higher esteem for it than I have been able to find, usually, in New York. On both sides of the Atlantic, wherever I have been in fields he has visited, I have had abundant proof that his work, when followed up by the local pastors, has eventuated successfully. Look at Oxford! Were not the young men reached there? Why were they reached? Chiefly because God's truth was boldly preached and made fruitful by his Spirit; but partly, also, because Mr. Moody's hands were held up by men of position in the Established Church * Were his hands held up here? Did Harvard professors stand by him here, as Oxford professors stood by him in the British Islands, as Edinburgh professors stood by him in Scotland? I happen to know a dozen glorious men of learning who thought it an honour to go into the inquiry meetings and converse with the religiously irresolute in Edinburgh and in London.

Dr. Crafts, of Brooklyn, lately sent out a hundred letters to preachers and Sabbath-school superintendents, and put the question: "How many of you came into the Church during periods of religious awakening, commonly called revivals?" The answer was, four-sevenths. As I part from this theme.

I SHALL DO A VERY AUDACIOUS THING.

I will explain exactly what I mean to do, so that none of you can suppose I am trying to catch any of you unawares. I am about to ask all Christians in this assembly to rise—all Christians, Protestant or Romish, Evangelical or un-Evangelical. This is putting the case very broadly and at a disadvantage to the propositions I am defending. Then I am about to ask all those Christians to sit down who did not come into the Church in some period of religious awakening, by which I mean a period in which a considerable number came into the Church under special effort. I do not mean a month's special effort or that the effort was in the Methodist form, or the Congregationalist, or the Presbyterian, or the Episcopalian; I mean simply a religious awakening, occurring under some particular measures, to make religion a personal matter. How many of the Christians in this assembly came into the Church under such effort? I believe we shall find that more than half did so.

In every religious service the Church for the times will make religion a personal matter, and will preach so as to secure immediate decision of the soul to accept God in Christ as both Saviour and Lord. We have had preaching to the intellect, we have had preaching to the emotions, we have had preaching to the fancy; the time is coming when no preaching will be considered thoroughly Evangelical unless it is addressed to the will. In every religious service religion ought to be made in some way a personal matter. I would have every prayer include in it petitions implying the total self-surrender of the will to God.

Now, my friends, you will favour me with this expression which I have explained in advance, and on which I have allowed you time to think. Will all Christians in this assembly please rise? [Apparently 2500 of an audience of over 3000 rose.] Really, this is an expression that I did not expect. This assembly represents all the Evangelical bodies. It is a most cheerful fact that certainly more than 2000 people rise here as Christians. Will such of you as did not come into the Church in some period of special religious awakening, commonly called a revival, such of you as did not come in through a gateway of special religious effort, sit down, and will the rest remain standing? [The request was heeded.] My friends, it is certain that, at least, four-sevenths of the 2000 or more Christians of this assembly have remained standing; two-thirds, some of the gentlemen behind me say, some three-fourths. I thank you most cordially for this expression. Any form of special religious effort that has brought half or four-sevenths of our Christians into the Church is sufficiently justified in experience by the Divine approval.—New York Independent.

* Mr. Cook rather overstates the case; the number of professors and Church clergymen in Oxford who co-operated with Mr. Moody was comparatively small.

THE UPPER ROOM IN SPITALFIELDS.

ON Wednesday night of last week, the east wind was keen and cutting enough to make every one wish to stay at their own fireside who had no powerful motive impelling them to encounter its ruthless embrace. However, it did not deter the usual quota of Christian workers from being present at Miss Macpherson's monthly reception in the upper room of the Spitalfields Beehive. We suppose we may safely conjecture that everybody, like ourselves, was delighted to see our hostess looking quite refreshed in body, as she certainly seemed to be refreshed in spirit, by her trip to Rome, and the experiences of her short stay in that famous city.

Miss Macpherson was recounting these experiences as we entered the room, handing round, for all to see, some very attractive photographs and coloured sketches of Mrs. Wall's "Beggars," and the Romish peasants who act as models for the devotees of the brush. She had much that was deeply interesting to tell of the Christian work among these classes, of meetings for the women who wash clothes at "the fountain" the livelong day, of Signor Capellini and his truly wonderful work among the Italian soldiery, of the King himself, who drives his own carriage through the streets of his capital, and "appears to be the most affable gentleman in all Rome," and of other notable persons and things besides. She was privileged to meet about 300 Christian workers, of various names, who are seeking to propagate evangelical truth under the very shadow of the Vatican. We were also told something of a sore famine that prevails at present in the north of Italy, and of the efforts of certain young Englishmen to relieve the distress of these starving families, as well as to find occupation for the multitudes of youth who haunt the streets of the Celestial City, with scarce anyone to care for soul or body. We gladly mention in this connection that a neat little book has been prepared by Miss Macpherson, entitled "Rome: a Help to Find the Christians who are Working for the Master." She desires it to be used not only as a handy guide to English Christian travellers in Italy, but as a bond of sympathy between the workers in Rome and friends at home. Some Christian lady, she suggested, might be willing to write an occasional letter of cheer, and send a 10s. gift, say to Signor Capellini or Mrs. Wall, or any other worker mentioned in the little book. It only costs a penny, and can be had from the Home of Industry, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E., or at 20, Piazza di Spagna, Rome.

Miss Macpherson's informal talk during the closing minutes of the tea hour being ended, some considerable time was very profitably spent in praise and prayer, the latter consisting, at Lord Radstock's suggestion, of brief definite petitions, chiefly for blessing upon various fields of Christian work at home and abroad, and those engaged in them.

The words of exhortation afterwards given by Lord Radstock were based on John xii. 23, "We would see Jesus." Herein, he said, lies the principle of fruitfulness in service. It might reverently be said of Jesus that, from a human point of view, his life was a failure; but having died, as the seed-corn laid in the ground, He began to bear fruit. There is such a deep rest in the death of self. If one should hear of a believer being in unrest, and should ask the cause, we are sure soon to hear of "I——"; this is the cause of all the unrest. It was because the Saviour became obedient to death that God so highly exalted Him. The whole Church of Christ is the outcome of that death, as the whole ear of corn is the fruit of one seed that died. It is not in the Cross that we find the secret of power, but in the Risen One, who, by way of the Cross and the grave, has gone to the right hand of the Father. Now He rules "in the midst of his enemies;" and how? In his members which are upon the earth.

Then, as the corn brings forth fruit after its kind, so it is the Christ-life that is in his Church, despite the imperfections of the flesh (which remain, as is painfully evident, notwithstanding all that is said to the contrary). The life comes from the root, and all the pruning of the branches is to throw it back on the root. So all the dealings of God with us in chastisement or trial is to take away from us our feeling of independence and cast us back on the Lord, who is the source of all our power. The treasure is in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us. We, the living believers, are to be always delivered to death, that the life of Jesus may be manifested in our mortal flesh. What a comfort this is to us, all the more when we are surrounded with "difficulties." Perhaps there has been self-consciousness and dependence on false foundations; all these must be withered up so that we may do God's work in God's way. It is when we come to an end of ourselves, and become as "little children," that we receive the kingly power of God. "All we like sheep have gone astray;" but Christ carries the lambs in his arms. What a blessing to get lower and lower, till the "I" disappears altogether. We are to die with Him as well as to suffer for Him; then we shall have the experience of his Resurrection Life.

The following notes kindly furnished to us will supply some details of the work referred to before our reporter's arrival at the meeting:—

Miss Macpherson spoke with joy of the work of grace which had begun in the midst of those among whom she was labouring, and asked prayer that it might continue; also that the hearts of the ungodly around might be softened to receive the Gospel message.

The band of fifty elder boys will sail by Sarmatian, April 12, under the care of Mr. George Thom, who for many years past has been engaged in visiting our children placed out in Canada. A second party of fifty boys, with the little girls, will sail in May. Mrs. Birt's first party from Liverpool is now on the ocean; at family altars remember these little ones.

Mr. Merry reports from Galt that he is out evangelising in the villages; the difficulties of locomotion, however, are great, owing to the severe weather. In some places the snow-drifts are over the top of the railway cars. Still the people come over the frozen snow, three or four miles, to hear God's message.

We are interested this week in hearing of the marriage of three of our grown-up little girls. Prayer is asked for our faithful nurse Martha, who for seven years has served us among the little ones, but is now waiting to go to be with Jesus.

THE McALL MISSION.—We understand that Rev. R. W. McAll, of Paris, is to pay a visit to London of ten days from April 3. He is to be accompanied by the Rev. W. W. Newell, of the United States, now one of the Directors of the McAll Mission, who is an able and effective speaker, so that the information they have to give cannot fail to be highly interesting. A meeting at the Conference Hall, Mildmay, is to be held on the afternoon of Wednesday, April 4, at three o'clock, which we hope will be a good one.

CITY OF LONDON TOTAL ABSTAINERS' UNION.—The fifth annual meeting of this Union was held last week in the Lecture Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, Aldersgate-street; Mr. S. Morley, M.P., in the chair. The report, read by Mr. Orchard, the Secretary, stated that the past year had been a most successful and encouraging one. The operations of the union were not confined to wholesale houses, but had also been extended, with satisfactory results, to retail establishments. As a result of the meetings, 750 persons had taken the blue ribbon or signed the pledge, while more than 200 had joined the Union. The Chairman, in his address, said he was speaking, he hoped, to not a few future heads of houses of business, and he wished to tell them that just in proportion as they kept their feet on the neck of the animal, and kept down the tendency so natural to the young of self-indulgence, so would the probability of their success in life rise and increase. With regard to Sunday closing, he thought that the fact of the working classes having declared themselves in favour of the movement, as evidenced by their intention to hold a mass meeting with that object on Whit Monday, was a sign that the matter would be speedily settled. Mr. A. M. Sullivan delivered an eloquent address in favour of the objects of the Union, and spoke of the excellent effects of the Sunday Closing Act in Ireland.

"COME, LORD JESUS: COME QUICKLY."

My Dear Sir,—I venture to enclose you our invitation to Christians everywhere to engage in special prayer and preparation for our dear Lord's return. If we get that, we get everything; and if it is the one thing needful, we ought to seek it openly. May I add that The Christian is one of the delights of my heart?—Believe me, my dear sir and brother, yours in our "Long-expected Jesus," H. B. Macartney, Jr.

Caulfield, Victoria, Jan. 30.

AN INVITATION

From the Melbourne Prayer Union, to All who Love the Lord's Appearing.

FELLOW-WATCHERS, of all nations, in all lands—If your hopes are built on the coming of Christ, will you unite with us in prayer that He may come speedily? We have only just awakened to the consciousness of a grand omission. What has hitherto been done in secret, we believe should have been done openly. We have at last "agreed together" to pray for that which above all other things we most desire. We celebrated the morning of the New Year by meeting together for this one purpose—to entreat the Lord Jesus not to delay his coming. We had never heard of nor read of a similar gathering; but it was so Scriptural, so satisfying, so divinely blessed, that while our hearts are full, our lips must speak. It may be that thousands in other parts of the world may wish to do as we have done; we, therefore, make an urgent appeal to all who look for a personal Saviour, to form themselves at once, without delay, and without ceremony, into Prayer Unions, or praying bands. We base this suggestion upon the following grounds:—

(1) We are taught in the Old Testament to pray for the coming of Christ to reign over the House of Jacob. The Lord Jesus has pledged Himself in the most solemn and public way, never to rest, never to hold his peace, till Zion shines again "as a lamp that burneth." He has, moreover, appointed "Watchmen" and "Remembrancers," who are never to keep silence, who are to co-operate with Him in perpetual intercession until God makes "Jerusalem a praise in the earth" (Isa. lxii. 1—7). These "watchers" and "remembrancers" are not necessarily Jews. All who "make mention of the Lord" should pray for the peace of "the city of the Great King." Supplication for Israel, therefore, being an eminently Scriptural exercise, should form an integral part of every branch Union.

(2) We are taught both in the Old and in the New Testament to pray for the coming of Christ, to take away his waiting people. (a) The legitimacy of a union of prayer for the restoration of Israel involves the legitimacy of prayer for the return of Jesus. When Jesus comes to deliver Jerusalem, it will be after He has come to take away his saints. They are to "follow Him" when He issues out of heaven "to smite the nations with a sharp sword" (Rev. xix.) They are to be "with Him" when his feet stand on the Mount of Olives (Zec. xiv.) Prayer for the second blessing comprehends prayer for the first. He cannot rebuild Zion until He has translated his Church. (b) We are not only directed to pray for the Lord's appearing in the New Testament; we are given the very words of prayer—"Thy kingdom come." "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus." What the whole creation "groans and travails" for, we may surely ask for. "Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of spices" (Cant. viii. 14.) (c) The Lord Jesus Christ Himself is "Our Hope" (1 Tim. i. 1). We have no other. If He does not come, things will continue as they are, and things as they are are well nigh intolerable. The souls under the altar cry with a loud voice—"How long, O Lord, holy and true?" (Rev. vi. 10). "And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto Him? I tell you that He will avenge them speedily" (Luke xviii. 7, 8).

(d) This daily and nightly cry is not the fruit of mere sentiment or of selfishness; it is wrung out of us by a dire necessity. Satan occupies a kingly seat. He is the "god of this world;" he goes about as a roaring lion, as a venomous serpent, as an angel of light, revelling in seduction and slaughter. Working Christians are indeed earnestly busy. Here and there they "save a few with fear, pulling them out of the fire," but the great majority idle their life away, considering themselves instead of "considering Him," giving moments to God instead of months, and pence instead of whole burnt offerings. The pitiable condition of the world, as set forth in Scripture, teaches us and forces us to pray, and so does the condition of the Church. Why tarry the wheels of his chariot? Why has there been such a long parenthesis between the promise and the fulfilment? Because all God's Noahs have not yet entered the ark, and all God's Lots have not yet entered into Zoar, and all God's Egyptians are not yet sheltered from the hail; and "God cannot do anything till they be come thither." The delay is because of the elect. They are not all gathered in, and that is because of our indolence and because of our self-will. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few." As soon as the last effort is made, and the last of the elect is gathered, Jesus will come.

Now, if we ask Him to come, that is going to the root of the matter. God will take care that everything else happens in its order and in its season. We need not fear for our dear ones unawakened still. The prayer, "Come, Lord Jesus," shelters them. His coming involves the latter rain which precedes his coming (it may be the latter rain is falling now), and involves, moreover, the safety of the chosen. Unbelief may cause us to lose countless treasures from the superfluities of grace; but no unbelief can sunder the Bridegroom from the bride—"All that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me" (John vi. 37).

Hallelujah! who shall part
Christ's own Church from Christ's own heart?

(3) A Union of this kind must be infinitely pleasing to God the Holy Ghost. We need not dwell on the joy it will convey to the Lord Jesus Christ Himself to know that He is so sorely missed, so devoutly longed for. When He says, "Arise, My love, My fair one, and come away," he adds, "Let Me hear thy voice"—the sweet voice of prayer—the "Turn, My beloved" (Cant. ii. 13-17), for "How can I come to Thee except Thou return to me." But we must dwell on the joy which a world-wide Second Advent Prayer Union will convey to the Holy Ghost. It is now his delight both to glorify Jesus and to quicken souls; and will not Jesus be more glorified, and will not more souls be quickened after the second coming than before? We may therefore be sure of his presence if we gather together with our hearts set on this one thing—the glorious return of God's dear Son. What is a joy to every true believer is a joy to the blessed Spirit in the believer, and we could imagine few greater earthly joys than to pass from one Second Advent Prayer-meeting to another, to see the lovers of the Lord Jesus waiting upon his very "own self," and beseeching Him in the most touching terms to hasten his appearing. What fervent pleas we would hear for dying Gentiles, for scattered Israel, for the widowed Church! Such meetings would be "holiness meetings" indeed—assemblies of heaven-born sons and daughters met to please the Spirit by "looking for and hasting on the coming of the day of God."

(4) There is a promise of peculiar blessing connected with the attitude into which this Union must inevitably throw us. One Evangelist alone records it. In Luke xvii. 7, the Saviour describes an earthly master, and his earthly method with his servant. The labourer must work in the field until meal time, and when his work in the field is done he has still to continue working in the house. He must get ready his master's supper, gird himself and serve him, before he attends to his own wants. But in Luke xii. 37 we find something very different. It is not labour added to labour, service in the house following service in the field, attending to his lord first and then attending to himself. No! Jesus will interrupt and change this natural order—"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that He shall gird Himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." What grace we shall require to be able to bear that!

(5.) There is an exact correspondence between our position before the second coming of Christ and the position of Old Testament believers before His first coming. The hope of Christ filled their minds, and coloured their whole life. He was what they longed for. Jacob cried, "I have waited for Thy salvation, O Lord!" (Gen. xlix. 18). Hezekiah wept sore, because, he said, "I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord, in the land of the living" (Isaiah xxxviii. 11); and of all the watchers about the time of the Incarnation, from the aged Simeon to Joseph of Arimathea, Anna was the chief, and she "departed not out of the Temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day"—prayers that ripened into thanksgiving when she saw the child Jesus (Luke ii. 25-38; xxiii. 51). To ask that He may come quickly, is simply to do what others have done who desired Him above everything, and to obey the prophecy, "Prayer also shall be made for Him continually." Him for whom we daily pray, we shall most surely daily look for, and daily praise (Ps. lxxii. 15).

(6) "There is an exact correspondence between our position before the coming of Christ and the position of the disciples before the coming of the Holy Ghost." The promise of the Spirit was given in Luke xxiv. 49, but the time of his coming was not named. The Lord Jesus said, "Not many days hence," but He did not say how many (Acts i. 5). Prayer was, however, begun at once, and was continued until it was answered. Now, the promise, "Surely I come quickly," in Rev. xxii. 20, is as real a promise as that in Acts i. 5, so that the Church, in order to imitate the practice of the early disciples, should have continued "instant in prayer" throughout the dispensation. If this most holy exercise has been so long and so sinfully neglected, ought we not, with all the intenser earnestness, to give ourselves to it now?

(7) Lastly, the immediate formation of Branch Unions is attended with no difficulty whatever. They may exist with or without cards of membership, with or without public meetings. Minister may join with minister, brother with brother, sister with sister, friend with friend, as well as multitude with multitude. The one, the great pre-requisite, is for two or three in every place to be inwardly convinced that Jesus personally present is what they want, what the Church wants, what the world wants—that the whole creation is quivering in pain beneath the "rod of her oppressor," and that there will be a daily increase of calamity until that Blessed One comes back whose right creation is, and whose shall be the kingdom and the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

BLACKGANG MISSION.

WE have lately concluded a three weeks' Mission in our Hall. A large muster came together from the surrounding districts night after night, although the villages from which they gathered are from two to five miles distant.

The Mission services were conducted by Miss Ruth Brryman, a converted Jewess. This young lady was brought to Christ about three years ago, and has since devoted herself to evangelistic work. She speaks with great power and fervour, and the Lord has owned her service for Him in the various places in which she has laboured.

Some twenty-four souls (chiefly young men) decided for Christ during the Mission, and others who were awakened under the preaching of the Gospel in the hall, decided for the Lord at the chapels in the neighbourhood to which they respectively belonged. We have already heard encouraging testimony regarding th courage of some of the young converts, in bearing witness to the blessing which they have received.

The Gospel Temperance work continues to give us much cause for thanksgiving. We have now 269 names in our books; 160 of these are adults, and 109 junior members. Of the former (with but few exceptions) all are Christians. We have great need in our work of some place where those coming from a distance (some of whom are mothers with children in arms) might rest between the services on the Lord's-day.

For want of this accommodation, our Young Men's Bible-class, on Sunday afternoon, also suffers, many desirous of joining being unable to do so, on account of the long distances which they have to walk to and fro on the Lord's-day If, therefore, we could add to our present Mission Hall a few additional rooms, the advantages gained would be manifold.

Our dear Christians and ourselves have been for some time in much prayer that the Lord would lay it on the heart of some of his wealthy children to supply our need in this respect. It has been estimated that the additional building would cost £500, and that our present Mission Hall (to which it is proposed to add the new building) could be purchased for a like sum, i.e., £500, thus saving the expense of the rent, which amounts to £40 a year, and which has been met by Mr. Reade for the last ten years nearly.

We are looking forward to the speedy return (God willing) of Mr. and Mrs. Reade from their year's sojourn in India. They were to leave Bombay on the 15th of this month, and we met in the Hall for special prayer on that day to commend them to the Lord. Miss Reade and I, with the kind assistance of Mr. Kelsey, have been carrying on the work here during their absence, and have much cause to thank the Lord for his gracious tokens of blessing. F. H.

Letters to the Editor.

CLEANSING BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see a paper on 1 John i. 7, in a recent number, from the Rev. Evan Hopkins, for I have long felt that the current misinterpretation of that text calls for its being more carefully considered by Christians than in many cases it seems to be.

I was very glad to see that Mr. Hopkins rejects "the erroneous doctrine of the eradication of the sinful principle which the Scripture calls 'the flesh.'" Nevertheless, I cannot but think that his view that the cleansing spoken of in this passage is that of "our inner being," "cleansing in the sense of purifying our thoughts and desires," will not stand close examination.

Lest I be misunderstood, let me say that I fully believe in such cleansing, but I think it should be attributed to the work of the Spirit, not to the blood. The Communion Service of the Church of England contains a very Scriptural prayer for such cleansing in the words, "Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of Thy Holy Spirit," but this is not "cleansing by blood."

The chief objection to taking 1 John i. 7 in this sense is, that it runs counter to all the teaching of the Levitical types as to what "cleansing by blood" means. The Apostle John, of all writers in the New Testament, most abounds with allusions to the Levitical ritual, and here, in particular, we may see the leading features of the great day of atonement alluded to.

(1) In contrast to the Old Covenant, where "God said He would dwell in the thick darkness," we have the Gospel revelation that "God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all," and in this light we are called to "walk as He is in the light." The veil now is rent, the access is free.

(2) As "not without blood" could the high priest enter in under the law, so we enter in and are maintained in the presence of God by virtue of the cleansing blood, whose virtue must surely be understood sacrificially in this connection.

(3) As on the day of atonement, the blood of one goat for a sin-offering was sprinkled before God, and over the head of the other confession was made of the sins that had been atoned for, so in 1 John i. 7 we have the cleansing blood answering to the blood of the sin offering, and in the next verse we have the confession of sin suggested by what was done with the other—the scapegoat.

(4) As in Lev. xvi. we have the high priest standing before God in virtue of the blood of propitiation which he carried in with him, so in 1 John ii. 1 "we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins."

(5) The result of the atonement made that day in Israel is summed up thus, Lev. xvi. 30: "On that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the Lord." This, I would submit, is the true key to the right understanding of "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." The Greek word for "cleanse" is the same word as that used by the LXX. in Lev. xvi. 30.

As the blood of atonement neither eradicated sin from Israel nor purified their "inner being," but was a gracious bestowal of forgiveness of sin, whereby their communion with God was maintained, so it seems to me we should be careful not to allow the glorious counterpart of this typical truth to be explained in any other sense, and surely we are guided as to the sense in which the blood cleanses by such a text as, "In whom we have redemption through His blood—the forgiveness of sins—according to the riches of His grace" (Eph. i. 7).

The arguments used in the paper referred to call for some special notice.

1. "The cleansing is conditional." But is it so? It would be so if we read it thus: "If we walk in the light as He is in the light, the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." But this is not what is written; the conditional element in the sentence comes to an end with the words, "we have fellowship one with another," making thereby the balance of the whole sentence complete, as anyone may see who reads from the beginning of verse 6. The words under consideration are an appended or added statement, such as we find often brought in by St. John as the introduction of a new idea, which is then taken up and carried on in the following verses.

2. But even if these words were not appended to, but formed part of, the conditional element in the sentence, there is another point worthy of attention, which is that the word "conditional" is a misnomer; "evidential" is rather the word that should be used. Take a parallel case in John iv. 12: "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us." This surely does not mean that God does not dwell in us until the condition is fulfilled of our loving one another; but it means that our loving one another is an evidence that God dwelleth in us. So in the passage under consideration: "If we say that we have fellowship with God, and" our actions testify to the reverse, we lie; but if our actions accord with our profession they testify to the truth of that profession. "If" consequently is here not "conditional" but "evidential," and our walking in the light (which I agree with Mr. Hopkins is practical conduct, not mere knowledge) is evidence of our having fellowship with God, which fellowship, as the appended sentence tells us, is maintained by the cleansing blood.

I fear to trespass on your space, so shall add no more than that I would strongly urge on all who are interested in this inquiry to rise above the very unsatisfactory teaching of commentaries as to this point, and to let the Word of God—especially that part which deals with the way in which the Jews would understand the cleansing blood—throw light upon it. This text has cheered the hearts of thousands of God's people, who have taken it in what I cannot but call its simple sense; and we should be very jealous, with a godly jealousy, of allowing it to be turned from this sense into another in which at once we feel that we have lost the sacrifical value of the blood.

Those who teach the erroneous view of the eradication of sin are at least consistent, for whether we take it as "all" or "every sin," they at least believe in a thorough cleansing, which the view suggested in the paper does not, unless we admit, which I am sure the writer would not, that there is never any interruption of the believer's "inward purity." Yours very truly,

Dovercourt. Henry E. Brooke.

P.S.—There is a sense in which the blood of Christ affects the walk of a believer, when brought to bear upon the heart as a motive for holiness. This may be seen in the "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were redeemed . . . . with the precious blood of Christ" of 1 Peter i. 18, and in the "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price," of 1 Cor. vi. 19. But I do not think that any New Testament writer—much less John—would describe this indirect effect of the blood upon the walk in such words as, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin"—words which speak not of a provision merely, nor of a possibility, but of a fact.

Sir,—We are becoming used to strange statements in theology, but I have met with nothing more extraordinary than what is contained in Mr. Evan Hopkins' article on "Cleansing by the Blood of Christ," in The Christian of March 15. I allude to the statement that "cleansing in the sense of purifying our thoughts and desires," is accomplished by the blood; and that this is the meaning of 1 John i. 7.

I think the article misapplies the types in other respects. Notably, the reference in Heb. i. 3 is not to Lev. xvi., but to Exod. xxiv.—a chapter which supplies the key to the whole Epistle; and the cleansing of Numbers xix. is not by blood at all, but by the "water of separation." My object, however, is not to review the article, but to offer a protest against the perversion of the teaching of 1 John i. 7: "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

By the Passover Israel gained deliverance and became free to serve God. But it brought no nearness to God, no fitness for his presence, no covenant. By the sacrifice of Exod. xxiv. the covenant was dedicated, and the people were sanctified. "Worship ye afar off," was God's attitude toward the people before that great sacrifice was offered (Exod. xxiv. 1). But immediately it was accomplished the word was, "Let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them" (xxv. 8). And this was the only sacrifice of which the blood was sprinkled on the people. I do not refer, of course, to special sacrifices for individuals, such as for the cleansing of lepers or the setting apart of priests; for here we must regard Israel as a nation, and follow their spiritual history as typical of our own.

The next step was the appointment of a priesthood, whose work was to maintain Israel in the position thus gained as a holy people in covenant with God (Exod. xxviii.)

But a further provision was necessary, and it was afforded in the great sin offering in its twofold aspect, as unfolded in Lev. xvi. and Num. xix. In the former, the blood was carried into God's presence and sprinkled there. In the latter, water that had flowed over the ashes which represented a death accomplished, was sprinkled upon the person defiled. It is to the former, of course, that we must turn as the clue to 1 John i. 7 (comp. Lev. xvi. 30).

The great burnt-offering of the covenant (Exod. xxiv.) teaches us the power of the blood to sanctify once for all. The great sin-offering of the day of atonement testifies to the abiding efficacy of the blood, in God's presence, to keep us clean.

But Mr. Hopkins urges that this cannot be the reference in John's Epistle, because of the condition, "If we walk in the light," for the value of the blood in God's presence cannot be conditional. A more careful study of the type would have prevented such a comment on the teaching of the Epistle. There was no limit to the efficacy of the blood upon the mercy-seat; but there was a limit to the sphere within which it availed to cleanse, and that was the camp of Israel, illumined by the holy light that rested on the tabernacle.

The believing sinner who dwells in the place which grace assigns to him may rejoice in the confidence that the blood cleanses him from all sin; but while the security of the elect, without reference to their walk, is a truth which fitly finds a place in any system of dogmatic theology, neither type, nor precept, nor doctrine, can be found in Scripture to warrant him who has turned his back on God, in claiming the efficacy of the blood to cleanse him.

When Scripture speaks of cleansing by the blood, it uses language that is figurative. But the figure is to be explained by reference, not to the fuller's art, but to the Mosaic law. In the same sense in which the blood of the sin-offering cleansed in type, the blood of Christ cleanses in fact—but in no other. The blood has spiritual efficacy, but no practical power. Power is connected with life, and the blood represents death. "Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of Thy Holy Spirit" is a prayer which most of us, I trust, will cling to, in preference to these new views of inward purifying—views which cannot fail to lead either to hopeless mysticism or utter Antinomianism.

Yours faithfully,
The Author of "The Gospel and its Ministry."

Dear Sir,—I am sorry to differ in opinion from so good a man as Mr. Evan Hopkins, but I feel very strongly the importance of maintaining the protest which I and some others made in your columns not very long ago against the interpretation of 1 John i. 7, which he upholds. It seems to me to introduce obscurity where all is clear, and error under the cover of obscurity.

I would not, however, say that Mr. Hopkins is in error on any point of doctrine, without knowing more certainly what his doctrine is. There are two senses in which there is a real connection between the blood (i.e., as Mr. Hopkins rightly says, the death) of Christ, and our sanctification. First, that by the death of the Lord Jesus, He obtained for his people the gift of the Holy Ghost, by whose operation they are sanctified. And, secondly, that to keep in remembrance the fact of their redemption by Christ's precious blood is a powerful motive and encouragement with Christians in leading a holy life. If Mr. Hopkins, and those who agree with him, would say distinctly that this is all they mean, when speaking of sanctification by Christ's blood, it would very much simplify matters. We should then know that there was no room for dispute upon the question of doctrine. But I cannot help thinking that there is, besides this, floating in some minds a sort of undefined and mystical sense in which a sanctifying power is directly attributed to Christ's blood. And such a sense would be objectionable, both as unwarranted by Scripture and as tending to detract from the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit. I notice that there is no mention at all of the Holy Spirit in Mr. Hopkins' article. Doubtless he believes in the Holy Spirit as the sanctifier of the people of God; but an ignorant person might suppose, from his paper, that it is by the blood and not by the Spirit of Christ that the work is wrought.

But, besides the abstract question of doctrine, there is the question what John meant in the passage quoted. If we take the word "cleanseth" in the sense of justification, all is clear. Mr. Hopkins argues that it does not refer to justification, because a believer's standing before God does not depend on his walk. But a man's standing may be judged of by his walk, and this is what John means. Anyone who will study the Epistle carefully may see that one great object of the Apostle in it is to expose the worthlessness and fallacy of an Antinomian profession. He does not deal with the differences between more advanced and less advanced believers; he insists upon the broad and fundamental difference between light and darkness, life and death, righteousness and unrighteousness, the children of God and the children of the devil. Those who walk in darkness must not deceive themselves with the vain idea that they are in fellowship with the God of light and holiness; but they who walk in the light are children of light and children of God, and have fellowship with their heavenly Father, and one with another. Someone, however, may ask, "How is it possible that the God who is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, can have fellowship with those whose holiness is not perfect?" And the answer is: It would be impossible, but that "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." When sprinkled with that atoning blood they can draw near with boldness and confidence to the Holy One of Israel (Heb. x. 19—22). And the following verses carry out the same idea. Thus interpreted, the text is a precious testimony to the completeness of the reconciliation effected by the blood of Christ. The sense is both clear and forcible.

But if we substitute the other meaning, surely the words lose much both in clearness and force. "If we lead a holy life, we have fellowship with God and his saints, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son makes us altogether holy." There certainly seems to me a difficulty in making out a clear connection between the first and last clauses of this sentence.

We owe to the death of Christ the enlightening as well as the sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit. But would it not seem a strange and somewhat unnatural way of speaking to say that the blood of Christ enlightens our minds and teaches us God's ways?

Or, viewing the fact of our redemption by the blood of Christ as one main incentive to holiness, it can hardly be said that the blood of Christ cleanses us from sin at every moment in this way. For even the most devoted Christians are not at every moment meditating on Christ's sufferings for them.

It may occur to some that sanctification by Christ's blood is expressly spoken of in the Epistle to the Hebrews. But it is clear, on a careful study of that Epistle, that the term "sanctify" is used throughout it in a special sense, namely, that of being rendered acceptable to God, answering to that typical cleansing to which Mr. Hopkins refers in the former part of his paper. And this, I think, he will himself allow.—Very truly yours,

Woking Station, Surrey. H. Noel.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

Dear Sir,—At a Mission held in this town not long ago one request for prayer was that "God would bring about a Mission for children in Birmingham, and stir up the hearts of his people to feed his little hungry lambs." I see by the letters of H. S. and H. Cope that the prayer is already being answered. Will all who read this still continue to make this request known to God? There are so many little ones round about hungry for the love of Jesus, and yet ignorant of it.

Only last week a boy about 14 years of age was asked if he went to Sunday-school. "No," was the reply. "Have you never been?" "No, I've got no clothes to go in." "You never learnt about Jesus Christ?" "No." He seemed almost ignorant of the existence of such a person. It is a fact that thousands of children in our town do not attend Sunday-school, and do not receive religious instruction in the Board-school.

Meetings have been held to consider what should be done, but with little success. I believe it is individual effort that is needed. If every one who loves the Lord Jesus would obey his command, and feed each lamb that comes under his notice, such ignorance could not exist. If regular services were held for them I believe they would be fully appreciated. I know of one small service for ragged children which is so crowded that they are admitted by ticket.

If the institutions already existing were more liberally supported, they would be able to extend their operations. Mr. David Smith's Institution at Bloomsbury, and Mr. Middlemore's Emigration Home, St. Luke's-road, are both open to receive homeless boys and girls. Then there is the Home for Working and Destitute Boys, in Bradford-street, and Refuge in connection with it at Deritend, where no destitute boy is ever refused admission.

63, Pershore-road, Birmingham. F. J. O.

Sir,—There is cause for devout thankfulness that the condition and needs of the poor children of our streets should have found expression in your widely-read journal. The hearts of many readers in London, and other great centres of population, as well as in Birmingham, will respond to the earnest pleas set forth by your correspondents.

There is indeed urgent need for the Church of Christ to be up and doing. There are thousands of children in our midst who are under no Christian instruction or influence whatever. And in saying this I am not unmindful of or ungrateful for the self-sacrificing efforts of devoted Ragged-school teachers and workers in the past. Speaking at the annual meeting of the Open-air Mission, on Friday week, Sir Thomas Chambers stated that it was impossible to calculate the good accomplished, under God's blessing, by Ragged Schools during the last forty years; but for these and other beneficent agencies he believed London would not now be habitable. These Ragged Schools are still doing a noble and much needed work in our midst, serving as centres of Christian instruction and benevolence, and shedding rays of Gospel light into the dark corners of our cities. But if this end is to be attained, and all our children and young people Christianised, and, I might add, civilised, there is a crying need for multiplying these agencies in all crowded centres of population.

The sad condition of the orphaned and the destitute appeals strongly to our sympathies, but in heeding their wants let us not lose sight of the thousands who, though nominally in a better condition, have only haunts that do duty for home—parents often rather a curse than a blessing—and who also need the loving sympathy of the Christian worker to instil God's Word into their hearts and to lead them into paths of righteousness. As it is, our thoroughfares swarm with the young of both sexes; rowdyism, drunkenness, and vice abound, to say nothing of lawlessness, infidelity, and other social disorders only too prevalent.

In view of such conditions and symptoms, Lord Shaftesbury, and the friends of Ragged Schools in London and the provinces, have resolved to hold a Conference in Exeter Hall on Wednesday, April 11, at eleven o'clock a.m., to consider prayerfully how far the Ragged Schools and Mission operations amongst the very poor may be maintained and extended. Already promises of co-operation have been received from the Duke of Westminster, Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., the Rev. Canon Fleming, Prof. Leone Levi, Mr. John MacGregor, Miss Macpherson, and other friends. Should any of your readers wish for tickets, or further information, may I refer them to Mr. Kirk, of Exeter Hall, W.C.

Meanwhile, I would bespeak earnest prayer that whatever is done may be for the glory of God, the furtherance of the Gospel, and the spiritual and temporal behoof of the children of our streets.

Yours faithfully,
Arthur F. Kinnaird.

BETHSHAN.

Sir,—You favoured me recently with space for a letter on the miracles wrought at the above, in which I sought for a little light from within. But as the good people there make no sign, kindly permit me to attempt to shed a little from outside by inserting this.

And perhaps this may be more simply done—for this letter is meant for those who want to know the simple truth—by the question: By what authority, or under what rule, are these miracles done?

The apostles of this power do not present themselves in the name of an Apostle, or even of a Deacon; else they might say to the lame, whether they had faith in Jesus Christ of Nazareth or not, "Rise up and walk!" and immediately the afflicted one would leap into perfect soundness.

It is quite safe, and perhaps not unnecessary, to say that no one on earth possesses this faculty.

Neither do they invite afflicted people to place themselves under skilful physicians or surgeons as the nature of each case might require, men whom they have selected for the purpose, and then offer to pray on their behalf that God would bless the treatment, and the remedies employed in order that the sufferers might be restored to health. This would be a natural, intelligent, and, I think I may add, a Scriptural course of proceeding, which would recommend itself to most people. And many are prepared to testify, out of their own experience, their belief that such means have been repeatedly honoured by answers to their prayers.

But the teaching at Bethsban is essentialy different. The promoters say to all invalids, "Come!" excepting none; for people suffering diseases commonly considered to be fatal hi herto, as well as minor complaints, and even the slowly dying are invited to participate in the healing power ready for them there. And the cases quoted by the managers imply that all who thus "come" shall be made perfectly whole after being anointed with oil and prayed for by them, provided the patients exercise faith themselves. And that if any should depart no better, they have only themselves to blame—their faith was too weak, or they had none.

Where is my wandering boy to-night?
One there is who loves thee
The mistakes of my life have been many
Long in darkness we have waited
Are you coming home, ye wanderers?
A ruler once came to Jesus by night
Fierce and wild the storm is raging
Why do you wait, dear brother?
Say, where is thy refuge, my brother?
Why perish with cold and with hunger?
From the riven Rock there floweth

CONTENTS OF No. 2.

What can wash away my stain?
Come, thou weary! Jesus calls thee
Should the death-angel knock at your chamber
The Gospel bells are ringing
Have you any room for Jesus?
Oh come, sinner, come! 'tis mercy's call
Make room for Jesus! room, sad heart!
Oh, do not let the Word depart
Brightly beams our Father's mercy
O Christ, in Thee my soul hath found
Light in the darkness, sailor!

CONTENTS OF No. 3.

When my final farewell to the world I have said
Standing by a purpose true
When the storms of life are raging
I have read of a beautiful city
Ring the bells of heaven! there is joy to day
I have heard of a land far away
"Land ahead!" its fruits are waving
Oh, tender and sweet was the Master' voice
'Tis the promise of God full salvation to give
When storms around are sweeping

CONTENTS OF No. 4.

Of course you know that to and fro, throughout our glorious land
She only touched the hem of His garment
Our Master has taken His journey
Tempted and tried
Father, don't you hear the ange
The prize is set before us
There is a Fountain filled with blood
Would you lose your load of sin?
Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin

We have heard of something like this at Knock, in Ireland, at Loretto, and at Naples.

But a seeker after truth in a recent letter in The Christian, which indeed bears internal evidences of its truthfulness, reports that they are too busy at Bethshan to attend to any inquirers after truth, and that the attempt to "prove all things," or "to try the spirits whether they are of God," is a kind of impiety: while a Christian brother there has in hand certificates from hospitals to show. Are not these the ordinary certificates of discharge issued to chronic cases discharged from hospital as "incurable" when the room is required for acute cases, or when doctors get weary of them, and put their hope in the lapse of time, and the powers of nature? Ten thousand such, or statements made by the sufferers themselves, are useless.

What is required is a medical report on the case, the organ or organs affected, and their actual condition, ascertained by a scientific observer, before going to Bethshan, and another after they have been healed and returned to their homes. Not a vague certificate, expressed in general terms, and squeezed out of the overflowing good-nature of some medical friend of the party; nor of some one in some out-of-the-way place; much less from somebody in some other quarter of the globe.

If this power should on infallible proof be found to reside in the elders of the Church nowadays, it will unquestionably be an irresistible force in favour of Christianity; and I shall rejoice, and no doubt the whole Christian world will rejoice with me.

If, on the other hand, it should be found a delusion, it will bring no little discredit on those who originated the movement, and those who have with child-like faith trusted in it.—Yours, &c.,

A Surgeon.

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOL.

Dear Sir,—In these days of indifferentism and unbelief, I am prompted to ask you to allow me to address a few lines to the many parents who read your paper concerning the selection of schools for their sons, and some of their needs whilst away at school.

Mingling with many, I am astonished to find how little care is given to the former subject; those who have been trained in the fear of the Lord, so soon as they have to leave home for school, are often cast into sudden and great temptations. Yet parents wonder when the conduct of their sons at school causes them pain and anxiety. Often the character of the school, private or public, is not considered; the name, whose sons go there, and what position will accrue from their having been educated at such and such a school—these are the all-important considerations with most parents. It is not always easy to ascertain the "tone" of our schools, but I am confident more information might be obtained if the necessary trouble were taken.

It is undoubtedly true that public school life has wonderful advantages for our boys. If the home influence has made its mark, no youth can have a better field in which to be fitted for future life, whatever it may be. All boys are not cut out for public school life, and parents should exercise discretion in the matter. It is positively unkind to send certain boys to other than a private school, the "tone" of which can be generally verified by the Christian character of the principal.

The capacity to ensure a good secular education being nearly the only fitness required in the selection of the masters of our public schools, it is not to be wondered at that they are generally known as men of learning only; very little can be said about their moral or spiritual character. Many of them also lack human sympathy, and these deficiencies must operate adversely upon the future of our boys with regard to their concern about religion.

Parents ought not to send away their sons to school in order to shelve their own responsibilities. No master can reach the hearts of his pupils as the parent can do; and too much ought not to be expected of the master. If parents would regard their sons (although away from home) as still belonging to the family—keeping them interested by their weekly letters with bright home news, what a help it would be to many!

The absence of Sunday joys is no small hindrance to the development of religion in the hearts of our schoolboys; the routine of Sunday preparation and worship is generally admitted to be very dry and uninteresting, to say nothing of the want of happy reading for spare hours. Surely it is incumbent upon all parents to think how they can brighten these days for their sons.

A boy once told me quite casually (his parents are rich and kind), "They never send me any books. I would give anything Sunday after Sunday to get hold of an interesting book with something about religion in it." Another wrote me: "How I liked that book you sent me! I was longing for something to read. It made me think of home Sundays. I passed it on to several other fellows, and they liked it so much; we have no books in our library, such as we used to read at home on Sundays." I am quite sure if fathers and mothers would think more of the small requirements of their boys at school, they would have much to praise God for in after days.

Why is it that sons are so little understood by their parents when they have finished their education and returned home? Simply because parents forget to study their dispositions and tastes while they are at school. What a hold it is upon the boy's affections, if, when at home for his holidays, his parents kneel down in private with him! Can any link draw them together like prayer? I think not. John Shrimpton.

IRISH RELIEF FUND.

Dear Sir,—Would it not be well for you to open a fund for the relief of Irish distress? I have no doubt that many are waiting to send contributions for that purpose; but would like to know that the money would be faithfully and economically administered through trustworthy channels. No political bias or sectarian exclusiveness should prevent our doing what we can as Christians for those who are literally starving by thousands for want of the barest necessaries of life, who may be as guiltless of participation in crime as we are. Surely such loving sympathy would soften Irish hearts, and would probably help to solve the difficult problem of Irish legislation. I am ready to send help according to my ability.

Yours faithfully,

Evangelistic Mission (Per C. R. H.)—M. B., 1s.

MRS. GINEVER'S ORPHAN HOMES.—We regret to hear that our sister has had a very heavy trial in connection with her work, within the last two months. Diphtheria broke out in the Manor-road Home, causing the death of one dear child. It has cost her a great deal of money extra to her usual outlay, having had to remove the children to prevent the infection spreading. She was also obliged to remove the convalescent ones to another place while Manor-road House was disinfected. A correspondent, who is fully acquainted with the facts, sends us a donation for Mrs. Ginever; we trust others will send a like expression of their sympathy.

FOURTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of MR. G. B., OF BROMPTON.

This patient came to see me on the 2nd of September last, through hearing of cases in Gloucestershire benefited by my treatment. In January he had broken a blood-vessel, since which time (eight months) he had been very low, and gradually losing flesh. For a long time he had attended the Brompton Hospital, without receiving the slightest benefit.

I found him in an exceedingly weak state, with congested condition of the lungs, accompanied with intestinal irritation, and the respiration very short and feeble. The balsam was prescribed, with pills, zinc ointment with glycerine, an anodyne and stimulating liniment, with cod-liver oil and generous diet, under certain restrictions.

In October, examined by Mr. Brown, "Greatly improved, no blood had passed, breathing improved, appetite better." In November saw me again; "had nearly lost all his symptoms, and was wonderfully improved." The improvement continued, as I heard (after this by letter) in December.

In the last letter, dated January 31, the patient writes:—"It would be ungrateful of me did I not now acknowledge the vast benefit I have received from your treatment. I have just passed the doctor's examination for entering a club. After being out-patient for a long time at the Consumption Hospital, without the least good, I came to you, and in a fortnight I began to mend. I must have taken to my bed otherwise. I could scarcely walk half a mile. Make use of my case, dear sir, but I have special reasons for not wanting my name to appear in print."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

THE CONSUMPTION EMULSION

After many years' trial is universally pronounced by Physicians and Doctors to be the most valuable and successful preparation ever recommended in the treatment of Consumption and all wasting diseases. Dr. ALABONE, of Lynton House, Highbury Quadrant, N., in his treatise, "Consumption: its Cure by an entirely New Remedy," states: "I have rarely ever found the Emulsion fail in arresting the rapid wasting of consumptive patients, and to increase flesh and strength. I have recommended it to some thousands of patients, with marvellous results." Send for copy of testimonials received from Doctors, Clergymen, Ministers, and late sufferers, of its wonderful effects. Price 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. per bottle. Considerable saving is effected by taking the larger sizes. To be obtained at all Chemists. PROSPECTUS (ABRIDGED).

OBJECTS.—This Company has been formed upon a strictly commercial basis with the following objects:

To BUILD, FIT, and FURNISH—

TEMPERANCE PUBLIC HOUSES, HOTELS,
PHILANTHROPIC INSTITUTIONS,
TRAINING HOMES, ETC.,
MISSION HALLS,
CHURCHES AND CHAPELS,

Including the Re-construction of Old Buildings, and Seating, Heating, and Lighting the same; working as far as possible on Model plans, and receiving PAYMENT either in Cash or by INSTALMENTS SPREAD OVER A TERM OF YEARS.

Also to BUILD and FIT Model SHOPS and HOUSES for Shopkeepers, Artizans, and others upon the same terms.

COMMERCIAL BASIS.—The Company will not build Temperance Houses, Philanthropic Institutions, or Church Property on speculation, but only to the order of its Customers.

The Company will not take a pecuniary interest in any of the philanthropic purposes for which the buildings may be intended, nor will it undertake to manage the same. Its operations will be solely commercial, with the object of securing a fair profit on the business done, but it will at the same time be a most efficient means of assisting those whose aim is philanthropic.

CAFES.—In the case of Refreshment Houses the Company will require the intending Purchaser to keep the same strictly to Temperance uses.

CREDIT TERMS.—The Company will require a proportion of the estimated outlay, regulated according to the character of the undertaking, to be prepaid. The remainder of the purchase money to be repaid by instalments extending over periods ranging from 2 to 15 years. To secure such repayments the proposed undertaking will be let to the intending proprietor or mortgaged to the Company, subject to a fixed monthly rental or charge, with such other guarantees, if any, as the Directors find necessary.

SOURCES OF PROFIT.—The Company will secure—

I.—A manufacturer's fair trading profit.
II.—Special economy arising from generally working to model designs.
III.—The profit on interest account universally secured by Building Societies.
IV.—Also profit from the sale of Fittings and Furniture on the hire system.

Estimates have been prepared and examined by competent Accountants, which show that by doing an amount of business far smaller than is anticipated the Company will soon be in a position to declare SUBSTANTIAL DIVIDENDS, as is shown by the following certificate:—

"26, Martin's Lane, Cannon Street, London, E.C., 20th March, 1883.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Tables prepared for the working of the proposed Building, Fitting, and Furnishing Company, and FIND, after making ample allowance for contingencies and for a reserve fund, that on a Business of £55,000 per annum there is a PROFIT SHOWN sufficient to pay an average Dividend of AT LEAST 15 PER CENT. per annum.

THOS. FRID MAUNDER, Accountant."

FOUNDATION BUSINESS.—The Company has agreed to purchase the Fitting and Furnishing Business hitherto carried on by Messrs. T. HOGBEN & Co., at No. 3, City Road, and 5 and 6, Appold Street, E.C., at a valuation subject to a very low reserve; terms which the Directors consider very fair and reasonable. Mr. HOGBEN will also take at least 1,000 shares in the Company, and all properties connected with the business, not consistent with the objects of the Company, are excluded from the purchase. The Directors have also secured the services of Mr. T. HOGBEN as Managing Director.

The only Contract is dated the 28th day of March, 1883, and made between THOMAS HOGBEN of the one part and THOMAS BRADBURY WINTER and EDWARD MORGAN as Trustees for the Company of the other part, for the sale of the said business to the Company, and copies of the Articles and Memorandum of Association may be seen at the Office of the Company's Solicitor.

The Directors (other than the Managing Director, who takes a small fixed salary with commission on profits) will take no fees except out of profits.

No promotion money will be paid to any one. The expenses being strictly confined to the payments made for advertising and registration.

Full Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained from the Secretary or Solicitor, or at any Branch of the City Bank.

OPINIONS.

BEFORE deciding to take action for the formation of this Company, the scheme was stated to various Gentlemen interested in Temperance and philanthropic work, and among a large number of replies received we select the following:—

A CALL FROM FOOCHOW.

THE COMMITTEE of the SOCIETY for PROMOTING FEMALE EDUCATION in the EAST desire to make an earnest appeal on behalf of the work which they have been enabled to carry on at this station, in co-operation with the Church Missionary Society, for more than eight years. The Rev. J. R. Wolfe has brought forward the importance of obtaining premises for the permanent occupation of their Lady Missionaries, and of strengthening their staff by sending out another, so that the Boarding School may be enlarged, Day Schools multiplied, and what may, in China also, be called Zenana work (although there are not any zenanas, properly so called, in that empire), may be regularly carried on. His long experience and well-known judgment entitle his earnest appeal to their attentive consideration. The Committee pray that He, whose is the silver and the gold, may touch the hearts of some of His stewards, and incline them to come speedily and willingly to the help of the poor women and girls of Foochow.

Contributions to the Foochow Fund will be thankfully received by Miss E. Rutt, Lower Clapton, E.; Miss Haldane, 118, Westbourne-terrace, W.; Miss Stirling, 77, Cadogan-place, S.W.; and by Miss Webb, 267, Vauxhall Bridge-road, S.W.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION. Office: 56, Haymarket, London, S.W. This Society is employing 120 Scripture Readers amongst the poor and destitute of London. They go from house to house, and from room to room, reading the Word of God, pressing its precious truths on men's acceptance, pleading with God in prayer for a blessing, and directing all with whom they come in contact to Jesus the Saviour of Sinners. We want to multiply Scripture Readers, for nothing, we believe, can supply the place of house-to-house visitation, and as surely bring the Word of God into immediate contact with individual souls. Funds are urgently needed, and will be thankfully received by either of the undernamed: MARCUS RAINSFORD, Clerical Secretary; J. RODDAM TATE, Lay Secretary; or Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

Dr. CRANAGE'S undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington, Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. AN INTERESTING VISIT.

THE other day I had the privilege of spending an hour in the consulting-rooms of a medical electrician, who bids fair to make himself a great reputation. But although Mr. B. Copson Garratt does not place himself so prominently before the public as do some others in his profession, I have good reason to believe that he is doing a work which is scarcely less extensive, and certainly is not less effective, than theirs. Mr. Garratt is man who likes to work in a quiet way. I think, however, that such a man ought to be better known. He is an enthusiast—albeit, a very sober one. He will talk to you by the hour about medical electricity, in which he is, of course, thoroughly well up, and he never tires of showing you its wondrous effects, although even he is unable to explain to you all the mysteries of its working. If you ask him why he goes into raptures over this remarkable therapeutic agent, he will give you two very good reasons: the first is, that it gave him new life; and the second is, that it has given new life to others. Mr. Garratt knows, and therefore speaks.

After giving me a little experience of the Faradic current, which had no more serious effect than to make my hands feel a little sleepy, Mr. Garratt converted the current into what is termed constant, instead of induced, and assured me there was just as much electricity passing through my body as could be made sufficient in the other form to cause instant death.

As an illustration of the penetrative power of magnetic currents, I may mention that I held in front of me a mariner's compass, and Mr. Garratt held behind me one of his Nerve Invigorators, and in a moment the magnetic current passed through my clothing—and I had a heavy overcoat on—and through my body, and laid hold of the hand of the compass. This is the mighty force which Mr. Garratt infuses into, and sends right through, the system of his patient, producing the most astonishing and beneficial results.

Some of the most startling scientific discoveries of the present age are based upon magnetic principles; and the efficacy of magnetism as a healer promises to lead to results quite as startling as any that have attended it in other directions. And here let me repeat that magnetism is not galvanism. The latter, as I understand, often fails, and even where it succeeds it is open to the objection that its effect is too powerful. In skilful hands it has been, and may be, used with success, but it is, nevertheless, in its application, often of a painfully irritating character, because it must come into direct contact with the body, requiring the nerves as a conducting medium. Mr. Garratt does not claim to have made any new discovery, but he affirms that he has found out how to use electricity in the most efficient and practical way.

A great advantage also in connection with this special form of application is that the currents generated by the appliances are continuous, and so gentle and uniform as to be rarely detected when used by the most sensitive patient. Their construction is the acme of simplicity. They consist of specially prepared magnets, wrought in comfortable garments of different fabrics; no metallic materials are visible, and such as exist add no objectionable weight or stiffness to the appliances.

Magnetism does not supersede ordinary medicines, but can be used in conjunction with them without at all affecting, or being affected by their action. But its chief value is, that it will reach cases which ordinary medicine will not touch. Take paralysis. The doctor does not, cannot cure paralysis. But Mr. Garratt can point you to people who were bed-ridden, and, to all appearance, bed-ridden for life, but who, thanks to magnetism, have left their couches, and are now engaged in the active work of life. Long-standing cases of epilepsy and spinal irritation have also been cured. I take these cases from a pamphlet of Mr. Garratt's, where full names and addresses are given, a copy of which will be sent, post-free, to any person who will write to his consulting-rooms, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C. Ordinary medicines are of little avail in chronic cases of long standing; but these are just the cases that Mr. Garratt likes to undertake. Another class of sufferers who derive incalculable benefit from magnetism are people of overworked brain. In such cases the physician usually prescribes complete rest, and a total change of air—medicine being of little use. Mr. Garratt affirms that he can give the over-worked man, who is unable to obtain rest and change, the like benefit he would derive from them in a very much quicker, simpler, and cheaper way. At the same time Mr. Garratt's system is not opposed to other means of combatting disease; on the contrary, it is an auxiliary which may be used in conjunction with, and as a supplement to them.

Full particulars of the treatment may be obtained free on application to B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.—Extract from an article in "The Fountain."

GOVERNMENT AND THE OATH.

WE receive from week to week various letters taking opposite views of this subject. Many of our correspondents fail, we think, to see our true position, which is one independent of personalities of any kind. We dissever the name of Mr. Bradlaugh from the matter altogether; it has assumed a far wider aspect than is involved in the question whether he shall be admitted to the House of Commons or not, and we think that only harm comes of discussing his claims as an individual, or those of Northampton as a separate borough. The time has gone by for that. As a matter of policy it might have been wiser to allow him quietly to take his place as its representative when first the controversy arose, leaving the responsibility of taking the oath to himself, although on grounds of principle many would doubtless condemn such a course; we should hesitate, looking at the known character and influence of the candidate as an atheistic leader, to advocate it.

The simple point at issue, in our judgment, is this: Should nations in their national capacity and legislative functions assert the existence and supremacy of Him from whom alone proceeds all power to govern, or may they disregard his claim to be acknowledged as the Ruler of men, and take into their counsels, and in all their governmental departments deliberately employ, those who openly deny Him, and labour to destroy his kingdom and dishonour his name?

The question is not shall Government establish this, that, or any other Church, not whether truth in the abstract needs parliamentary support, not even whether the religion of Christ, so dear to us all, shall be legalised in any way, or to any extent. It is not a Church question, as such, at all; it is a national question, having to do with the God of nations, and with nations in their national responsibility to God.

When the reins of government passed out of the hands of the Jewish theocracy into those of Gentile power, "the Times of the Gentiles" began; and it is a significant fact, that from the first proud ruler of the world powers, occupying the throne of universal empire, as distinguished from a seat of government in which God was the central and all-absorbing thought, the Almighty compelled the acknowledgment that "The Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will." On the kingdom passing into the hands of Darius, the Mede, like conviction was forced upon his mind, issuing in a decree that, "In every dominion of his kingdom men should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel, for He is the living God." It was equally so in the case of the Grecian conquest. Alexander, the proud conqueror of the world, adored the name of the true God when confronted therewith on his entrance to Jerusalem, and under the direction of the high priest offered sacrifice to Him, declaring it was by his power he had achieved success in his career. True, there is nothing in this we can regard as spiritual, or in itself of spiritual value, but there is a moral sphere as well as a spiritual one, and we are by no means to disown moral influences and moral principles because they are not elevated to the height of spiritual truth.

We are not likely to succeed in our work as Christians and servants of the Church of God because we forego first principles, and stand side by side with the infidel in the removal of the Divine Name from every other sphere than the purely Christian and spiritual one. Nor are Governments likely to succeed in the work assigned to them of benefiting the nation if they ignore their accountability to Him who is higher than they. God has never resigned his claim to be acknowledged in the governments of men, although for a time He has allowed men, as men, to hold sovereignty, and exercise their sway over the earth; and again and again has He smitten with sore judgments the nations which have refused to acknowledge his might. Our Lord taught that we should "render unto God the things that are God's," at the same time that we "render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's." No line is to be drawn between them which makes them wholly distinct. He reminded Pilate, before whom He stood, that he "could have no power at all except it were given him from above."

Paul, in writing to the Church at Rome, declared, "the powers that be are ordained of God," the servants of the State were "the ministers of God," language which is far from implying that we are to regard national government apart from the recognition of the Divine name. The idea of Deity as supreme was never omitted from ancient legislatures, and was constantly inculcated by the most eminent philosophers of Greece and Rome. Surely modern professedly Christian governments, and Christian teachers, in a Christian land, in these days of Christian truth, should not take lower ground than they.

We claim that our Constitution, by every law of reason, conscience, and truth, should remain, and as matters now stand, be more definitely than before, based upon a distinct affirmation of the existence and almighty power of God. We are bound by the obligations of centuries of peculiar indebtedness, not only to his mercies showered upon us temporally, but also to our national possession and assertion of his Name, his Word, and his cause, as having had their central point, their base of operations, as it were, in our midst. To this fact we owe much of the influence we have gained in every part of the world. More than to the force of our arms, the strength of our naval resources, or any other human consideration, we are indebted to our national recognition of God as the God of Britain for our greatness. In the eyes of all other nations we have long been identified with his supreme dominion, and for us now to take a definite stand in favour of atheistic principles, and by direct negative, if not positive, legislation, deny the God with whom we have to do, is to come down from the height of our national greatness, and to accelerate in every part of the globe where our proceedings are known and watched, the march of infidelity, and the advance of every evil work.

We are told that toleration and charity in reference to the opinions of others demand the concession which the Affirmation Bill is intended to make; but toleration of actual moral evil is a crime, not a virtue. Consideration for the principles of atheists, as such finds no support in Bible precepts; so far from being there spoken of in terms of charitable toleration, they are branded with every mark of reproach and Divine censure. From such principles it is absolutely impossible for anything to come but evil; virtue cannot exist in an infidel atmosphere, or grow in atheistic soil. Conscience slumbers where no God is known to whom its dictates shall make the soul accountable. Self, with its unhallowed passions and disregard of others' rights, reigns supreme, and truth and purity vanish from the scene, if not at once, yet by sure and often rapid strides.

With Acts of Uniformity, and religious tests applied to those who make the Word of God their standard of appeal, we have no kind of sympathy, but with Acts framed to support the action and elevate the status of those whose creed is No God, No Bible, and No Church, we confess to have still less of toleration or regard. They seem to us unworthy alike of the honour of God and the best interests of men. We are not pleading for an oath as the best means of declaring allegiance either to the throne of God or of men; a simple affirmation we think better in many respects for all. But we do plead, and that with all the earnestness and force we can summon to the task, for an Affirmation Bill which shall necessitate an affirmative declaration of loyalty to the Divine Name as well as to the statutes of our own realm. That so many of the friends of God and godliness should, under the influence of political creed, and what we cannot but look upon as an exaggerated claim of Liberalism and religious toleration, rank themselves on the side of entirely changing the constitution of our land, and so of subverting its very foundations, is to us a cause for deepest regret and sorrowful concern.

NEW YORK.—The New York City Missions, especially those of Messrs. Sawyer, McAulay, O'Niell, and Dunn, and the Bowery Missions conducted by Messrs. Rulison and Childs, and Edward William Oakes (for the Y.M.C.A.), are in daily operation, and save many souls from the clutches of the great adversary. The success of the British and American evangelists in Great Britain, and the many Christ-like enterprises in your large cities for the rescue of the fallen and elevation of the degraded classes, as reported briefly, yet so tellingly, in THE CHRISTIAN, are a notable encouragement to the best friends of the people, the servants of God, on this side of the Atlantic. Brothers John Dooley, Crittenton, Edward William Oakes, Wells, Howe, Smith, Allen, and others, last Saturday organised another life-boat for wrecked women. It is called "The Florence Midnight Mission."—Yours fraternally,

BIBLE AND PRAYER UNION.—By March 1st our Union had enrolled 176,050 members. Since our last issue we have added 158 new members from foreign parts, including Demerara, France, Hong Kong, Madras, Natal, New Brunswick, Ontario, and Smyrna. A member writes: "I have found the Bible so increasingly precious, that I quite long for others to join our Union." Another writes: "I have been a member five years, and I have been led to the Saviour by reading the precious truths of the Bible." Another: "Reading the Bible consecutively has given us fresh light and power. The Lord is blessing our souls by the Word." A clergyman writes: "Our branch of the Bible and Prayer Union contains nearly one hundred members, who meet twice a week for reading, prayer, and praise. The benefits we have derived from uniting together, both parochially and individually considered, have been enormous, and we bless God for the Union." A worker in a parish, where there are 230 members out of a population of about 750, writes: "I want to put the whole parish through the Bible, and the Bible through the whole parish. Surely every soul, without exception, ought to know what is written. I therefore urge all that can read to read." All communications to be addressed (members to quote card number)—Rev. MY SAINT JOHN.

By JAMES M. LUDLOW, D.D.

A PASTORAL SKETCH.

"WUD yer riv'rince come an' see a man what's dyin'?"

The speaker, who had come to the basement door of a city clergyman's house, was one of the worst bedraggled women off Blackwell's Island. Her voice was as husky and weak in tone as it was strong with the smell of whiskey. Her face was a cold and villainous one—only that at first glance; but a second discovered the slightest trace of anxiety, just enough to suggest that her woman's nature was not entirely burned out, and that some sparks of sympathy, maybe of love, for somebody, still glowed among its ashes.

Her address led into a section of the city which is almost as complete terra incognita to our worthy and even philanthropic metropolitans as is the land of King Mtesa. In the back basement of a filthy tenement house the old hag, who had preceded the visitor, welcomed him to what only the evident fact would warrant calling a human habitation. What had once been a kitchen pantry was now converted into a chamber, where there lay a man, about sixty years of age, of hard, yet rather intelligent countenance, and the shrunken remnant of a once powerful body. Starvation was evidently accelerating the work of hasty consumption. An inquiry if he had no friends brought the response: "Plenties on 'em, when one can go and find 'em an' there's a bit in pocky for a drink. All the b'ys 'long shore knows ole John; but missin's not mindin'; an' no but yersel an' the old woman's a-crost the doorsill for four days an' nights. They says till themsel's 'Guess ole John's skipped ag'in,' though they knowed this ole hulk was 'bout aground agin the graveyard."

Daily visits to him while he "kept afloat," and the little comforts which were brought him, soon established the utmost familiarity between John and "his riv'rince," who thus had an opportunity to study human nature in its raw material, unmoulded by any conventionality of society, and uncloaked by that caution, if, indeed, it be not hypocrisy, with which we ordinarily conceal ourselves from our best friends. Perhaps both felt that the difference was slight between the real humanity which buttoned itself in broadcloth, and that which was wrapped in the pauper's blanket.

Of his early life John could give no very clear account. Of his ancestors he said, "They never took no 'sponsibility for me, an' I never felt no 'sponsibility for askin' after them." To the best of his belief, in his voyage into this world, he "made port" in England. While a mere child, he fell into the grip of that stern law of the "Survival of the Fittest," and, being fit for nothing on land, took to the sea. For nearly half a century he had drifted about the world, seeing only the lowest forms of civilisation, among that morally amphibious population along the wharves of seaports, which may be said to live half the time in this world, and half in hell. Ship law, under the shadow of the yard-arm and the cat-o'-nine-tails, was his highest code of morals, and dread of death his highest attainment in religion. It was this last characteristic which led him to send for the clergyman. He knew almost nothing of the doctrines of the Bible, and said, honestly, "I'm no priest's man, an' no Protistint neither. I'm jist a poor soul what's dyin'." He would listen respectfully to conversation, but seemed to have no power to fix his attention upon the Scriptures as read.

John's interest in "the Book" was first caught by the reading of David's description of a storm at sea. "The man what wrote that, sir, foller'd the sea. Was he a captain?" Upon being assured that the Psalmist was first a shepherd boy, then a general, and finally a king, but never a sailor, he declared: "But, Mister, yer larnin's at fault there, for ye see there's ividince in his manner o' speech that him what wrote it was a sailor lad, or may's how a' venturer-like, who'd see'd the storm. 'Their soul's milted because o' trouble.' It's it 'xactly. I'se niver frighted in the storm; but me soul's jist milted mony's the time. 'At their wit's ind, 'an' 'cry till the Loard.' Ye see, Mister, I didn' know nothin' 'bout the Loard, an' 'ave tol' 'im to damn me oftin, because I didn' b'lieve there was ony Loard. But when the soul's milted ye 'opes as 'ow ther' may be a Loard lookin' after yez in the storm, but not thinkin' it worth's while to look after yez when yez only foolin' an' profanin', an' don't mean what yer sez, but only asks 'im to damn yez playful-like."

From that time David was treated with all the confidence of an intimate friend by John, who was ready to hear what the "sea-farin' king" had to say.

Another Biblical acquaintance was introduced to the sick man in a similar manner by the reading of the story of St. Paul's shipwreck. It happened that John had often "fared 'long" that same north coast of the Mediterranean, and been "driven up and down in Adria." Once he had expected the ship to go to pieces at the base of the Taurus. The rocky pinnacles of the Sporades were hung with momentoes of his drifting among them. His manner became tragic as, with wild tones and gesticulation, losing himself in actual mania with the vividness of his remembrance or the morbidness of his imagination, he described an awful night off Sicily. "We driv through the blackness, an' the white foam was like divil's fingers a-reachin' out o' it; divils a-roarin' in the timpist an' a-screechin' in the riggin'; but there must a-bin a hangel somewhere, for in the mornin' the ship stood as livil as the risin' sunbame. But, Mister, me ole craft's goin' down this time. An' was ye arnist when ye said a hangel would git on board o' me now likes? Loard o' mercy, sind th' hangel, for John's at's wits ind."

From exhaustion the poor fellow fell back in unconsciousness upon the pillow. After this he was always anxious to "hear a bit o' what said the lad what saved the ship," meaning St. Paul.

In response to the reading, "Not one doeth good, no, not one," he confessed that he had been a bad man. "But why's the not, sir? Ye can't make posies grow in ship's ballust, an' sailor lads ain't saints nat'ral like. But, Mister, I'll no bemane mysel', an' though I'se no good un, it's honest truth that I niver sthiffen'd nobody what wasn't worse nor me, 'cept's maybe when the shore-grog was in, an' that'll niver count agin a ship's-lad."

But John could not feel self-complacent. "D'ye know what troubles me? It's a-thinkin' of that sailor king and t'other lad, as clane souls in this wicked worl' as you sun-peep on the dirty floor, an' the one o' 'em a sayin', 'Me sin's iver afore me,' an' t'other sayin', 'I'm no more clane nor a dead corpus, than a body o' death'; an' all acause them gem'men had a-seen likes it was the face o' God; an' maybes how I shall see the face of God too; an' maybes as how he's a-lookin' at me now, an' a-readin' me log, an' a-takin' off me flesh, so's to git a look clane through me soul."

The visitor quoted the Bible promises of forgiveness to such as are sorry for, and confess their sins. But said John: "Sorry for 'em! But I wasna' sorry for 'em when I did 'em, and I feel kind o' mane to say as how's I'm sorry for 'em now, when I can't do 'em no more. Mayhap, Mister, if that in the bottle there 'ud make me stout an' handy the morrow, I'd no be sorry for 'em. An' don't the Loard know that John don't know hisself when he says as how he's sorry? O Loard! is it sorry or feard I am? An' confess 'em? How 'ud that diffrince the Almighty? He knows 'em allriddy. Doesn't David say he did 'em 'in thy sight?' Aye, aye, sir. He saw 'em plainer nor I did mesel'. An' whyforeconfess 'em? 'Twould be like sinnin' 'em over agin to tell 'em. But John's got a long wake o' sins behin' 'im, an' it don't die down like, but stays there a-markin' my cruise. I can see it (mapping it with his finger pointing to the walls) like a great white sarpint, lying across both the great seas, an' kinkin' itsel' up into ivry port I iver dropped anchor in. An' the Loard's a-lookin' at it too. Ye says th' Loard will forgie me? Na! na! It's not raison he will. Isn't th' Loard juster nor me? But John 'll niver forgi'e hisself, an' how's th' Loard o' goodness goin' to forgi'e John? Thankee fur yer comfort, but John can no' tak' it. It's not raison like."

An explanation of the doctrine of salvation through Christ, ending with a quotation from the Psalm, "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us, brought David into temporary disrepute with the sick man. "But that sailor king was no' much of a sailor. He niver went aroun' the 'arth, or he'd niver said nothin' 'bout th' far o' th' 'aste an' th' wist. Ye cud no measure th' far that's betwixt 'em wi' all th' longitudes than y'd fathom th' ocean dipth wi' a log-line."

The next day, however, he accosted his visitor with, "I've thought all th' night 'bout th' aste an' wist. That David was a mighty navigator, sure. He'd been 'roun' th' arth. I axes pardon for suspicionin' 'im. An' thim words o' his has sailed all 'roun' me soul. Let me 'splain till yez th' aste an' wist. D'ye list? Th' fastest ship what iver cut water, crowdin' her sails wi' harricane abeam, or wi stame or the devil in her biler, startin' in th' aste 'ud niver come, till th' wist. Th' wist's a 'orizon what's allers a recadin' an' recadin' as ye goes afther it. Now list till I makes known till yez Capt'in David, his maning. John's sins is like th' wist, all a-flamin' rid, as whin sun's goin' down, scarlet like as ye rid yesterday; an' John's th' ship a-drivin' afther 'em with's conseience a-thumpin' an' all his soul a-creakin'; but th' Loard o' mercy's is a-drivin' 'em away, an' by'n by he'll plump 'em down out o' John's sight foriver an' iver. I think, mister, as how's it was th' h'angel told me that maning last night, whin th' ole woman was sleepin', an' th' ile was gone; for it seemed daylight, an' quiet, wi' not a rat a-gnawin, was spacheful like. Maybe I dramed it. But mightn't dyin' be dramin'? Now, yer riv'rence, ony time ye sees I'm unaisy an' frighted, jist say till me 'aste an' wist, John, aste an' wist,' for sometimes thim sins comes a-rushin' on me like seas astern, an' I'm anchored like wi' me bad feelin' an' can't ride 'em, an', as th' captain says, 'All th' billows goes over me.' Then I thinks 'tain't seas like, John; its aste and wist like; an' I falls to dramin' agin."

John had still a great trouble. He could not overcome the natural shrinking from death. "Yer riv'rence, do ye likes the worums? I cud ate the worums asier than I can bear to think o' the worums a-atin' o' me. D'ye mind that arrum (showing the shrunken muscles of his arm)? It cud stiffen ony mon on shipboard; but how thin it's got! Maybes how's the worum's inside it now an' tastin' me fore dinner's riddy. An' d'ye mind the injy ink, th' hanchor, an' me 'nitials, "J," an' "O" forninst it. Ow! the nasty worum 'll crawl along an' ate out th' J and th' hanchor an' th' O. Ate me body and ate me name." The shrunken form gathered itself up in a convulsive heap beneath the blankets, and moaned: "Ow! the dirty worums. I don't wan't to die."

The clergyman talked to him of the resurrection, and reminded him of the promise in the Book of Revelation: "I will write upon him My new name." And "His (God's) name shall be in their foreheads." John's face emerged from the blankets. "Say that agin, Mister." And, after a few moments' pause: "Wud ye mind haulin' through that agin?" A deep light seemed to fill his sunken eyes, as if his whole soul was condensed in them. The harsh features relaxed into something very like beauty. A little superstition would have seen a light overspreading the features and the halo about the head. The clergyman saw neither of these; but thought of them, and thought, too, of the title which is prefixed to the story —"My Saint John."

In a few moments the man came out of his rhapsody, and in a voice which itself told of the elation of his thoughts: "I'm goin', then, intil the nixt worl' like's a new-born babby, an' God He's me father, an' he'll christen me with a new name, and he'll name me after hisself, jist as if I'd never lived afore, an' neither the saints nor divils 'll know nothin' o' ole John an' his sins."

He raised himself with the remnant of his fast-failing strength, and, lifting both arms, cried out, as if passing into the vision, "Oh! but that's glorious! that's glorious! I thank me God!" and fell back upon the pillow in utter exhaustion.

The next day the clergyman was met at the street door by some wretched women, who said: "You've no need to go there agin, sir. He's dead."—Abridged from the New York Independent.

EASTER THOUGHTS.*

"He is not here: for He is risen, as He said."

THEY were such a happy little party, until death came in and divided them. Frankie was eight, a blooming, bright-eyed boy; then there were Freddie, the blue-eyed, full of fun and mischief, and sweet, gentle little Mabel, who did everything so quietly, and had such a soft, winsome, smiling face that nobody could help kissing it who looked at it.

That dreaded scarlet fever! Ah! they had reason to remember its entrance into their home, for when it left them Frankie lay still and white, with flowers upon his breast, on his little bed. Mother stole in and out, with eyes that looked weary of weeping; the children's laughter was hushed, the house was darkened, and all seemed lonely and sad. By and by, when Frankie's form had been laid to its last long rest, in the family grave, the loneliness seemed even worse. Oh, how Freddie and Mabel longed to see him! How they talked of and begged him to come back, if only for one game!

"Where is he?" They asked everyone, and the answer that came with a sigh and a sob, "In heaven, darlings," did not seem to satisfy them.

"I know where Frankie is, and where heaven is," whispered Freddie to his sister as they stood together after dinner in the dining room.

"Do you? Oh, let's go and bring him back! God won't mind, and Mother 'll be so glad!" cried five-year-old Mabel.

"I know the way too," said Freddie.

"Oh, how nice!" said Mabel, with the grandest faith in Freddy's knowledge and abilities.

So they decided to go and tempt Frankie back. "He needn't stay," urged Mabel, "if heaven's nicerer than our nursery. We only want him so, so much just for a little."

"He liked his marbles best," said Freddie. "I mean to take them in my pocket. He'd do anything for marbles."

"Yes," assented Mabel; and they ran for hat and cap, and stole out in the soft sunshine, through the park, and down the lane to the village cemetery, where, under the snowy marble tomb, Freddie had watched his brother laid.

"This is heaven and Frankie's inside it," said Freddie decidedly; "we must knock, I suppose."

And the children knocked, and knocked again, and their little voices pleaded, oh! so touchingly, with the loved, lost playmate who could not hear them. And by and by they wept, and their hands were bruised with weary knocking at the cold marble door, and their voices grew tired and hoarse. Poor little souls! So much hope they had brought with them, such bitter disappointment they met and mourned.

A tall lady in black carrying a basket of pale, fragrant primroses lingers near the little ones. After laying her tribute on some lost one's grave, she wonders at their grief, and, mother-like, she cannot leave them weeping. So she wins from them their story.

"He never, never said a word," sobbed little Mabel; "he used to love to play with us once, but he will not even speak to us now."

Then the lady told them, soft and low, the old, old story of the cross and the tomb—the story of the first glad Easter morn, and of One who was living, and who was sought for amongst the dead. The children listened with wondering, wakeful eyes. It all seemed so real, so beautiful, as they sat beside Frankie's grave. It all dawned on them. How he was not there, but was risen; how Frankie was Frankie still; living, loving, a happy child in God's bright presence, with snow-white wings, lustrous with heavenly light, with a smile that had caught its radiance from his Saviour's face, with a heart that first beat and throbbed with love and life. And they went home comforted. Freddie emptied the marbles out of his pocket, saying, "I would not have brought these, if I'd only known how splendid it all is, and what he has got instead."

The lady left them at their gate and went on her way.

CAPT. CAREY.—The daily newspapers record the death in India of Captain Carey, who accompanied the Prince Imperial in South Africa at the time he met with his death.

PUBLIC MORALITY.—A drawing-room meeting of ladies only took place on the 14th inst., at 86, Portland-place, for the consideration of the subject of the Regulation of Vice by the State. The inutility, injustice, and deceptive character of the Contagious Diseases Acts were clearly demonstrated by the ladies who addressed the meeting. The audience numbered over 200.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

CHAPTER XII.—REFLECTIONS.

"While I was musing the fire burned; then spake I with my tongue."—PSALM xxxix. 3.

"Well roars the storm to him who hears
A deeper voice across the storm."

NO one diagnosis of national disease, and, therefore, no one prescription of remedies, can at all approach the exhaustive. The difficulties so much harped upon can only be met by the contributions of many minds and hands. In preceding articles the dark picture was swiftly followed by the bright; in the war against the prevalent evil and the achievement of the possible good, it was shown that elevation of classes could only be secured by concentration on persons, and that the manhood of Britain demanded most attention; in the endeavour to accommodate Church methods to the prejudices and surroundings of the working manhood of the country, it was alleged that the toilers are openly or secretly resisted by a gilded tyranny in the shape of a selfish refinement; that once overthrown, the path will be more than ever open to irregular agents, who, while accused of suffering from a "craze," are in possession of the very craziness which Satan does not at all like; but since, for want of wise combination, a great deal of honest, talented work goes almost for nought, it is best to interlink Christian agencies as much as may be, and also to study carefully beforehand all experiments and all channels for the display of religious energy, lest there occur a deplorable waste of that which, in many quarters, is so much needed. Hardly got must not be lightly lost; so a rigid, loving guardianship of precious results is quite imperative; and in this, as well as in the actual gaining of these results, many side-helps are available.

In all topics so kindred to each other as are these, there must be a certain amount of intersection and even repetition of thought; and yet room is left for a few closing observations.

CLAIMS OF THE YOUNG.

The pleaders who urge the necessity of an early prevention of evil and implantation of good, merit a place among the sages of the Church. Preventive measures yield least apparent but most real fruit. There are no friends more faithful than are children. If they are taught to "follow truth along her star-paved way," they will be, in all probability, the staunch adherents of truth during their after years. The blame of their disloyalty and defection is generally in others, more than in themselves. Who can tabulate the good done by a minister who, on Saturday afternoons in winter, has a meeting purposely for the young, and by heartiness and liveliness, the giving of little cards for best scriptural answers, and the introduction of plenty of blithe singing, thoroughly interests and wins for his Lord the boys and girls alike? They obtain a belief in religion which no after-testings are able to wash away. The Church can scarcely do too much for her lambs, and social movements when allied with religious work will prove that the propensities to evil which have come from father to son can be trained out in quick time and their places supplied by celestial intuitions.

But the afflictions of the present come extensively from the remissness of the past. The legacy of untaught, unsanctified masses left to Protestantism centuries ago by a moribund Romanism has weighed heavily upon us ever since. We have had too much leeway to make up, and have had to devote to depraved adults the power which might have been exercised toward the children. If for fifty years the Churches could give unbroken thought to the rising race, the face of the land would be completely changed. Alas! it cannot be, for we are always in arrears with our work—thanks to the heresies and distractions of the past.

Hence the fact that this is a day of blackness, reproach, and blasphemy; that society is tossed and torn as if, on her expanse, the four winds were striving together for the mastery. The statistics which have gone the round have produced unwonted jubilation among the adversaries. Would-be-wise social quacks and quasi-religionists have fulminated against Churches and ministers; Papists have emitted their fœtid gasconade, and Anythingarians have favoured us with shrieky passion-cries of "Didn't we tell you so?" Nostrums without end have been offered for nothing, and each inventor has some one special medicine for a most complex ailment; uncharitable aspersions as to the capabilities of the chosen pastorate, and the faithfulness of the general crowd of the religious, have been hurled promiscuously hither and thither; the forgotten sneers at those who hold a "vulgar hope" have been revived by traducers and libellers, materialists and review-writers; the advocates of that doctrine of "a high (?) necessity," to which all falsities more or less incline, have fostered new anticipations of an early triumph over the one formidable "superstition;" it is roundly asserted that we may as well try to remove the "bitter from a partridge's thigh" as to extract the vice from the low-lived and incriminated.

A NEW OBSTRUCTION TO SUCCESS IN SOUL-WINNING

is slowly disclosing itself. All this "to-do" about the frivolous and unchaste, the scornful and the negligent, is giving them a larger idea of their own importance. Their pride and self-will are brought into play more actively than ever. They are becoming wary, and, on the principle that "Surely in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird," are eluding the snares laid for them by Christian love. "I'll take good care that these religious folks who are after us don't get hold of me," is the unspoken sentiment of great numbers of those whose salvation we desire. Never before, perhaps, were ministers of religion so much exposed to sarcastic comments as they pass along the streets. The popularised tunes with their sacred words are sung in ribaldry in hundreds of public-houses. Burlesques of the phrases and methods of aggressive Evangelism are shockingly common.

Only a few nights ago, I was put to exquisite pain on hearing from a cottage full of half-drunken men and women a vile parody of holy exhortations and sacred melodies. The astonishment and shame of the assembled company when I stepped into their midst and rebuked them with mingled sternness and tenderness was something worth witnessing. I told them I was accustomed to trust the working-classes of my country, and that, when I did so, I was never insulted. Said they, "Neither will we insult you;"—and they listened with respect to my loving, warning words. All these phenomena teach us that while we prepare more assiduously than ever for expeditions against sin, it will be wisest to make as little clangour as we can, lest we scare those whom we desire to save, and lest also we aid the proud self-willed soul in finding fresh reasons for its rebellion.

In presence of all these grave facts, what attitude are believers to take toward the mass of willingly captive men? They should avoid a spirit of murmuring, and also any sedative which is yielded by a pretty illusion. Growlers are mostly idlers, and illusionists don't usually earn their salt in honest religious work. While we shudderingly hear,

"The sad world's moan
The long low discord of incessant wrong;"

while, in view of possible excellencies which never, in some lives, become actualities, we plaintively sing,

"I see their unborn faces shine Beside the never-lighted fire;"

we ought to refuse to give up our faith and respect toward any of our fellows; for oh! it is so much easier to lose the vantage-ground of conviction than it is to recover it. The Lord Jesus spoke often with irony about the deeds and belief of some around Him, but not once with contempt toward the persons who wrought such deeds and held such beliefs.

CHRIST HAD FAITH IN MAN.

He who knew most about the evil in all men was most confident as to the future extension of good both in soul and society. As to us, if we lose faith in our fellow-mortals, we may almost as well lose faith in our Creator. Nay! the one often results from the other. Max Muller says that the idea of humanity as a whole came into the world with the advent of Christianity. Aforetime nations and persons despised each other, and each affected a lofty superiority to many of the rest; but now, the outburst whose sonorous Latin and sound sense brought forth the frantic applause of Rome's citizens, has a meaning more profound than ever before—"I am a man, and I hold that nothing which concerns mankind can be a matter of unconcern to me." When contempt for any members of the human family has once occupied the servant of Christ, there is no longer any hope of wide-spread usefulness as far as he is considered. The old-time tale about the one whose immortality was contingent on the possession of a single golden hair, is, in bad logic, more than matched by the creed of the religionists who, in Christian England, speak of the soul as if its continued existence depended on certain of its temporal and accidental surroundings.

At the root of much of the apathy of the Churches may be found the suspicion or belief that some who are called "men" are not inherently immortal. Surreptitiously, indeed, has this doubt about natural immortality poisoned the springs of action. It is noteworthy, too, that the tenderest wailing over lost sinners and the most earnest exhortations to labour on their behalf are found in books written by those who believe in the everlastingness of retribution to the persistently and finally impenitent. After all, it was the loyalty of the "lower orders" which lengthened on earth the Saviour's life. As far as human appearances go, but for them his day of toil, teaching, and miracle, would have been shortened, and the Gospels would not have been so great and so crowded a treasury as they actually are. It behoves the "better classes" to pay their debt to Judæa's lower orders by a liberal policy in thought and act toward the dense masses now found within this realm.

(To be concluded in our next.)

THE LITTLE OUTCASTS OF LONDON.

A CONTRAST.

A STRIKING contrast, says The Pall Mall Gazette, between the condition of the helpless children who crowd many of the streets of London and those who are cared for in certified homes for pauper children, is afforded by some letters that are published in the morning papers. The first, signed "District Visitor," appears in The Daily Telegraph:—

Not many days since the following sad tragedy came to my knowledge: A forlorn little girl, aged about twelve, but dwarfed by misery, hunger, and neglect, had been wont during these long, bitter winds to hang about Victoria Station trying to sell a box or two of cigar lights. Her plight became more wretched from day to day, until she could hardly shamble a few yards. The policemen about the station eyed her pityingly, and occasionally a penny or two was thrust into her hand—the givers being generally not much better off than herself. At last she dropped down in a swoon. She was lifted up, taken to the nearest police-station, and a little food, aided by a warm room, revived her soon. When asked where her home was, so that a policeman might lead her thither by the hand, she burst into a passionate fit of terror-stricken tears, exclaiming, "Oh, don't take me there! If I can't bring any money home my mother beats me almost to death. I am black and blue from head to foot" (her words proved true), "and can hardly walk. For the last six days I have hardly tasted food, until you gave me some to-day. Take me anywhere; do what you like with me; I will work for you from day to night, but oh! don't take me home, for mercy's sake!" It was found on referring to the address given by the poor little sufferer that her every word was true, and that other children equally forlorn were going daily through the same experience. The mother has been arrested, and is, I believe, now awaiting her trial. The poor little waif and stray of the streets has been sent to a Home.

"Another Grieved Spectator" writes to The Morning Post on the same subject as follows:—

Much good is being done for poor children, and it is a rare thing to see a boy of ten or twelve ragged and destitute in the street, as they were some few years ago. But for the infant and very young children, who are, night as well as day, made to suffer the greatest neglect and misery in our streets, by wretches who trade on their infancy, little or nothing seems to be done. The very tenderness of their age is made an excuse for leaving them in the clutches of wretches who make money by the children's pitiful helplessness. Why should these children be passed by? Cannot they also be taken from such wretches, like the elder ones? I feel sure there is quite a system now (since the elder children have been cleared off by the School Board, &c.) of trading on the helplessness of mere infants. If one happens to pass at midnight along the Strand or Trafalgar-square, by St. Martin's Church, the way is beset by numbers of the tiniest children. Doubtless they are watched, and the money taken from them by the so-called fathers and mothers. We have a home for destitute dogs, and thousands of pounds go out of the country annually to benefit charities abroad. Might not some of this English wealth be kept for this most piteously deserving charity at home—namely, a home for destitute and ill-used babyhood?

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE PICTURE is presented by Mrs. Anne Thackeray Ritchie, who sends to the Daily News the following account of her recent visit to a certified home for pauper children at Clapham:—

In the home were some twenty little boys, who came stumping into a big comfortable room at Clapham, with windows opening on to a garden where rabbits and vegetables were flourishing. A long table was laid for dinner. A bowl piled with steaming carrots stood on the table, while a leg of pork smoked at the end. All the little boys came clustering round about these delicacies, with nicely-rinsed healthy faces and brushed-up wisps of hair. The manager stood carving as hard as he could. Mrs. Manager came and went, dispensing bread in a motherly sort of way. "Joey, where's Joey? Make haste, Joey!" and the twentieth little boy appears in the doorway and trots to his place with the comfortable, confident air of a child whose face has just been washed, and who knows its dinner is ready. Next to Joey, with his red cheeks, sat a pale-faced boy with shining eyes and an odd bright expression. I had read about him in the papers a few weeks before. He had been found, starving and almost inanimate, by the police, in a filthy garret, where the mother, a tipsy creature, had kept her children locked up for weeks together until she was finally locked up herself by the magistrate, and the poor children taken to the workhouse. The boy after a time was sent to this home by the guardians. But from the first, so my friend told me, he never would speak, or allow a single word to be said against his mother.

And herein lies the whole gist of the matter. These faithful little creatures have natural hearts, with which to trust and believe in the veriest shadow of a mother, and the worst of natural ties is in so far better than the best of systems. These children are pauper children sent by guardians, but there is no pauperisation among them. They are little individual boys, all separately cared for, and expected to do their best, as the best is done for them. If Joey's glands are swollen, he is sent as a cabin boy, and the sea air cures him; if Jimmy longs to be a "buttons," buttons are found for him. This amount of attention is possible where there are only twenty little boys; but with five or six hundred how is it possible?

The corresponding school for little girls at Clapham breathes the same homelike gentle spirit. As I looked into the sitting-room after my visit there, I saw a group of the little housemaids-to-be appropriately playing with a doll's house of generous proportions, and rubbing and dusting the tiny chairs and ornaments. One of them was singing with a very sweet voice, like a little bird. "Hush!" said the other little girls, turning very red, when they saw me. Their packets of letters tell the friendly story of wholesome influence continued into after life. "I now take the pleasure of writing to you," says the little maid-of-all-work, after a year's absence; another sends cards, kind love, over four closely-written pages. "Your ever loving daughter Ellen," signs an enthusiastic little housemaid. All the letters are full of messages and inquiries for "Fanny." Fanny is the adopted child of the little community, a baby, found in a parcel upon a bridge, and the girls were allowed to bring her up. I think these ladies, who for eight years have worked and dispensed not only the better things but silver and gold upon their Homes, have fully proved their theory. Out of thirty girls sent out into the world two have failed; one was idiotic, the other hopelessly naughty.

These Homes were mentioned not long ago at the Social Science Congress as admirable in working and result. All along the guardians have helped and approved them, and only one difficulty has lately arisen. When the boys' home was opened the honorary secretary, being unwilling to attempt to raise a large sum by subscription, first inquired whether the guardians would be willing to pay 7s. 6d. a week with each pauper boy, that being the sum which they paid to the district schools. To this no objection was made, but in 1882 the Poor-law auditor refused to pass the accounts, and the sum has been reduced (although the guardians appealed to be allowed to pay as before), leaving £100 to be made up for the year's current expenses. My object in troubling you, Sir, is to ask for some help towards this sum, and also to suggest, through your kind help, an indefinite extension of such admirable and simple experiments. Boarding out is no doubt the best of substitutes for good homes, but it must be remembered that only orphans can be boarded out, and most of these children have skirmishing parents alive, ready to appear the moment any advantage or black mail is to be levied. Any subscriptions towards the expenses of the children at Clapham should be sent to the care of the hon. sec. of the Homes, Miss H. L. Synnot, Clapham-common, or would be gratefully acknowledged by your obedient servant, ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE, Moray Lodge, Kew.

RESCUE WORK IN POPLAR.—In the fourth annual report of this excellent work, Mrs. Wilkes appeals for help from the Christian public. We are glad to know that this Mission is free of debt. Its work is well and favourably known to many of our readers.

THE BIBLE FLOWER MISSION.—The Report for 1882 states that the distribution of bouquets was 399,149, being an increase of 32,188 over 1881. The receipts for the year were £337 7s. 1d., and show a balance in hand of over £11. There are interesting items of conversation mentioned.

THE CHURCHES AND THE MASSES.

THE indifference of the people to religious services conducted at ordinary places of worship, forces itself upon the attention of all who are observant of matters affecting the moral aspects of our times. The Congregationalists, led by Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., seem to recognise the need of decisive action in reference to the matter. They have resolved to establish Mission Halls in various districts, as centres of general benevolent activity, and for the preaching of the Gospel.

There can be no doubt that the time has come for attention being given to this subject on a far wider scale than it has yet received. A more sad fact than that stated by Mr. Morley at the Conference held on this subject at the Memorial Hall the other day could scarcely be penned. In the district of Kilburn, it was found recently, on a certain Sunday evening, by direct numbering, that whilst there were in 25 places of worship 5570 people, in 35 public-houses there were 5591. We fear there is no reason to think Kilburn worse than many other neighbourhoods. Unless the members of our Churches rouse themselves from selfish regard to their own ease and comfort, and obey the Saviour's command to go out into the highways and hedges, and seek by special means to lay hold on the multitudes of people outside their Church organisations, the alienation will increase, and be beyond remedy.

We do not want fewer churches and chapels, but we do want more care for others on the part of many who are connected with them. The sooner the self-complacency of those who pride themselves on their handsome edifices and respectable congregations can be disturbed, and made to give place to downright earnest effort to reach the vast crowds who have no part nor lot in the matter, the better for all concerned. The parable of the Good Samaritan has its lesson for to-day, even as the priest and the Levite have still their living representatives.

Some concern was expressed at the Conference referred to, lest the movement in favour of erecting special Mission halls should tend in any degree to isolate the Churches from the work of evangelisation, and lest these halls should become really separate Churches. It was urged that the special effort intended should be kept in close union with neighbouring Christian communities. There is much to be said in favour of this, both on the ground that the interest taken by the Church in its special Mission agency would be for the spiritual welfare of its members, and that converts made by such agencies would at once find a spiritual home, where Christian nurture and brotherly aid would help on their growth in the knowledge and service of Christ. But here, again, how much must depend upon the condition of the Churches in relation to spiritual life and power! Everything urges the cry, "O Lord, revive Thy work."

THE "WILFRID LAWSON," EPPING FOREST.—It was my privilege to attend the opening of a new coffee palace on Easter Monday. It is well situated, and will meet the need of the thousands of blue ribboners who never fail on holidays to take a breath of pure country air in our grand old East-end forest. We felt that this was just the place we had longed for, when taking out hundreds of our poor people for their day's excursion. We hope to take one thousand poor people (young and old) to the "Wilfrid Lawson," in detatchments of two to three hundred, in the bright summer-time. May our God abundantly bless the kind lady and gentleman who have erected this handsome temperance hotel for our poor Londoners!

ANNIE MACPHERSON.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—2.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THIS, then, is Christ's idea of his holy religion. It is to make men like God, corresponding to Him, answering to Him. This is the aim and end of every part of it—to make men think as God thinks; to make men will as God wills; to make men do as God commands.

To think as God thinks—that is, to love God with all the mind.

To will as God wills—that is, to love God with all the heart.

To do what God commands—that is, to love God with all the strength.

And not only of Christianity is this the great aim. It is impossible to think of any true religion of which this is not the purpose—to be like God. This is religion in the angels; this was the religion of Paradise—a power sustaining and developing the likeness of God. This was the whole aim of the Jewish religion. Christianity is one with all these in its purpose.

But Christianity differs from all these—

In the way in which that purpose is to be fulfilled.

The Son of God becomes the son of man that through Him the sons of men may become the sons of God. The great revelation that Christ makes is not of God only, but of God as "Our Father." This is the key-note of the Sermon on the Mount, "Your Father, which is in heaven." And in that new relationship lie these new and infinite possibilities. The relationship between God and Israel was the relation of a covenant. God was the God of Abraham; Israel was the seed of Abraham. Our relationship to God is the relationship of a new nature. Born of God, we are his children, and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ. Here lies the glorious possibility of perfection: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." Dwell upon it until the thoughts are filled with the mighty wonder of it, and the heart glows with an adoring love, and all the soul is thrilled with its boundless promise. Not in any figure, but in very act and deed they that are Christ's are "begotten of God;" "partakers of the Divine Nature." Accept it as the pledge of an infinite blessedness. Herein lies not only the possibility of perfection, but the ground of this command and demand. This new and closer relationship of sons has new claims upon us. God has a right to a fuller obedience; a heartier confidence; a more loving service. He calls upon us to live in the enjoyment of our high and holy privilege. Hence all the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount. Christ is "not come to destroy the law but to fulfil," to make it possible by this new relationship for us to keep it perfectly—to turn the thou shalt of the table of stone into the I will of the new heart.

And because we are sons we are brought into a new relationship to each other, with new duties and new opportunities of mutual service. Of old time men were neighbours; now that we are the children of God every man becomes a brother; and the friendliness of old is to be quickened and kindled into a brotherly love, with forbearance and gentleness and generous self-sacrifice.

This, then, is holiness; the healthy development of this divine nature that is within us. Born of God, we have the beginning of a life in which lies all the possibility and promise of a perfect likeness to God. Holiness is the steady and healthy growth of this new life. It may be a "second blessing;" it may be a two-hundred-and-twenty-second blessing. It may be sought after with an agony of endeavour; it may be a simple, glad, unconscious effort that just pleases Jesus all day long, because it seems as if love cannot help it. It may be a rapture; it may be a conflict; it may be a gloom. Mark—it may be! Holiness may go with all these—and it may go without any of them. For holiness is simply a perfectly healthy religious life. By faith in the Lord Jesus, and by the gracious energy of the Holy Ghost, you are born of God—now live.

"Live," you say—"is that all! I live without any trouble. I eat and drink, and sleep, and live. This is a very short and easy cut to holiness."

Is it so? Think of all that life means. Air, food, light, warmth, society, exercise, rest. Let the spiritual life within us have these as freely and ungrudgingly as we give them to the bodily life, and holiness asks no more. Breathing the atmosphere of communion with God—the breath of God; desiring the sincere milk of the word that we may grow thereby; walking in the light as He is in the light; warmed with the glowing love of Jesus filling the soul; running gladly in the way of his commandments; resting in the care of the gracious Lord who careth for us—this is to ensure the all-round development of the life of God within us.

Yet again, think of all that life means. The getting up in the morning, and all the philosophy of being clothed. The breakfast, compassing two worlds that you may have a cup of tea. Then business—letters and telegrams; the markets, with the anxious scanning of appearances; the manufacture, with its trained skill and caution; the money-making and the money-losing—life means all this. Dinner, with all the hundred hands that have toiled to feed us; the harvest of the ages meets us in the commonest crust of bread. The home, with all its arrangements, domestic, social, sanitary.

Holiness means that in all this round of life we seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. So thinking and purposing and doing that everywhere the life of God within us shall have freedom and opportunity for growth; much more, that it shall be kept from the blight of the world's east wind and frost, and from being trodden under foot and crushed in the crowd of cares. This first: not gain, not honour, not pleasure. First in all things to be like God.

Holiness, then, is simply this: perfect health of soul. And what is perfect health anywhere, in anything? It cannot be other than this—perfect reception and perfect distribution of all that life depends upon.

"Christ, who is our life," PERFECTLY RECEIVED for forgiveness, for deliverance, for victory, for all.

"Christ, who is our life," PERFECTLY DISTRIBUTED over the home and the business, throughout the thoughts and wishes and words and deeds.

This is holiness. This reception checked, then at once the life is a sickly one. This reception stopped, then the sickness is unto death.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

CLOSING AT LEEDS.

THE visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Leeds closed last night. My last letter was written near its commencement, and it is not possible now to give more than a general impression. As the Mission went on, the meetings grew in numbers and deepened in interest. Good Friday brought in many from outside the town. The Coliseum, holding 4000, and Oxford-place Chapel 2000 to 3000, were both crowded. In the afternoon, at the Coliseum, Mr. Moody's address was suited to the occasion—a vivid picture of the scenes at "The Supper," "The Garden," before the High Priest, Pilate, Herod, at Calvary; and then at the Tomb, when, on the morning of the resurrection, the stone was miraculously rolled away—"not to enable Christ to rise and leave the sepulchre, but that his disciples and the faithful women might look in and see that it was empty." Many in the audience would feel that they never listened to a more solemn and powerful address.

On March 25, as on the previous Sunday, four services were held, viz., for Christian workers at 8 a.m.; for non-church and chapel-goers, at 11 a.m.; for women at 3 p.m., and for men at 7. Large overflow-meetings were held in connection with the two latter. Those at Oxford-place Chapel have been conducted by Mr. J. M. Scroggie, with like results, in leading many into the inquiry-room, and, it is hoped, to Christ, as were obtained at the Coliseum, under the ministry of Mr. Moody.

Easter Monday being a Bank Holiday, brought many into Leeds. The Leeds Mercury says the flow of excursionists out of Leeds by train was less than usual, though the weather was fine, while the flow into Leeds was great. The meetings were of course crowded. Mr. Moody was heard to say that most of those, for two or three days of the holiday time, to whom he spoke in the inquiry-room, came from neighbouring or more distant towns. During several days it became needful to hold a third overflow-meeting in the Victoria Hall (Town Hall), which was conducted by Mr. Cleworth, of the Church of England Parochial Mission.

The last two days, in order to accommodate the crowds of expectant hearers, the evening meeting was held at six for women and at eight for men. Mr. Moody's closing afternoon address yesterday was a very powerful appeal against conformity to the world. His words took deep hold of the audience, and an involuntary "hear, hear" was once or twice heard.

The prayer-meetings claim a brief notice. These were held in the Albert Hall (Mechanics' Institute), nearly opposite the Coliseum, at noon daily, and were conducted by Mr. Scroggie. The attendance rose from 300 or 400 to 1000 or more; and very solemn and profitable the occasions were—a good preparation for the later services of each day, as well as an opportunity for presenting many special requests for prayer or praise before the Lord.

On the suggestion of Mr. Moody, who is one of the most business-like and practical of men, the Coliseum was used last Saturday for a Blue-Ribbon mass meeting. It was filled by an audience that listened with the keenest interest to addresses by Mr. H. E. Richardson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Mr. Clark Aspinall, coroner of Liverpool.

The question may be asked, What is the result, and how does it compare with the work of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in other places? As to numbers and manifest interest, the most sanguine anticipations have been exceeded. My impression, from information, is that fewer have found their way into the inquiry-room than has been the case in some other places. Leeds is a slow town to move, but when moved is slow to lose the impression that has been made. The whole and final result is hidden from human eyes. I rejoice in the belief that the visit has been greatly blessed of God, and that He who on earth was careful that no fragment of food should be lost and wasted, will gather up the results of this work done in his name, and that they will appear hereafter to his glory.

As the committee have the use of the Coliseum for three or four weeks longer, meetings in the evenings of next week will be held by Mr. J. M. Scroggie. It was Mr. Moody's earnest wish that Mr. Scroggie should remain and continue the Mission services. It may be said that he has given "full proof of his ministry," and much prayer will be made that his further labours may be greatly blessed.

Leeds, March 31. T. Harvey.

Another correspondent writes:—"On Sunday afternoon the Coliseum was full. The audience was deeply impressed by Mr. Scroggie's address, and many in the inquiry-room were to be seen seeking the Saviour. In the evening the building was again crowded, and 'the power of the Lord was present to heal.' A powerful address was given from 2 Cor. viii. 9. Many anxious ones rose to be prayed for, and many came into the inquiry-room seeking the Saviour."

The following discriminating remarks on the meeting are by a well-known writer in the Leeds Mercury:—"The chief social event in Leeds during the past week or ten days has unquestionably been the 'Mission' of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the well-known American revivalist preachers. I believe that in few towns visited by these gentlemen has their success been so great as it has been here. How great it has been in Leeds is proved by the simple fact that last Tuesday afternoon no fewer than ten thousand persons were congregated together in the Coliseum and the halls and chapels in which 'overflow' meetings were being held, in order to hear Mr. Sankey sing and Mr. Moody or some other evangelist preach. It is ridiculous to attempt to ignore a movement which is attended by such results as this. I should like to know what living orator could bring together for an afternoon meeting ten thousand men and women. Whether Messrs. Moody and Sankey are right or wrong in their methods of working,—and that is a question upon which people have differed and will continue to differ,—there can at least be no doubt as to their marvellous success. We must go back to the early days of Mr. Spurgeon's ministry in London, or to the historic times of Whitefield, in order to find anything that can be compared with it.

"There is one point which must puzzle those who go to hear Mr. Moody preach, and who do so with fair and unbiassed minds. That is, as to the secret of his remarkable success. He is not an eloquent man, or a learned one. He makes no attempt by violent language or heated declamation to rouse the feelings of his hearers. Your first impression on listening to him is almost certain to be one of disappointment, for his manner is so quiet and even conversational that it is difficult to suppose that it can affect anyone. But it does affect those who hear him, all the same. He utters a humorous remark, and a smile flits across the faces of the thousands who are listening to him. Then he tells a story, and you think it a very good story, but not a very new one. But suddenly he 'applies' that little anecdote, and you find that he has come quite close to the hearts of all that multitude. How is it done? I think the secret of his success lies in the very simplicity of the means he uses. He makes his appeal constantly to one or two of the nobler sentiments of our common human nature, which can hardly be absent from any heart, however hardened or degraded it may be. It is to the love of children for their parents and of parents for their children that he most constantly appeals; and it is by this means that he gets so near to the hearts of men and women of all classes and conditions in life. Who is there who has not loved a mother, or mourned for her? This all-pervading sentiment of the human heart is made in Mr. Moody's hand a lever wherewith he moves thousands who would be callous under the most impassioned eloquence of the ablest of preachers of the ordinary type. I cannot help thinking that our churches would be much better filled if clergymen and ministers would condescend to take a few lessons in the art of preaching from this simple and homely Evangelist."

OPENING IN LIVERPOOL.

The closing series of meetings during the present campaign of the Evangelists was begun at Liverpool on Sunday last, under the most favourable conditions. The opening services are admirably reported in the leading local papers. Monday's Mercury and Courier each devote two and a half long columns to this purpose, and the Daily Post is not far behind in point of space. The following is from the Mercury:—

"The second visit to this city of Messrs. Moody and Sankey will doubtless be welcomed by all sections of the Christian Church in Liverpool, whose work derived much stimulation and resuscitation some eight years ago as a result of the successful Mission then held. The great revival movement not only aroused many of our congregations from the lethargic state into which they had apparently fallen, and put new life and energy into the Churches, but also contributed unmistakably to that better feeling between one denomination and another—between Church and Dissent—which has become more manifest of recent years in movements having for their object the common good. Messrs. Moody and Sankey commenced their labours in this town yesterday under most auspicious circumstances. They found all the arrangements for their visit and Mission as thorough and complete as a well-organised and zealous committee could make them. The four services in Hengler's Circus (where all the principal meetings are to be held daily) brought together larger gatherings than have ever before crowded within the spacious building, and many disappointed thousands must have gone away from the doors in the course of the day. In view of this emergency, however, overflow meetings were arranged to be held at Brunswick and other chapels, where it was announced that Mr. Sankey would sing.

"The large stables in the rear of the building have undergone very considerable transformation. The great object of Mr. Moody's preaching and Mr. Sankey's singing is to 'rescue the perishing,' and to bring them under Christian influences after they have gone away; consequently, one of the most important elements in connection with the Gospel meetings is to lay hold of inquirers for 'more light,' and direct them in their further pursuit of the 'unsearchable riches.' The stables, therefore, have been converted into an 'inquiry room,' comfortably furnished with matting and chairs, the walls are recoloured, and the mangers covered with red drapery. A number of gentlemen—ministers and laymen—well known for their earnest Christian piety, have volunteered to assist the evangelists in meeting inquirers, among whom it may be hoped there will be many who will commence a new spiritual life in the stable, as earnest disciples of Him who, nearly nineteen hundred years ago, first saw the light of earth in a manger."

We add a few sentences from the introductory remarks of the Daily Post reporter:—

"Messrs. Moody and Sankey began their Mission in Liverpool yesterday, when four great meetings were held in Hengler's Circus. Large and commodious as the building is, it did not provide accommodation for all who desired to be present, and overflow meetings were extemporised in the College Hall, Shaw-street. There is little change in the personal appearance of the evangelists since they were last here, except what eight years of hard work may be supposed to have effected. Mr. Moody is as robust as ever, and his addresses are marked by the plain, earnest, somewhat colloquial, but nervous power that characterised his utterances at the last visit. The voice of Mr. Sankey has lost none of its charm, and he sings with his old fervour the well-known hymns in the collection of Sacred Songs and Solos. At eight o'clock in the morning the first great meeting was held in the Circus for Christian workers. The building was crowded to excess. Following this service was one at eleven o'clock for non-churchgoers. The congregation was not so large as that at the preceding service. We have no means of ascertaining what proportion of the vast congregation were non-church or non-chapelgoers. It was estimated that there were 6000 persons present, the majority being men, but judging by appearances we should think very few belonged to the class for whom the meeting was specially held. The acoustic properties of the structure proved to be admirable, and the enunciation of Mr. Sankey was clearly heard all over the place, while every word Mr. Moody uttered was distinctly audible in the remotest corner. The other services yesterday were one at three for women only, and another at seven for men only, both of which were largely attended."

A GLASGOW MISSION OF HOPE AND HELP.

A TRULY noble and Samaritan work is that which has been carried on for some years in Glasgow by the Prison-gate Mission, William-street, Calton, and the House of Shelter for Females, Hill-street, Garnet-hill. Miss Bryson is at the head of the former institution, while the latter is under the fostering and motherly care of Mrs. Ferguson. A friend in Glasgow who lately paid a visit to the House of Shelter, sends to us an interesting statement of the operations of both Missions, which within a recent period have been incorporated, with mutual advantage.

The Prison-gate Mission, as its name implies, is intended specially for the benefit of such female prisoners as may be induced or disposed to seek its friendly aid at the conclusion of their period of "durance vile." In this time of their sore need they can count upon the sisterly sympathy and assistance of Miss Bryson and her helpers. Temporary occupation is provided, and every effort is made to make smooth the pathway of the erring one back to a course of honest and remunerative industry. Many successful instances of this are to be found in the records of the Mission, and their frequent recurrence is a great stimulus to those who labour so devotedly in this branch of Christian service.

The House of Shelter is somewhat wider in scope than the sister institution; its doors are open to all, whether criminals or not, who, from any cause have turned aside from the narrow way, and find it difficult to return. In the case of its inmates, a probation of twelve months is imposed, experience having dictated this condition as one most conducive, in the long run, to permanent and satisfactory reformation. Our correspondent says, that instead of this proviso being unwelcome to those who seek and find a place of shelter at Garnet-hill, it is only with reluctance that many of them quit its friendly precincts at the expiration of the appointed time. Such a fact speaks volumes for the kindness shown, and the beneficent influence exerted, by those who conduct the internal arrangements of the Home.

At the annual meeting of the combined Mission, held the other day in Glasgow, it was stated that a large number of women had been effectively helped during the past twelve months, there being 100 inmates on the books at the close of the year. The need of a new building to meet the growing demands of the Prison Gate Mission work is seriously felt, and an earnest appeal was made at the meeting for voluntary help towards this most desirable object. It is of course a matter for much regret that there should be any need for extending the operations of such a work; but since that need exists, the facts, however unwelcome, must be recognised, with a feeling of the deepest thankfulness that there are those ready to do this blessed work of rescue, if the Christian public will but furnish the means for its accomplishment. We very warmly commend these efforts to lift up the fallen ones in a great city, to the sympathetic consideration of our readers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS who are striving after efficiency should give a careful perusal to the last week's double issue of The Sunday School Chronicle (56, Old Bailey, E.C., 2d.), which contains full reports of the Easter Conferences in the provinces, and much other valuable matter relating to this important work.

WORLDLY AMUSEMENTS.

A CORRESPONDENT writes on the subject of the duty of Christians in relation to worldly amusements; instances are cited of some holding office in the Church to which they belong, who publicly eulogise dramatic performances, and of professed servants of Christ who regularly attend them. There can be no doubt that a sad degree of laxity prevails in Christian circles on this point. The half-hearted and formal spirit which is so often found in connection with Church life may be largely traced to its influence. It is useless, however, laying down rules on this matter for others; nothing can cure the evil but a deepening of spiritual life in those who thus attempt to serve God with one hand and the world with the other.

The root of the evil is to be found in a want of true consecration of heart. The mind set on things above has no desire for the carnal delights of this world. The heart filled with the love of Christ has no room for earthly pleasures; "none but Christ can satisfy" those who are truly his. No amount of reasoning, or of censure, will avail with those who, while bearing the name of Christ, persist in seeking pleasure apart from Him. They must be made to know and feel by Divine impression their folly and their sin, as well as their need of reaching a higher spiritual level, if they are to answer the great end of their calling.

It is a deplorable fact that in some of the most prominent of our religious communities expedients are resorted to which tend directly to foster the evil our correspondent refers to. For example, few, we should think, of those who have the cause of Christ at heart, could read without painful regret of an entertainment recently given in connection with the City Temple Sunday-school, in which an acted charade and tableaux formed the main feature, the gist of the former being a parlour scene in a country hotel, in which we are told the dramatic talent displayed by the young men and women engaged, drew forth the vociferous cheering of a crowded audience, as did also "the performances of the very little children—mostly girls—some of them mere infants."

We have no desire to be censorious, or to sit in judgment on others where matters of fair difference of opinion are in question, but, in the name of all that is Christlike and pure, we would ask: Can this kind of entertainment be productive of spiritual or even moral good? Can the high and holy aims of Sunday-school work be attained or furthered by such means? How can the influence of pious parents who look anxiously upon their sons and daughters just entering into life be supported by such doings, as they endeavour to warn them of the evils of the stage and its surroundings? Nay, are not their endeavours frustrated, and their influence weakened, as such facts, sustained by names of note in the Christian world, are published and made known?

By these methods—and similar things are also by no means uncommon in connection with associations formed for the young belonging to the Churches and congregations of to-day—the worldliness of the Church is promoted, and the influence of truth is lessened on every side. The Spirit of God is grieved, the power of his presence is consequently withheld, and the work of the tempter is helped forward, to the dismay of the true friends, and to the satisfaction of the enemies, of our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE NATION'S DRINK BILL.

A LETTER from Mr. William Hoyle, of Bury, which appeared in a recent number of The Times, cannot fail to fix the attention and excite the zeal of the friends of Temperance all over the land. It treats of the Drink Bill of Great Britain for 1882. The figures quoted, while affording some ground for satisfaction, and hope as to the future, are shown to be by no means so gratifying as many have thought they would prove. Mr. Hoyle thinks the decline in the revenue from the diminished consumption of intoxicating drinks is due mainly to the reduced means caused by the depression in trade, and but very partially to the progress of Temperance principles. The difference in the Government returns for 1881 and 1882 is given in the gross as £823,101, the total expenditure being for the latter year £126,251,359. Considered more minutely, the cost per head of intoxicating liquors was in 1881, £3 12s. 10d.; in 1882, £3 11s. 7d. This difference is indeed small, although if it is set against £4 9s. in 1876, the result of Temperance work may seem more encouraging.

There is, moreover, room for Mr. Hoyle's expression of disappointment contained in the following sentences:—

During the past few months paragraphs have from time to time appeared in the public Press referring to the decline in the revenue from the diminished consumption of intoxicating liquors. Those comments have created an impression in the public mind, especially in the minds of those engaged in temperance work, that the reduction of the past year would be greater than proves to be the case; for, when account is taken of the efforts put forth by the Alliance, the old Temperance Societies, the Blue Ribbon movement, the Salvation Army, by Bands of Hope, Good Templars, Rechabites, the Church of England Temperance Society, and all the other temperance organisations that are associated with the various Christian Churches, a tangible reduction was to have been expected; and it does seem appalling that the most that all these organisations have been able to effect during the past year has been to stem the further rising of the tide of the intemperance which so fearfully deluges our beloved country.

The cause of this small amount of real progress is traced to lack of legislation on the subject in the right direction, and what we may term over-legislation in the wrong direction. Mr. Hoyle argues, and we think justly:—

The legalised influences which so universally produce intemperance are so numerous and powerful that they prove themselves to be more potent than the most energetic voluntary efforts of our people, even when roused to a high pitch of enthusiasm. A nation which licenses evil weakens thereby its moral power, and so long as the Legislature of this country licenses 180,000 persons to pursue a traffic the interests of which are antagonistic to national society, virtue, and order, so long we shall have to mourn our inability to cope with the resulting evils.

The examples quoted of the successful results of Temperance legislation in Scotland, through the passing of the Forbes-Mackenzie Act in 1854, and also in Sweden, are very striking, and convincing to all who fairly look at the question, as to the desirableness of similar action in our own country. We give the following quotation concerning Sweden, which thirty years ago was said to be the most drunken country in Europe. It is from the pen of Mr. A. Balfour, of Liverpool, who says:—

In estimating the practical value of the Swedish Licence Reform Act of 1855, allow me to refer to the fact that no minimum number was fixed for licences, and this, which is essentially a permissive prohibitory Act, has existed in Sweden for the last twenty years. So vigorously have the people outside of towns used their permission to limit and prohibit, that, among 3,500,000 people, there are only 450 places for the sale of spirits. This it is which has so helped Sweden to emerge from moral and material prostration, and which explains the existence of such general indications in that country of comfort and independence among all classes.

In Switzerland, where the Cantons have been deprived of the power they previously possessed of regulating the drink traffic, the results have proved most disastrous. Witness the following statement of a Times correspondent, writing from Geneva in December last:—

As a consequence of the abolition of these restrictions, the number of public-houses has increased from 17,807 in 1870, to 21,838 in 1880. . . . The increase of public-houses has been followed by a marked increase of drunkenness and crime, and the time lost and the money spent by working men in public-houses has resulted in untold suffering thereby inflicted upon their families. The vice of intemperance is growing so fast in Switzerland as to occasion grave anxiety among men of all classes.

Stimulated by these facts on the one hand, and warned on the other, we may well look to Government for aid in further Temperance reform, and shall do well to act upon Mr. Hoyle's advice in the closing sentences of his timely and thoughtful letter:—

I would urge upon every one who desires the welfare of the nation, earnestly to support all measures tending to lessen the temptation to intemperance; and not only to do this, but also to press upon the Government the necessity of effectually dealing with the licensed traffic in intoxicating liquors, which produces intemperance and other evils in this country—evils so gigantic in their magnitude as to exceed the combined scourges of war, pestilence, and famine.

In a letter sent by Mr. J. G. Richardson, of Bessbrook, Armagh, to Mr. Gladstone, and published recently in various forms, the arguments in favour of the plea for speedy action on the part of the Government are stated with great clearness and force, as follows:—

Some of the best men in the House, Conservative and Liberal, are in favour of decided action, and would rejoice at the accomplishment of temperance reform, in response to the greatly-increasing interest almost everywhere shown by the public meetings throughout the country, and the consequent light thrown on the subject. There are, it is said, above 4,000,000 total abstainers amongst us. A constantly-increasing number of medical men are coming to the front and declaring alcoholic drinks to be the main cause of lunacy and disease of all kinds. It is the almost unanimous opinion of the judges of the land that 75 per cent. of crime is due to the same cause. It is an almost proven fact that 120,000 persons annually die, directly or indirectly, from its effects. It is estimated that there are 600,000 drunkards in the nation — useless, if not criminal — who, poor wretches, are crying, if we could but see their hearts, for deliverance from the terrible temptation placed before them in the public-houses. We have well-nigh one million of the population paupers in the workhouses, and perhaps another million outside, costing the nation nearly fifteen millions annually. We have examples of successful legislation on the subject in America and in our own colonies.

In view of these facts we may surely hope that ere long without unduly infringing on the liberties of the subject, some course may be taken by our legislature which shall serve to lift the nation to a higher level in the matter of Temperance reform. Meanwhile its friends and promoters have no reason to lose heart, but every reason to labour on in faith, and hope for results from the spread of their principles among the young, and rising generation. It is there that the fruit of modern Temperance work will be most manifestly seen.

THEATRICAL TEA-MEETING. — A largely attended meeting of women engaged in theatres was held on Friday last at Whitefield Church Schoolroom. Addresses were given by the Rev. Dr. McEwan, Mr. W. Forbes, and others.

Notes and Comments.

OUR readers will note that on page 20 we give an exhaustive list of the approaching Spring Anniversaries. It would be advisable that those who may have occasion to refer to the list should cut out and preserve the page.

We learn with much regret that Dr. Murray Mitchell, whose return from a long tour in India we recently announced, is detained in Italy through a slight attack of fever. We hope a speedy convalescence will enable him to reach England in time for some of the May anniversaries. His present address is Hotel Corona D'Italia, Florence, Italy.

We shall be much obliged to our readers if they will send us intelligence of Christian work in their own localities, whether immediately in connection with the Churches or otherwise. It will save them and ourselves trouble if such notes are given as briefly as possible, remembering that matters of specially local interest are not so much required for our columns as main features and results.

The Earl of Shaftesbury cannot, in the course of nature, continue many years longer in the exercise of the public activity of his long and useful life. We hope our readers will not overlook his addresses in our present issue. Lord Shaftesbury is a notable instance of one who "minds not high things, but condescends to men of low estate." He has not missed his reward here, nor will he lose it hereafter.

We have read with much pleasure an account recently written by two agents of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland, of their experiences in some of the disturbed districts of the sister Isle. The warm welcome everywhere extended to them, the ready ear granted to their message, and the joyful reception of the Gospel portions distributed, are all hopeful omens for the future of distracted Ireland. The work of this excellent and unpretentious Society is worthy of the heartiest support.

The Conference season is upon us. In addition to the gatherings at Blackheath, transplanted this spring from Crayford, there will be found in our list of Forthcoming Meetings the particulars of a similar Convention of Christians at Southsea. We trust these occasions, now so important a factor in the religious life of our community, may be seasons not only of manifested unity among Christians, but of manifest Power from on High. Our readers will no doubt make them a subject of constant and earnest prayer.

In view of the approaching, and we hope successful, effort to register a parliamentary vote on the question of legalised vice, we direct the attention of all social reformers to the letter in our correspondence columns by Mr. B. Scott, the City Chamberlain. Whatever can be done to strengthen the hands of those who are fighting this uphill battle on the floor of St. Stephen's, ought to be done without stint and without delay. We also take this opportunity of counselling a careful perusal of three able papers read at the recent Convention in London, by Miss Sarah Hill, Miss I. M. Tod (1d. each), and Rev. J. P. Gledstone (2d.), published in pamphlet form by Dyer Bros., Amen-court, E.C.

Our advertising columns this week contain a caution to young women and girls seeking employment. A new horror has come before us within the past week, which adds a dreadful emphasis to this warning. A young servant travelling in an omnibus was given a tract by a fellow-passenger, apparently a lady. They alighted together, and the latter invited the young woman to her house. She went, and found it, to her life-long sorrow, a whited sepulchre, fair outside, but within full of all uncleanness. We hope this case may be followed up and the guilty brought to justice. But our immediate purpose in mentioning it is, to caution young women against giving their confidence to anyone, and especially from putting themselves in the power of any person, without being well assured that they are worthy of their trust. Satan may come as an angel of light, but he is the devil still.

Many who have known the Weigh House Chapel and been interested in its sacred associations, will look with regret upon the fact that by the time this Note is before our readers the last service will have been held within its walls. Long the centre of many useful institutions, and the scene of the labours of some of the most eminent servants of Christ, it will be missed from the religious haunts of not a few in every section of the Church of Christ in and around London.

The Committee of the Congregational Union have just issued a recommendation to the Churches to set apart a day (April 8) for special prayer. The basis of their action in so doing is thus expressed:—

> That this Committee, having been led to consider the disastrous effect of the late unfavourable seasons on the material interests of the country, and sympathising especially with that part of the population which, through its connection with agriculture and its dependent industries, has suffered such great loss and discouragement, resolves respectfully to call the attention of the Churches to the duty of earnest and importunate prayer in regard to the matter.

It is a cause for much thankfulness and hope that there should be just now a quickened sense of the necessity and power of prayer on the part of various sections of the Christian Church. If this spreads and deepens so that the Church is really brought into a condition of humble, penitent, and expectant waiting upon God, we shall soon see showers of blessing descend upon our land, and threatening ills may yet be averted.

We see that the action of the Congregational Union in suggesting a day of special prayer, as indicated in the preceding Note, is causing no little stir among some of the constituents of that assembly. Although only issued as a recommendation, it is regarded by some, apparently, as rather in the nature of dictation and an infringement of liberty. It is spoken ot as inexplicable, and the purpose of it out of harmony with modern thought and scientific knowledge, while the fact that the decision to adopt such a course was passed by a narrow majority, is made a ground for regretting that it should have been passed at all. We sincerely trust that those who succeeded in obtaining the decision will not be disheartened by this reception of their proposal, and that they will be permitted to see rich fruit of their action in the matter by the spirit of prayer and supplication that God shall pour upon them and the Churches for which they act. There are still many thousands among the people of God in every Evangelical communion who will demur with earnestness and assurance of faith, to the suggestion that in the question of prayer to God for material interests we are as grown-up men in relation to children, in comparison with our pious forefathers.

With much regret we quote the following extract from a Bristol evening paper, and hope a knowledge of the facts will elicit a speedy and adequate response:—

> Amongst all classes of Bristol, no matter of what religious belief, there will be regret when it is known that at the present time one of the marvels of the age, the Orphan Asylum at Ashley Down, founded by Mr. George Muller, and still conducted by him, although he has been frequently away from home lately, is in need of increased support. There has been religious work undertaken in connection with the Asylum, and this has had to be greatly curtailed, whilst the strain of meeting the continual cost of maintaining the two thousand orphans has lately been severely, very severely, felt. It is an old boast of this institution that it is a charity that never begs, and its directors have never issued nor authorised any appeal. But the fact of funds being needed having been privately learned on good authority, it appears a public duty to make it widely known, and to leave it to the consideration to those who would regard it as a calamity, in more ways than one, for an institution with so wonderful a history to be crippled in its powers of usefulness.

It is to be feared that the practice of betting is much on the increase among young people, and that what has been said concerning America is true also of our own country: "The temptation to bet is increasing daily, and is becoming one of the most common that we have to meet with." Parents and tutors will do well to point out to their children and pupils the great evil of this practice on whatever scale it may be adopted. The following extracts from words spoken by "A Christian Merchant" may be serviceable to them in dealing with the subject:—

> The common practice of betting, or backing-up our declarations or opinions by a wager, is one of the most pernicious and dangerous among the customs of the world. Christ taught that any declaration that was more than yea, yea, or nay, nay, came from evil; and so I say to every youth who is starting out on the journey of life, Never bet. It will never add in the least degree to the confidence reposed in your truthfulness or soundness of judgment for you to back it up by a wager, no matter how small or large it may be; but, on the contrary, it is often the custom of persons whose word is but little depended upon to be always betting on their statements and opinions. I give it as my settled opinion and conviction, resulting from many years of almost constant observation, and some little experience, that good never comes from so doing, but evil—more or less—is always the result.

The danger of being led into this evil arises in many cases from failure to look at the matter in the light of the principle it involves. Things are often thought to be wrong when done on a large scale, but harmless if only entered into in a small way. The following words are specially worthy of note on this point:—

> The old proverb declares that "It is a sin to steal a pin," and I believe that if gambling is wrong in principle, it is wrong to bet even the smallest object under any circumstances whatever. I used to think I could wager a dinner or a big apple without harm; but of late I make it a point never to bet at all under any circumstances.
> The first step in gambling is often a bet, and may be taken under the impulse of a moment when we are contradicted and consequently excited.
> I earnestly warn all young people against ever being led into putting up a wager under any circumstances, whether at a church-fair or festival, or at the suggestion of any person, no matter if even by a professor of religion.

"GOING HOME."

(See "For the Young" in last week's CHRISTIAN.)

SAINTS from earth are hourly going,
One by one they pass away;
Loving hands would hold them longer,
Loving lips would bid them stay.
But the Master gently calleth,
And they answer, "It is well,"
As they rise into the glory,
Of the joy no tongue can tell.

There are tiny treasures passing
To that heaven-world so fair,
For the Lord, who loves the children,
Longs to have them safely there.
So He comes Himself to fetch them,
Then with baby-smiles they go
To the outstretched arms of Jesus,
To the One who wants them so.

There are youths and maidens also
Whom the Lord is calling now,
Hope hath flushed those fair young faces,
She hath crowned each eager brow;
For they love the King of Glory,
They look forward to the time
When their very eyes shall see Him
In his majesty sublime.

There are many, many others
Who to-day are going home,
Worn and wearied, on life's journey,
They are glad no more to roam.
With a sigh of peace they enter
On the rest prepared above,
By the Saviour who redeemed them,
By the Master whom they love.

Do we wonder that the workers
Who were toiling—heart and brain,
Have so often joined the number
Of that white-robed, glorious train?
Ah! it may be they were needed
For a grander, wider sphere,
Than the corner of the vineyard
That they kept for Jesus here.

Oh! what mysteries and murmurs
Will be solved and hushed in heaven;
What adoring, glad thanksgiving
Will to Christ our King be given!
We, who now can see but darkly
All the hidden depths of grace,
Will "At Home" behold them clearly,
In the sunshine of his face.

THE ASHLEY MISSION.

THE Annual Meeting of this Mission at Peel-grove, Bethnal-green, established fourteen years since, was recently held. A substantial tea was provided for the Mothers' Meeting and the members of the men's classes by Miss Dudin Brown. At the subsequent meeting, the Earl of Shaftesbury, president, took the chair. His son, Hon. Lionel Ashley, made a statement with respect to the work of the past year. He said there was great cause for thankfulness to God for the help He had rendered them; prayers had marked every department of the work. He urged all the workers to take courage, and redouble their efforts. If they looked round and saw the increase of infidelity, and how the ranks of sin were being daily augmented, they might feel they were like David with the sling, going out against Goliath, but they were to remember that David's God was their God, and that He would deliver them from the hands of the Philistines.

In the course of his address, the Noble Chairman said: Nothing had struck him so much as to see the persons that God raised up to work for such institutions as these. He went all over London, and wherever he journeyed he found people who were ready to give their time, their hearts, and their means to further objects such as these, and this without any hope of return but the deep internal satisfaction of seeing souls brought to Christ by their instrumentality. His son had alluded to a fact that was very remarkable and very alarming, viz., that the Recorder of Middlesex had stated that a vast number of criminals who came before him were those who had received a good education, many of them in the Board schools. An equally remarkable document had just been presented to him. It was the Report of the Chaplain of Pentonville, who stated that within the last three or four years the number of young persons brought into his prison was very alarming. Many of them had high education, almost all of them had received a fair education, and if things went on in this way they would dismiss the gaol schoolmaster altogether, for the criminals were quite as capable of teaching others as others were of teaching them. This was a proof of the fallacy of the reasoning that education and intellectual enlightenment alone were going to stamp out crime from amidst the community. He was of opinion that where education was given without the spirit of religion being imparted, education was woeful and perilous in many respects. Here they had a sufficient control over a vast number of children, and could bring them up in the fear and love of the Lord, and to respect and obey the law. They could hold the mothers' meetings and tell mothers that to them was confided a trust that was greater than was given to the sovereign of an empire. The father stood for little in the early education of the child; it was the mother who made the first imprints upon the child for good or for evil. Referring to the spread of infidelity, his lordship remarked, many people asked why they took such alarm, since there were greater agencies than ever there were before doing the Lord's work. He considered that that was a sign that greater mischief was going on than before. If they saw a great deal of good being done, they might be sure the devil was ten times more active. The most refined, the most organised, the most compact system of infidelity was now in battle array drawn up against the armies of Christ, furnished with such means as they had never before possessed in man's history. It was this that made one think that they did not make all the opposition they should do. Still, let them rely upon it, that though they did not bring a very great number to their way of thinking, they were producing an atmosphere which many breathed, and which would be instrumental in leading many to Christ. He rejoiced in the foundation of such institutions, and prayed God that they might ever flourish.

This Mission has sustained during the past year severe pecuniary losses, by the death of three of its supporters, Sir Joseph Copley, Mr. Charles Bevan, and Mr. Haldane. Funds are urgently needed to maintain and extend the work. Cast-off clothing, hospital and convalescent letters, will be much valued, and workers are much needed. The Hon. Lady Superintendent is Miss Bontein, 47, Weymouth-street, W.

MILDMAY CONFERENCE HALL.

AN INTERESTING ANNIVERSARY.

THE annual tea meeting of the Men's Night-School at Mildmay took place on Wednesday, March 28. The men assembled for tea at 7.30 p.m., in the lower rooms, where they found a substantial meal provided for them by willing hands. The ladies who have devoted themselves to the work of teaching these men had each her own class at the table allotted for it. It was a pretty picture to see the tables spread with substantial provision, and in some cases a book or card lying in front of the plates of the men. The men themselves were well dressed, and seemed to be as delighted as any day-school with their treat.

After tea, most, if not all the men, had a bunch of flowers placed in their button-holes, and then all marched in order to the large Hall, where certificates and medals were awarded to successful competitors. Immediately in front of the platform, works of art, executed and given by the men, were exhibited; they were to be sold the next day, the proceeds to go to the funds of the Mildmay Missions. These works of art would astonish many who are not acquainted with the character of this night-school.

Mr. BADENOCH read the report, some of the details of which will interest our readers. The school was open during the winter session seventy times. The number of men who attended, 1181. Highest attendance, 516; lowest, 244. The trades represented number 143; 74 were labourers; 316 obtained certificates. The amount of money paid by the men was £30 6s. 6d. Over sixty signed the pledge during the session. Mr. Badenoch believed there had been great blessing in conversions; many young men had taken their stand for Christ, and were now rejoicing in Jesus as their Saviour. Two meetings were mentioned as the chief agents of blessing received: (1) A prayer-meeting of the teachers, held every week, and (2) one held by the men, at which between sixty and seventy met and earnestly prayed for blessing on themselves and upon those who are unsaved. The report of the Examiner showed that out of 2000 written answers to questions on Scripture, only three contained any error of doctrine.

Mr. J. E. MATHESON said that many of the men had progressed beyond A, B, C, to D. He gave them three texts: (1) They were not to be disciples "secretly." (2) "If ye continue in My Word then are ye My disciples indeed." (3) "Herein is My Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be My disciples."

Lord RADSTOCK spoke a few earnest words of encouragement to those who had been brought to Christ during the Session. Salvation, he said, was not becoming serious, not reliance on a system, but a feast, a continuous joy in the Lord. After an appeal to those who were still unsaved to decide for Christ, the meeting closed with praise and prayer.

HOMES for WORKING GIRLS in LONDON.

AT Gordon House, 8, Endsleigh-gardens, N.W., a "praise and prayer-meeting" was recently held in acknowledgment of the wonderful blessing which has attended this movement, and to ask for the continuance of Divine guidance and favour during 1883. A company of some 150 ladies and gentlemen met for "afternoon tea." The arrangements of the house were afterwards inspected. The meeting was presided over by the Hon. and Rev. E. Carr Glyn, vicar of Kensington. After a hymn and prayer, the Honorary Secretary, Mr. Shrimpton, said they had been privileged during 1882 to open two fresh Homes. Gordon House had been open twenty-two months, and in that time had sheltered no fewer than 700 young women.

God had been acknowledging their work from the very commencement. The movement had sprung out of prayer; and the success vouchsafed had been so signal, that before the first house was quite ready they had all the necessary funds to complete the second. The seventh Home was the outcome of a few special donations, that so inspirited the committee, that they were constrained to open it. But even more remarkable was the fact, that upon his return from his summer holidays last September he found another challenge of a promise of £500 towards the eighth home, on condition of two more like sums being contributed. He made the matter a special subject of prayer, and the result was that the friend reconsidered his offer, and undertook to give £500 if a like amount could be raised in two months. They had now that money in the bank, and would be glad to find a suitable house for their eighth house. He had now, he thought, suitable premises in view, and was therefore quite ready to accept a challenge for the ninth. He was sorry to say that last year, for the first time in their history, they closed their books in debt, with a deficit of £400. In faith and prayer they would go forward nothing doubting.

Rev. E. Carr Glyn then delivered an address from the words, "Other foundation can no man lay" (1 Cor. iii. 11). Apologies for absence were read from Lord Shaftesbury and Lord and Lady Aberdeen. The company dispersed with a deepened sense of the Divine working in such byways of philanthropic effort, and under the influence of a more prayerful spirit, fresh from a scene where the results of prayer were so clear and unmistakable.

LETTER FROM MADAGASCAR.

OUR READERS THERE.

DEAR SIR,—I write to thank you for sending me THE CHRISTIAN, and to say how much we all enjoy reading its items of news as to the progress of the Kingdom of God, both at home and abroad. It comes like cold water to our thirsty souls, bringing good news to us from the far-off land we have left, but love; bringing the best of all news—the news of the progress of the Redeemer's kingdom in all parts of the earth—and thus cheering and refreshing our hearts here, who are trying to extend his kingdom in this land. After reading it myself, and lending it to one of our native pastors, I send it south to the Betsiles country, to our missionaries there, from one of whom I had a letter a few weeks ago, in which he says: "Many thanks for THE CHRISTIAN which you have sent from time to time. I like to look through them, and as you requested me to do, I have sent them to the friends here to read. You get a view of Christian work in THE CHRISTIAN which does not come prominently before you in any other paper, and one gets stirred up by reading the records of what others are doing."

So you will see that you not only do me good, but also refresh and help to stir up the souls of a noble band of devoted men and women who are carrying on a great work for God in the south of the island.

THE FRENCH IN MADAGASCAR.

Our work, I am sorry to say, is being much interrupted, and we are all in a state of the greatest anxiety, from the action of the French with regard to Madagascar. We are waiting anxiously for the next mail, fearing it may bring the news that France has declared war on Madagascar; and if it does I fear it is all over with Madagascar, and with the glorious work of God which has been going on here for the last twenty years. It really began with the landing of the first missionaries on the island in 1818; but it was seemingly put a stop to by the long reign of persecution which lasted from 1835 to 1861; but in reality the persecutions only deepened the impressions made and rooted them more firmly than ever. But if this island goes to the French, it means, all going into the hands of the Jesuits, who are at the bottom of all this, and who have been working for it for years, and then we will have the days of persecution back again. The French in Madagascar means Madagascar given up to French morality, the vilest in the world, and to utter Godlessness, and thus to ruin for time and eternity.

Of course they only pretend to want a protectorate over a small part of the north-west coast; but we all know what that means, and we all know very well that if they once get such a footing in one part of the island, they will very soon take it in another. We all remember about Tahiti. But we cannot believe that England will be so insane, even for her own interests, as leave Madagascar to the tender mercies of the French after her friendship for Madagascar extending over sixty years, a friendship unsoiled by a single blot, and after all she has done for the good of the Malagasy. If she does, then England deserves to lose the respect of every civilised nation and every Christian man, and hence we cannot believe she will. We sincerely hope and pray that through the good offices of England the war for which the Malagasy are being compelled to prepare may be prevented.

Our good Queen, who has been very ill lately, and who is still weak, and is kept weak through anxiety about the state of affairs, is spending her days, I am told, and great part of her nights, in weeping and praying to God for her kingdom; pleading with Him, that if she has done wrong to punish her for it, and not her people, by allowing war to devour her subjects and desolate her kingdom. The people have also been praying for months about this affair, always fearing the worst from the way in which the French have been treating them for years, insulting and bullying them all, from the Queen downwards.

What a difference between the poor Malagasy, with their Queen and nobles praying to God, and pleading with Him, to save them from their foreign oppressors, and the representatives of those would-be oppressors, as I saw them the Sabbath I spent at Tamatave, on the coast, on my way from England. There they were, at the French hotel, after being at Mass in the morning, playing at billiards, dice, and cards, drinking, dancing, swearing—a French Sabbath, in fact—and to that it would come here also, where the Sabbath is better kept than in any other city I know in the world.

The old Christians, those who were Christians in the days of darkness and persecution, are to have their monthly prayer-meeting to-morrow, to pray for their native land, and the pastors of the nine large congregations here in the capital have called a prayer-meeting for Thursday afternoon for the same purpose; but there is no building in the island that would contain one-third of those who are sure to be there from all the churches round, as well as from the city congregations. What a contrast to the conduct of the French! At the same time they are doing their utmost to prepare to defend their native land, to defend their hearths and homes, to defend their wives and daughters from being ravished, and themselves from being robbed and murdered. The French are giving out that they are going to the assistance of their allies, the Sakalava against the Hova; but so far is that from the truth, that within the last few days the Queen has had messengers from the Sakalava chiefs to say that they repudiate any and everything of the kind, that they are her faithful subjects, and that if the French land to take a foot of the land, it will only be done by passing over their dead bodies, for they will fight for their native land to the bitter end. But the Lord reigns, and He is able to turn upside down all the plans of the wicked, and to save his people and his cause by his own right hand. "Brethren, pray for us."—With kindest Christian regards, yours sincerely, T. T. MATTHEWS.

DR. LANSDELL ON HIS TRAVELS.

ON Monday, March 12, at Lady Ashburton's, Knightsbridge, the Rev. Henry Lansdell, D.D., F.R.G.S., delivered an account of his recent journey by Tobolsk and the Irtish to Kuldja, and thence through Turkestan and Bokhara to Khiva, and across the Turcoman desert to the Caspian, the Caucasus, and the Euxine. Among those present were Lord Kinnaird, M.P., Sir Emilius Bayley, Bart., Sir William Hill, the Dowager Countess of Gainsborough, and the private secretary of the Duchess of Edinburgh, to whom, with the rest of a well-filled room, were exhibited several objects of interest, including a casque of mail and battle-axe, embroidery and silks from Kokhand; a satin robe, and gorgeous saddle-cloth of crimson velvet, embroidered with gold and silver, presented to the lecturer by the Emir of Bokhara, together with several curiosities from Kuldja, Kashgar, and Khiva.

On the following Saturday Dr. Lansdell delivered, in the large hall, to the scholars and friends of Christ's Hospital, an educational lecture on Siberia, illustrated with magic-lantern views specially prepared from his photographs. The proceeds of both lectures were to be given to charity. We are glad to see that Dr. Lansdell's book, "Through Siberia" (Sampson Low & Co.), has reached a fourth and half-guinea edition. It has been reviewed in about a hundred publications of the English, Irish, Scotch, American, Australian, French, German and Swedish press, and translations have been put forth in German and Swedish, whilst two others are in course of preparation into Danish and Dutch.

THE LATE MR. CROOME.—It is proposed to perpetuate the memory of this man of God, lately deceased, in connection with the endowment of a new parish organisation at Soudley, Forest of Dean. Full particulars may be obtained from Rev. G. A. Allan, Puckington Rectory, Ilminster.

BEULAH.

WE climbed at Easter time a mountain side,
Until the moaning of the distant tide
Faded into the music of the rills
Rippling from all the lonesome, fir-crowned hills;
And through the blackened gorse, in patches wide,
We slowly gained the sloping summit, where
There was life-giving strength in all the air,
And sunset gleaming on the granite bare.
So, Lord, with longing hearts we would aspire
Through all life's winding paths and cleansing fire
To reach the lofty asphodel-decked sod,
Where there is nought but perfect peace in God;
All human passions hushed, and ever still
At rest within the influence of thy will.

JAMES BOWKER.

RICHARD WEAVER IN EDINBURGH.

AT the conclusion of meetings in Brighton-street, E.U. Church, the Rev. J. Macintosh spoke of the vast amount of good which had been done during Mr. Weaver's visit, and made mention of a large number of inquirers whom he had personally spoken to. There would be some thirty cases of professed conversion during Mr. Weaver's week of work in Brighton-street. On Saturday evening a temperance meeting was held, at which Mr. J. H. Waterston, who dated his conversion to Mr. Weaver's visit in 1859, said his faith in him had never swerved. Referring to the subject in hand, he mentioned the fact that there were 850 people engaged in the liquor traffic, all members of various Churches, with the exception of twenty-seven, and it was a disgrace to think that ninety-seven of these were either elders, deacons, or managers, when the Church should have men holding office whose hands were clean. There were no less than 38,000 to 40,000 people who never entered a church in Edinburgh, and between 800 and 900 fallen women who walked the streets.

Mr. Weaver then gave a thrilling address, full of interesting matter. He was in favour of Sir W. Lawson's Local Option Bill, and said that many ministers' hands were tied, and their usefulness crippled, because of men connected with the drink traffic holding office, and who contributed largely to the funds of the Church. He suggested at the close the formation of a Red Ribbon Army against tobacco smoking. It was not a nice sight, he said, to see people lighting their pipes or cigars when emerging from church.

On Sabbath, March 18, two meetings were held in the Drill Hall, when there would be some 2000 in the forenoon, and 7000 people present in the evening, although the weather was very stormy. An after-meeting was held, when many professed to be brought to the Saviour. A large number of students were among the audience, while a choir of forty voices rendered pleasing service.

On Monday Mr. Weaver began his second week of meetings in Richmond-place Free Church (Rev. J. Cochrane's), when the meetings increased nightly in interest. Two Roman Catholic girls sent in a letter of thanksgiving for conversion; a mother came with her daughter to return thanks for like blessing; a daughter wrote, thanking the Lord for making a drunken mother sober. Men, women, and girls have been brought to the Lord in great numbers, while several interesting scenes took place in the vestry—as, for instance, when a daughter threw her arms around her father's neck, and kissed him when he found the Saviour. There have been nearly 100 cases of professed conversion during Mr. Weaver's visit, while many people are bathed in tears every night during the speaker's addresses. Several students and ministers have aided in the work, while the choir has helped greatly. Mr. Weaver conducted his third week of meetings in Rev. C. Wedderburn's church, Cowgate. D. C.

SERMON LANE MISSION.

THE tenth annual meeting of this useful Mission was held on Thursday evening last, at the Athenæum, Highbury New Park. A wealthy and generous neighbourhood, replete with social comfort, had thus the claims of the poor and ignorant brought close to its doors. The Earl of Shaftesbury was to have presided, but the chilly condition of the weather led his Lordship's medical attendant to forbid his venturing out. The chair was ably filled by Mr. W. Hughes Hughes.

The interest of the meeting was fully sustained by the addresses of the Rev. Mr. King, of the Baptist Chapel, Highbury; Mr. Curtis, of the Sunday School Union; and Messrs. Lamont, W. Haig Miller, Nixon, Joseph Surr, and Dr. Kinns, who so effectually pleaded the claims of the Mission that a liberal collection was made. Some of the speakers dwelt strongly on the adaptation of such Missions to keep down discontent and infidelity among the lower classes, and one gentleman suggested that the work at Sermon-lane might be usefully studied by the Congregational body in the event of their carrying out their scheme for the spread of Mission halls in the Metropolis.

The balance-sheet, prepared by Mr. Lewis, treasurer, showed the funds of the Institution to be in a healthy state, owing largely to a generous gift of £100 from Mr. Livingston Learmouth. The interesting report, too, prepared and read by Mr. Cooksey, the Secretary, overflowed with details of well-planned and efficiently-carried out schemes of Christian usefulness, embracing, indeed, almost every temporal and spiritual want of the lower classes, whether young or old. In these days of "Associations of the Black Hand," it was encouraging to hear of the doings of an institution, as it may be termed, of the "White Hand," almost literally a manufactory of happiness!

PROMOTING FEMALE WELFARE.

AT the recent annual meeting of the Society formed for this purpose, Lord Shaftesbury said it was very remarkable to find what a great change had come over the minds of people during the last few years as to the influence of women upon women. He himself had taken the chair within the last two days at meetings of two associations for the sole purpose of taking care of the interests of women. He was very glad to see that the Society would undertake the protection of girls and children in meeting them on their first arrival in town at the railway station and thence pass them safely to their situations or homes. Nobody could over-estimate how necessary it was that protection should be afforded to these poor girls from the injurious influences to which they were subject. It was a common thing for girls of seventeen or eighteen years of age, with no experience of the world, to arrive at a railway station, and there to become the prey of the first unscrupulous person who came forward. Referring to the good work that was being done by the various institutions, the Noble Earl mentioned the case of a little child of three years old, who had been rescued by one of their societies. That child had been taught by its mother to curse and blaspheme in the most fearful way; it was carried about by its mother from one public-house to another, and people who frequented those public-houses actually paid money to hear it use such awful language. That child had been cared for by the Institution, and in a short time forgot its bad habits. Quite recently he saw the child off to Canada, and on arriving there she had been adopted by a Christian family.

It was very right that they should interest people in work of that sort; but what he wished the ladies present to inculcate upon all parents (and especially those of a better class), was the necessity of teaching their children some kind of work which would in the future be useful to them if they came to want employment. He thought it would be well if, as in the case of the old Jews, every child were trained to some manual labour or other, so that if ever they were reduced to want and distress, they would be able to put their hands to something useful. He had thought over this for many years, and he had come to the conclusion that such a state of things was absolutely necessary. Formerly, when the proportion of the sexes was more equal, men were called the bread-winners, but now that there was a large excess of women, as shown by the last return, the woman must herself become the bread-winner.

He was sure that the Society had undertaken a work which would redound to the honour and interest of this country, because if once their women were corrupted there was no help for the nation. He was glad to say that if they went amongst the most fallen of the population, and traced out the worst amongst them, they would find there the greatest desire to improve their condition. At Whitechapel there were evening classes attended by poor girls who were earning 2s. 6d. a week, out of which they had to pay 1s. a week for a share of a bedroom. Nevertheless, as many as eighty, ninety, or a hundred girls came at eight in the evening and stayed till ten, and showed themselves very grateful for the good advice they received. The result of his experience was that if left to itself this class might become a curse and a danger to the nation, but he had no doubt that, under the blessing of Almighty God, through the work of this and similar agencies, the character of this class of the population in London might in the course of less than ten years be entirely changed, and he believed that God would give them the heart to discharge this great duty faithfully.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

MR. AND MRS. MOUNTAIN IN SOUTH AFRICA.

THE Grahamstown Journal, of January 26, reports the farewell meeting held the previous evening in connection with a Blue Ribbon Mission by Mr. and Mrs. Mountain in that place. A number of friends spoke, testifying to the good results that had followed the labours of the evangelists during their brief stay in the town.

BOURNEMOUTH.

A very large and successful tea-meeting in connection with the Bournemouth Gospel Temperance Union was held in the Town Hall, on Easter Monday. This was followed by a public meeting, when interesting addresses were delivered by Major-Gen. Hutchinson, who presided, Admiral Sir James Sulivan, Rev. Neville Sherbrooke, Mr. William Noble, and Dr. H. Nankivell. About seventy new pledges were taken.

MR. F. MURPHY IN SWANSEA.

A very successful Gospel Temperance Mission has just been concluded at Swansea by Mr. Francis Murphy. His earnest words have stirred up the interest in the movement, and not only drawn into our ranks about 1100 new recruits, but restored many backsliders. The weekly Temperance meeting held regularly in the Albert Hall on Saturday night has been attended by above 2000 people, besides another weekly meeting on the same night in the Ragged-school.

Mr. Murphy's genial manner and his touching appeals produced a wonderful impression upon young and old. Going in and out amongst the people, I can testify to the wonderful change in many homes and hearts. I only wish we could persuade brethren in the ministry, one and all, heartily to join this movement. It is a power, and will be still more a power in the country; Christian ministers who stand aloof are losing a wonderful vantage ground.

S. C. Morgan, D.D.
Vicar of Swansea.

SHREWSBURY.

Mr. T. E. Murphy, who conducted a Blue Ribbon Mission in Shrewsbury some two months ago, with manifest tokens of God's blessing, is amongst us again, to revive the work and to cheer and encourage those who, with God's help, resolved on the occasion of his last visit to be sober and righteous and godly for the remainder of their lives. Few who were present will forget the warm enthusiastic welcome he received, when once again his kind, loving face appeared on the platform.

Mr. Murphy himself is so bright, earnest, and eloquent that it is impossible not to catch the infection. His tact is marvellous, as exhibited in his management of a poor half-drunken man, who made a slight disturbance at this opening meeting. With the greatest good humour Mr. Murphy invited the disturber to come on to the platform, if he wished to make a speech. To the astonishment of all present, a poor, ragged, half-drunken man advanced from the farther end of the room, till he reached the platform. All gazed in excitement, wondering what would be the end of this strange scene. Mr. Murphy advanced to meet the poor man, and, taking him kindly by the hand, led him up the steps on to the platform, where he quietly asked him if he would like to become a sober man. The poor man answered in the affirmative. "Then," said Mr. Murphy, "to-night you shall have a chance." Turning to the audience, in a voice of solemn emotion, which instantly quelled the rising merriment, he said: "My friends, here is a man who says he would like to become a sober man. To-night he shall have a chance. We want no more eloquent argument in favour of the Blue Ribbon movement than this poor man." He bade the man be seated on the platform, between two gentlemen, where he remained during the rest of the evening, subdued and silent, and evidently sobered by Mr. Murphy's manner. At the close of the meeting he signed the pledge, and had the blue ribbon pinned on his ragged coat; and he joined the choir in singing hymns while others signed the pledge.

We pray that God's blessing may rest on the work our brother is now carrying on in our midst, and trust this Mission may prove even more successful, under God's blessing, than the last one, when over 2000 signed the pledge. A. O.

MR. T. E. MURPHY IN LANCASTER.

This earnest worker has closed his third Mission in this good old town, and has given his message with the same winsome power and pathos which characterised his first efforts among us. At the opening meeting it was most delightful to look over the great sea of upturned faces, and notice here and there, as we did, some who were persuaded by the words of his mouth when here before to sign the pledge, knowing as we do that ever since then they have been walking in liberty.

I am glad to say that the short Mission has resulted in adding to our roll, I think, over 350 new names. And when we think of results we ought to take into account the indirect as well as the direct and tabulated results. There are many almost persuaded, and we are hopeful that soon they will be altogether, whilst there are not a few who have become "secret disciples" of total abstinence, having banished from their tables the intoxicating glass. On this occasion, as formerly, Mr. Murphy has been supported by a large staff of workers.

The last meeting certainly was the best, and I think that so far as Mr. Murphy himself was concerned he gave us also of his best. No address which he has ever delivered in our midst was more thrillingly powerful. His exposition of the principle of self-denial, lighted up as it was with aptest illustrations, and his closing words of appeal, will not soon be forgotten.

Mrs. Harris, wife of the ex-Mayor, was on the platform and publicly signed the pledge, amidst a scene of great enthusiasm. Her wide influence will no doubt be most helpful to the cause. Mr. Harris, also, a large employer of labour, supported Mr. Murphy on the platform, as he supported him before, and takes a most lively interest in the work. Miss Dawson of Aldcliffe Hall, who was the first to invite the Messrs. Murphy to Lancaster, and who for years has laboured indefatigably in Temperance and Gospel work, spoke on this occasion such words as must have gone home to many a heart. Altogether it was such a meeting as will live in grateful hearts for many days to come.

At the request of some earnest workers in our cause Mr. Murphy visited one day, at noon, the village of Galgate, the owners of the mill there giving half an hour beyond the usual time, so that their employés might have the privilege of hearing him. For many weeks a good work has been going forward in this village, which at first presented a very stiff soil on which to operate. But now all is changed. In a letter received from a friend there since Mr. Murphy's meeting, my correspondent says, "To-day no one says 'it is a disgrace to wear a blue ribbon,' or 'the blue ribbon is nothing but a joke.'" The people of Galgate, like the people here and all around us, are being moved for good, and we are thankful to God and ever will be, that he sent among us the Messrs. Murphy. May He bless them wherever they are called to labour.

Adam Scott,
Congregational Minister.

WOOD GREEN, N.

Mr. Francis Murphy has been among us in Wood-green, and has done a noble work. Our northern suburb is among the pleasantest spots in the vicinity of the metropolis. Built on the undulating slopes at the foot of Muswell-hill, it might have presented attractions not easily equalled were it not for the drink curse. Palatial edifices have been erected at the corners of all our principal thoroughfares for the sale of intoxicating liquors; as the result, many may be surprised to be told that in some districts the squalor and vice are such as you would hardly expect to find out of Whitechapel or the purlieus of Drury-lane.

Some earnest men in the different Churches began to think that something should be done, and done at once, to stop the evil. But it is chiefly owing to Mr. T. B. Smithies, editor of The British Workman, that we are now able to report so favourably. It will be a grief to many of your readers to learn that a brother so well beloved and widely honoured, who has not enjoyed good health for some time, is now very ill indeed. May God spare him. We need such men. Although prostrated, in great pain and weakness, he is still eager to be at his Master's work, and it is his genial catholic spirit diffusing itself into those around him which more than anything else has brought about the happy union of the Churches on the present occasion and supplied the stimulus for a united effort.

From the day that Mr. Murphy came among us, a feeling of interest and a spirit of great hopefulness were manifested. We were unable to secure any hall that could be regarded as common ground, and consequently the meetings were held in the various places of worship in the locality—Wesleyan, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist. Night after night the church which was the scene of operations was crowded to excess by eager listeners, who were swayed from tears to laughter under the eloquence of the chief speaker. His pathetic stories of real life, and his thrilling appeals, will not easily be forgotten by those who heard, and in many instances impressions have been made which we believe will never be effaced. His son, Mr. T. E. Murphy, was an efficient helper during the first days of the Mission.

Although the population of the district is limited, more than 500 fresh pledges have been taken, and a considerably larger number of blue ribbons given away. Not a few for whom some of us were beginning to tremble have put on the little badge, and are not ashamed of it. One poor fellow, who had gone sadly astray himself, before the week was out was among the most earnest in bringing others to the pledge tables. We desire to give God praise for sending his servant among us. Wood-green has seen no such work before. It is gratifying at the same time to think that the work has been accomplished without opposition. Mr. Murphy is not the man who will provoke bitterness and open hostility even among those who are most opposed to his principles. He is a dangerous antagonist, for he has a way of turning round and outwitting you with his love. Now that he has left, it is the feeling in every heart that the motto on his pledge-card is, indeed, the motto of Francis Murphy himself: "With charity to all and with malice to none."—Yours very sincerely,

Duncan Macrae, Hon. Sec.,
Presbyterian Minister.

At the Gospel Temperance Mission now being conducted in Manchester by Mr. Francis Murphy, pledge takers have the option of donning either the ordinary ribbon, signifying total abstinence from alcoholic liquors, or a ribbon with a white line running up the centre of the blue, to denote, in addition, abstinence from (or, in the case of females, opposition to) the use of tobacco and all other narcotics.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

DR. SOMERVILLE IN NATAL.

NEWS of an interesting character reaches us from Natal. Dr. Somerville has had good meetings, and the ministers have rallied round him.

Y.W.C.A. CENTRAL INSTITUTE.

Mr. Shuldham Henry has been holding meetings at the Central Institute with much blessing. Mr. Henry intends visiting the institute again shortly.

A GERMAN SALVATION ARMY.

A religious movement bearing some resemblance to that of the Salvation Army has begun at Hamburg. Three orthodox clergymen invite people, especially workmen, to meetings by placards with the inscription "Followers of Christ assemble, and take up his cross." The meetings are well attended by men and women of the lower classes. Free discussion is allowed.

ALDERSHOT.

Mr. and Miss Parker have just held a ten days' Mission at Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Institute. Most of the meetings were crowded, and at every one inquirers were personally spoken with, a number of whom fully decided for Christ. It was a pleasant sight to see the men, in their bright uniforms, crowding to hear the old, old story, in song and speech. Prayer is requested for their comrades in Egypt and India, who are exposed to so many temptations. Mr. and Miss Parker will conduct a Mission at Fulham, from April 1 to 10.

WESTPHALIA.

Recent notices in some of the German secular papers give glowing accounts of the services conducted in various Westphalian towns by Dr. Ziemann. His earnest and rousing addresses are heard with the greatest avidity, and produce a deep impression. The services are largely attended, many of the hearers being Catholics and Jews. One journal says that in Dortmund the theatre was deserted when Dr. Ziemann spoke, and when it was known in Witten that he had arrived, the stage company from Dortmund, who were to perform there, withdrew all their announcements.

INVERNESS, N.B.

A successful series of meetings, extending to four weeks, has just been concluded here. Mr. Richard Hill was with us for three weeks and gave two addresses each day. Blessing, with the word preached, was given from the beginning of the meetings, and precious souls were translated into the Kingdom each evening. The good received by believers was great, and we are looking forward to another visit from Mr. Hill soon. Will your readers remember the north of Scotland in prayer—that everywhere doors may be opened for holding such meetings? R. L.

CHILDREN'S MISSION.

A successful ten days' Mission at Dorking, conducted by Mr. G. Banaster, was brought to a close on Wednesday, March 21. Good attendance and interest was sustained throughout. The simple Gospel truth, forcibly illustrated and most earnestly applied, has borne much fruit in the hearts of the children and young people. One special feature in this Mission was the drawing-room meetings, the last of which was attended by over sixty boys and girls, who listened with marked attention whilst Mr. Banaster lovingly and earnestly put before them the question, "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?" (Matt. xxvii. 22). Many fresh members were added to the Dorking branch of the Scripture Union which now numbers 470.

RADCLIFFE-ON-TRENT.

Rev. W. Haslam has just concluded a Mission in this parish. It has been a time of great blessing. Many persons have come from long distances to hear Mr. Haslam, who knew him through his books, and they have been blessed. Few who have heard our revered friend have remained cold and dead. His words were with the power of the Holy Ghost, and have stirred many hearts.

Mrs. Haslam held meetings for women every afternoon, which were crowded with earnest and attentive listeners. Her sweet words of comfort and faithful counsel fell like rain on the thirsty soil. Even men came from the surrounding villages, and entreated to be allowed to hear her. "She has been a succourer to many."

John Cullen, Vicar.

NORTH DEVON AND CORNWALL.

Miss Naomi Waterman has been labouring at Kilkhampton, Hartland, and surrounding villages. The interest felt by the people in the Gospel services was so great, that for upwards of seventeen weeks it was difficult to provide adequate accommodation for the eager crowds who came to hear. In the little fishing village of Clovelly a very gracious revival has taken place. Some of the most hardened and depraved among the fishermen have yielded themselves to the Saviour, and are now witnessing for their Master among their companions.

On March 10, Miss Waterman proceeded to Tiverton. Here, also, God has blessed the word spoken and souls have been saved. She is engaged in that neighbourhood till about April 28. Ministers and friends wishing to communicate with her may address, care of Rev. E. Turner, St. Andrew-street, Tiverton, Devon.

MR. HENRY THORNE IN LONDONDERRY.

Mr. Thorne has completed a nine days' Mission here in connection with our Y.M.C.A. Many of the friends had been long anxious to secure him for a series of services in the "maiden city," but owing to the multiplicity of his engagements, he could not see his way to pay us a visit till the 10th inst.

During the Mission Mr. Thorne conducted three meetings daily—a noon prayer-meeting, an afternoon Bible-reading, and the evening evangelistic service. The attendance at the various meetings was good, and we are thankful to say much blessing has resulted. Every night, except one, some professed to apprehend the way of salvation, while the Lord's children have been stirred up and refreshed. The local ministers joined cordially in the work, some of them rendering very material help in the after-meetings for inquirers. Considering the direct and indirect bearing of the Mission on the work of our Association, we can truly say the work of the Lord's servant among us has not been in vain.

W. McC.

Mr. H. M. Barnett informs us that he has lately held Gospel services at various places in Norfolk and Suffolk; the audiences have been large and appreciative.

Rev. W. H. Aitken, April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

Mr. T. E. Murphy, April 8 to 22, Belfast; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.

Mr. Francis Murphy, April 1 to 15, Manchester; April 22 to May 22, chief towns of Norfolk; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.

The office of the Children's Special Service Mission is now removed to 48, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Mr. Henry Thorne, April 5, Derby; April 6, London; April 7 to 9, Margate; April 10, Ramsgate; April 13 to 15, Lincoln; April 18, Bury; April 21 to 30, Macclesfield.

Rev. W. Haslam at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, beginning Saturday, April 7.

THE LORD'S APPEARING.—Copies of the circular of invitation from the Melbourne Prayer Union that appeared in our last issue, may be obtained from Rev. C. Melville Pym, Cherry Burton, Hull. Mr. Pym will also be glad to arrange with Christian friends for the formation throughout the country of similar Unions.

Notices of Books, &c.

Chart and Compass. Vol. for 1882. S. W. Partridge & Co. 5s. Edited by Rev. E. W. Matthews, Secretary of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, and neatly bound in bright blue cloth, this is in all respects a sailor's book, possessing a healthy Christian tone, as one might expect to find from its object, which is "to help seamen to sail life's ocean with Christ." It is made up of good readable articles, narratives, Mission reports, and poetry, occasionally illustrated with woodcuts, all having more or less the flavour of the breezy, briny deep. For floating libraries, presents to sailor friends, and amongst our numerous maritime population, it ought to be a great favourite and command a good circulation, both in the volumes and in the monthly parts, in which latter form it is regularly issued.

Footsteps of Truth. Edited by C. R. Hurditch. J. F. Shew & Co. 3d. monthly. The April number of this excellent magazine is before us. It contains many well-selected articles. The second paper on "Abraham, the Man of Faith," by Dr. McKilliam, treats upon God manifesting Himself to Abraham by means of his Word; it was after obedience thereto that Jehovah appeared to him. We are glad to find the writer of this article urging with persistence the necessity of keeping to the Word of God for both life, walk, and blessing. Mrs. George Müller's account of the life and labours of her husband, given at a prayer-meeting in New York, is full of interest, and puts in a concise way his early days, conversion, and subsequent career. A continued article by Professor Gosse, under the heading of "The River Jordan," is interesting geographically as well as spiritually. The crossing of Jordan is dwelt upon in a way that commands attention to the spiritual significance of the passage. We can only express our earnest hope that the readers of these, and the other articles of no less value, may be profited thereby.

"Alexander Duff, D.D." By Thomas Smith, D.D. 2s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. Another volume of the "Men Worth Remembering" series, although, as the author says, differing from those which have preceded it, inasmuch as while they dealt with the lives of men who have passed away from the sphere of living memory, this deals with a life personally known to many who are still with us. It differs from them also in that it has neither preface nor table of contents, which is we think a cause for regret, although in all other particulars the book commends itself to us as well worthy to stand beside its predecessors. Dr. Duff must ever rank high in the annals of missionary lore. No man of modern times has excited a more powerful influence in connection with the work of evangelising the world, or shown himself more fully imbued with the spirit of Christ in the service he rendered. He must be regarded as the Father of Scottish Missions. It was mainly owing to his influence that the General Assembly was brought to adopt foreign Mission work as a part of its policy in the service and cause of Christ. His biographer says: "Dr. Duff's advocacy of the cause of Missions was more powerful than any advocacy of the same cause that has ever been conducted in any Church since the Reformation." This, to some readers, remembering the still earlier labours of Dr. Carey, and some other devoted pioneers in the field, may seem too much to assert, but, certainly, the work of Dr. Duff was unique in its methods, and in many respects, in the success which attended it. His association with educational operations in India renders his work of peculiar interest and importance, and we commend the thoughtful reading of this volume to our readers as calculated to be of great service in directing their judgment on some very pressing points of missionary work in the present day.

New Periodicals.—The Battle Axe, published by Marshall Bros., is the organ of the Church Army, and contains copious news of the doings of that body in different parts of the country. The Christian Pioneer Army and War Chronicle emanates from Hoxton, and records the doings of a Mission in that part of the metropolis. The Marylebone Christian Witness, published by Mr. J. E. Hawkins, is a local magazine, containing articles by writers who have some connection with the Lord's work in the district. Joyful News, edited by our energetic and witty friend, Rev. Thomas Champness, contains evangelistic intelligence, and articles contributed by workers attached to the Wesleyan Communion. We have also received the first No. of The United Clerks' Journal, 116, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C. It proposes to represent the interests of clerks from a business point of view.

Letters to the Editor.

VICIOUS LEGISLATION.

Sir,—Mr. Stansfeld has, at last, obtained a day for his motion on the (so-called) Contagious Diseases Acts—Friday, April 20. A very great impression was made upon the Members of the House of Commons by the flood of petitions and letters which accompanied Mr. Hopwood's motion of February 27, and which were the result, to a great extent, of the Christian Convention in London of January 24 and 25. It is of the utmost importance that the impression then made should not be lost or lessened, but rather greatly deepened by a repetition of the petitioning and correspondence with members who have not unequivocally expressed themselves in favour of repeal.

A vigorous effort made now may save years of labour on a painful and, in some respects, revolting subject. It is not improbable, looking at the congested character of the business before the House of Commons, that this opportunity of bringing the matter before the House may be the last and only one during the present session. Those who desire to work should put themselves in communication with their local organisations, or with the National Association, 2, Westminster-chambers, London, S.W.

Benjamin Scott,
Hon. Sec. City of London Committee.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Dear Sir,—Mr. Booth, in his letter in The Christian of March 22, explanatory of his Book of Orders and Regulations, has omitted any explanation of the following order found in it:—

"The C. O. must always remember that everything done should be impressive, especially at the commencement of an attack like this. A large company of soldiers will itself be impressive, no matter how the men conduct themselves. They can shout and laugh, and display the most perfect freedom. But two or three will not be able to produce a deep impression without far more careful conduct. They must either make a very great show of energetic zeal, or else profound solemnity and intense conviction."

It is much to be desired that Mr. Booth should satisfy your readers that in this instruction to those whom he calls his "soldiers" dissimulation is not taught.

Mr. Booth is mistaken in saying that a "bitter spirit" is manifested by Christian people towards him at "each fresh step taken to extend the kingdom of our blessed Lord." Such teaching as that which is quoted above causes great pain to those who regard "simplicity and godly sincerity" as prominent features in the character and doctrine of those who speak in Christ's name. Mr. Booth cannot reasonably expect to be placed outside the test. "Try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."—Yours truly, Walter Brown.

CLEANSING BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

Dear Sir,—I read with considerable interest the letters which appeared in The Christian of March 29, on the interpretation of 1 John i. 7. I am thankful to see this most important subject reopened. The point of the controversy seems to me to be this. We are all agreed that the blood of Jesus Christ is the means of our justification before God through faith; but has the blood of Christ power to sanctify our hearts, when applied by the Holy Ghost through faith? I believe it has. I trust I may also add, I am living in the conscious experience that it does.

To arrive at the mind of the Spirit on this subject, it is important to notice the use of the verb καθαρίζω (katharizo), which is translated "cleanseth," in 1 John i. 7 (also in Matt. viii. 3, x. 8, xi. 5, xxiii. 26; Mark i. 42; Luke iv. 27, vii. 22, xvii. 14 and 17; Acts x. 15, xi. 9; 2 Cor. vii. 1; Eph. v. 26; Jas. iv. 8; 1 John i. 9). From a consideration of these texts, it will be seen that it is frequently used of the cleansing of the leper. I need not say that leprosy was no skin disease; but, like sin, had its roots deep in a man's inner being. In Lev. xiv. 7, the Hebrew טָהֵר (taher) is rendered, as often elsewhere, by the verb καθαρίζω in the LXX. By means of the application of the blood of atonement, the leper was cleansed. Surely here we are to view the blood of Christ in its healing efficacy, as reaching the roots of our spiritual leprosy. In other words, we see, as in 1 John i. 7, the blood of Jesus in its sanctifying power when the Spirit applies it through faith.

This faith is regarded, not so much as an act, or as a succession of acts, but as a habit of life. Walking by faith, we walk in the light and experience of the continual cleansing efficacy of the precious blood of Christ.

This view of the power of Christ's blood to keep us cleansed was the secret of the heavenly life of the late Miss F. R. Havergal. She says: "First, I was shown 'that the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin,' and then it was made plain to me that He who had thus cleansed had power to keep me clean; so I just utterly yielded myself to Him, and utterly trusted Him to keep me."

The view expressed by the Rev. E. H. Hopkins, as to the sanctifying power of Christ's blood, is that of the late Dean Alford. He says: "In verse 9, 'to cleanse us from all unrighteousness' is plainly distinguished from 'to forgive us our sins'—distinguished as a further process; as, in a word, sanctification, distinct from justification." "The blood of Jesus purifies us day by day. Observe, not the application of that blood; for we are speaking of a state of faith and holiness, in which that blood is continually applied: the walking in the light is, in fact, the application; is that which, as a subjective conditional element, makes that blood of Christ's cross to be to us a means of purifying from all sin." Lange says: "The Apostle does not advert here to justification, regeneration, conversion, the actus judicalis or forensis concerning the sinner, but to sanctification." Ebrard writes: "In later times, the more correct apprehension of καθαρίζειν, as meaning the sanctifying, purifying power of the blood of Christ, has been very generally adopted. (See Lücke, Neander, Olshausen, Düsterdieck.)" He then explains verse 9 as Alford does. "Now," he adds, "as the analogy of faith forbids our referring the cleansing (καθαρισμός), of which walking in the light is a condition, to the forgiveness of sins, so the chain of thought in the context constrains us to refer it to the sanctifying power of God. . . . Thus καθαρισμός (cleansing) indicates the purifying, sanctifying energy of God living within him; and with this also agree the words ἀπὸ πάσης ἁμαρτίας. From all and every kind of sin he is cleansed of God, who is light, and who liveth and worketh in him. . . . By "the blood of Jesus Christ" we must understand the real blood of Jesus poured out upon the Cross. . . . . The blood of Christ is most certainly equivalent to his death." Lücke writes, "St. John here connects with it ("the blood of Christ") the power of purifying from sin." Barnes writes, "provision" is here made "for cleansing the soul from sin, and making it like God."

Since I have apprehended the sanctifying efficacy of Christ's blood, I have obtained a fuller insight into the meaning of John vi. As by faith we eat Christ's flesh and drink His blood, symbolically in the Lord's Supper, "our sinful bodies are made clean by His body, and our souls washed by His most precious blood, and we dwell in Him, and He in us" (see Communion Service of Church of England). The Lord "wash us thoroughly from our wickedness, and cleanse (LXX. καθαρίζω) us from our sin."—I am, yours in Christ Jesus,

H. C. Sturdy,
Vicar of St. Paul's, Dorking.
